There is a motto hanging over a garden gate at Berchtesgaden placed there by Hitler, Mr. Chatreau said, which reads: "My honor abides in good faith." He believed it was placed there by the German Fuehrer in deep sincerity, but his interpretation of faith is vastly different to that of other nations. He wrote his faith while he was in prison and later began to express it in the following principles: extermination of the Jews; every form of treason both inside the church and out, to be exterminated; Communism and other elements he considered effeminate in the nation, to be done away with.

Expected to Dominate World

Hitler's faith was one he expected would dominate the world, in that he believed that democracy made for disunity and disorganization. That had to go, Communism was an unworkable ideal and must go. The church, Hitler claimed, was obstructive the development of the new Germany and it must go, yet he was highly humbled if anyone inferred he was not a Christian.

He determined to unite all classes under one compelling motive for one sole aim, to resurrect the nation to dominate the earth. He had barriers to overcome but he found one confronting him that was more powerful than democracy, deeper than Communism and that was the church. Yet Hitler knew, Mr. Chatreau pointed out, that he was taking a code of ethics from a deeply religious people, but he decided to run the gauntlet and face defeat.

"He founded a creed to supercede the Sermon on the Mount," declared the speaker, "for he knew if he was to succeed, he must find something to supercede it and so was born National Socialism, a creed, Hitler declared, to be one of Christianity. He knew that the only way to succeed was to harness the powers of the church to his vast political machine."

It is the determination that the state shall rule the church, Protestants were placed under the direct control of the state and Roman Catholic officials were disconnected from the Vatican and moulded into a new German Catholic Church.

Hitler insists that he wants no treachery to any faith as long as there is no treachery to the state, but what he calls treachery is obedience to the transcendence of the spirit.

Too Much Stock in Promises

"Unfortunately," Mr. Chatreau continued, "the Christian nations, placed too much stock in Hitler's promises. On his promises Protestants and Catholics welcomed the new order. There was the threat of Communism, which Hitler was the wreckage caused by internal disunity."

"These promises," the speaker declared, "deceived the Protestant and Catholic alike that as long as they played their own business, the state would stay off the church. Nothing was further.

"Nasism is a faith as well as a program," he said, "it has its own religious and constraining when one has been inoculated with it, as Christianity. Hitler now asserts he has never attacked the church, only its treachery and its purging of its greatest fault, that it is not sufficiently Christian.

"In his new religious order," Mr. Chatreau said, "the German fuehrer claims himself to be the new Holy Ghost. The new Jesus Christ is Herr Hitler himself."

New Method of Attack

He devised a new method of attack. The first, levelled at the Roman Catholic Church, demanded that it deny the supremacy of its spiritual head, the Pope. Its religious educational system was strangled. Hitler made a deliberate absence after signing the concordat by discrediting the clergy and accusating a mass of so-called evidence, which resulted in fines and imprisonment to the members. For these very crimes other people had paid the penalty demanded by the state law.

A united Lutheran Church formed by Hitler was the next basis of attack upon the Protestants. Hitler appointed his own bishops in an effort to close the mouth of the Church and put an end to the natural interpretation of the Word of God.

But in 1936 the Church rebelled when a pastah priest answered from his pulpit three questions concerning the new order, submitted by his parishioners. The Bishop was called in and he defended his priest by telling the State that he had ordered the questions which he had been asked him by his priests, to be answered from the pulpits of the district.

Undermost Revival

The Church underwent a revival. She was attacked. Persecution, and underwent persecution, fines and imprisonment. In 1939, after his rise to power, Hitler tore up the concordat that was supposed to settle forever all differences between the church and the state.

"Within a few months," Mr. Chatreau told the clubmen, "every single one of the articles contained in the concordat had been broken. Priests were again subjected to persecution. Hitler then created a group of high ranking churchmen and years he would not stand in the way of either the Roman Catholic or the Protestant Churches. Yet within four days, a religious principal was assassinated near his own home. Gradually the atrocity stories were taken out of the church. The concordat was broken. Open threats, terrorism and force he played upon the laymen. By plebiscites in which the people were forced to vote his way, he gradually got his ends."

"Hitler claimed he had not broken his word in any way, because the people had voted for the change themselves," the speaker said.

Need Presence of God

"We need the presence of God in our hearts if we are to have the fortitude and the courage to maintain our grip on the things we hold dear," he said, "and to know how subtle the propaganda of the enemy. There is no way to know what he will do if he can rob us of these things."

"It is a miracle," Mr. Chatreau said in conclusion, "if one can call it a miracle that the State should gain control of the Protestant and Catholic Churches within a nation. It is no human action, for the forces of evil are at work. It is our task to press the battle to a complete finish so we can preserve for ourselves and our children those institutions so dear to us."

The speaker was introduced by Secretary "Pink" Pinkston, and club appreciation expressed by Rotarian H. A. Ackerman. President Percy McGuire was in the chair, while Phil Huddleston, pinchhitting for Leo Riggs, presided at the piano.

DONNELLY SAYS WESTERN FARMERS TO GET 95 CENTS

Bases His Estimate on Price From Helps to be Given by Government

BY FRANK FLAHERTY
Canadian Press Staff Writer.

Ottawa, June 9 (CP)—Dr. Thomas Donnelly (Lib. Wood Mountain) told the House of Commons last night he estimates the average western farmer will get the equivalent of 95 cents a bushel for his wheat this year.

He said he arrived at his figure which is on the basis of No. 1 northern wheat at Fort William, by taking into account the guaranteed minimum price of 70 cents a bushel and various other forms of government assistance.

The general wheat debate which started Friday night on estimates for the Department of Trade and Commerce was resumed yesterday after the House approved of a report of the special committee on the Defence of Canada Regulations recommending changes in procedure for delaying with appeals by internees.

Dr. Donnelly said the $35,000,000 guaranteed by parliament for acreage grants to farmers who reduce wheat production worked out at about 15 cents a bushel on the 230,000,000 bushels which farmers may deliver this year under the restricted delivery plan.

Assistance Act Helps

In addition, he said, payments under the Prairie Farm Assistance Act to farmers with crop failures worked out at about five cents a bushel on the 283,000,000 bushels, and on the basis of prospects the participation certificates given farmers on wheat delivered at the minimum price should be worth 10 cents a bushel.

While western farmers were being assisted by these benefits, Dr. Donnelly contended, the elevator companies and the grain trade should do the same. Elevator storage charges reduced from 1-30 to 1-45 of a cent a day per bushel last year were still too high and should be reduced to one-cent-a-bushel selling charge on wheat "is about what it should be," he said.

Hansen Not Satisfied

The debate, in part, centred on a recent shipment of wheat from Vancouver to North China, with Trade Minister MacKinnon asserting it was not up to the public to disclose all the considerations which influenced the government in authorizing the shipment.

Conservative House Leader Hanson said the explanation did not satisfy him.

"The reason is apparent — the best was put on by Tokyo," he said. "Make no mistake about it, Japan is getting ready to withdraw from and the government yielded."

"That is certainly not my information," Mr. MacKinnon replied. "I think the minister will find that that is so," Mr. Hanson insisted.

Replying to charges made last Friday by E. E. Perley (Con. Qu'Appelle) that certain grain exchange transactions in which the Canadian Wheat Board was concerned would not stand investigation, Mr. MacKinnon made a lengthy statement on the technical procedure of the board's operations. He said the Wheat Board had no guaranteed account with brokers.

Asks for Specific Instance

"If he (Mr. Perley) could give one specific instance or make one definite charge as to why the operations of the Wheat Board will not bear the light of day, I would be glad to recommend that he be given a chance to substantiate his statements," said Mr. MacKinnon.

"From his remarks last Friday it seems to me he was just making general statements without any precise knowledge of the grain business."

Mr. MacKinnon protested against references Mr. Perley made to the racial characteristics of the Continental Range of Level Grain companies.

To the honorable member's rather "I wish to register my objection offensive references to the Jewish people and Jewish firms," the minister said.

"Now, is that necessary?" Mr. Hanson said.

"Especially at this very serious time," the minister added.

"A Canadian firm—the Jews, eh?" Mr. Hanson replied. "That is the anti-Semitic bill."

"A champion of mankind," said Mr. MacKinnon sarcastically.

Nothing Unusual

The minister said there was nothing unusual in the transfer of charges contracts, to one of the specialty of grain shippers in making delivery against contracts.—at Port William—to the Lake Shippers. He insisted on deliveries it would be engineering a corner which would defeat the purpose of encouraging shipments and full use of eastern storage facilities.

Debate on the Defence of Canada Regulations turned mainly on the recommendation of the committee that there be instead of one comprise the advisory committees which report to the Minister of Justice on protests by interned persons against their detention.

Justice Minister Lapointe told the House that this and other recommendations of the committee which reviewed the regulations in secret sessions extending over the past few months, would be adopted.

No Punishment for Crime

Several members including A. J. Benz (Con. Hamilton City) said they wanted the findings of advisory committees made binding on the minister but others including Mr. Hanson believed responsibility should rest with the minister. Some suggested internees should have a trial before being detained.

Mr. Lapointe said internment was not a form of punishment or punishment for a crime. It was a measure taken for the safety of the state and the procedure of a trial was inappropriate.

"I do not think it would be advisable to place upon a Judge the responsibility of deciding whether or not a man who might be dangerous to the safety of the state during a war should be interned", said the minister.

He said the question of accepting reports of advisory committees caused him some worry but he was convinced that if he released a man after the advisory committee had decided that when the Royal Canadian Mounted Police reported that he was a most dangerous and some sabotage was threatened by the man the public would hold the minister and the government responsible.

Mr. Lapointe, acting C.C.F. House leader, said the changes proposed by Mr. Ilsley would constitute a liberalizing effect but that he still thought there was room for the same time, he said Communist and Nazi agents were at work in Canada and vigilance was necessary.

AN ACTIVE and eventful day with all energies bent in the direction of solidifying the affairs and putting them on a stable and enduring basis, should be the augury based on the prevalent planetary aspects. There may be some unexpected setbacks or opposition, with minor irritations, but in encounter, let the mind will be shrewd, cold and calculating, equipped to dispose of these and as well the assistance of kindess and helpful friends may be counted on. Travel may give concern and the danger factor from fire and misrepresentation, especially in connection with papers.

Those whose birthday it is may find heightened energies concentrated upon practical pursuits, both old and new, on permanent and stable basis. Matters of investment or property may come to life under this concentrated attack as be because of a subtle, shrewd, and quickened mentality sustained by dependable intuitions and instincts. There may be some unforeseen opposition, with want of cooperation from certain expected sources. These however, are balanced by very tangible aid and endorsement from worthwhile friends, elders or superiors.

A child born on this day will be energetic, industrious, progressive and stable, and possess a shrewd, subtle and calculating mind.

ALLIES LAUNCH DRIVE FOR PALMYRA AIR BASE

Despite Stiffening Resistance Allies Nearing Damascus

London Expects Ancient Syrian Capital Will be in Hands of Allies Before Nightfall

PALMYRA IMPORTANT

London, June 11 (CP).—The Allied drive into Syria has reached the outskirts of Damascus, an authoritative British source said today, and that ancient city of the invaded French mandate is expected to be in British hands by nightfall.

Giving detail to the Middle East general headquarters' bare report of "satisfactory progress", this source said the British-Free French forces have reached Kiswe, ten miles south of Damascus and within easy sight of its minarets."

French resistance admittedly was stiffening and was expected at Vichy said the Allies not only were stopped along the whole Syria-Lebanon front but even successfully counter-attacked in the thrust toward Damascus.

French Reading Strength

Military dispatches from Damascus said the French and their native and Arabian troops were residing strongly against British columns moving along the seaboard toward Beirut, toward Damascus by way of Deraa and Kuneitra and toward Bayak, north of Damascus, by way of Ekhsa Plain.

British units thrughout of Merdjayoun, just over the Palestine Border in the Hula Valley area, now flooding, 55 miles southeast of Damascus in the Jebel Ed Druz, has been wrested from Vichy forces, British advices said.

It still is an open question, however, whether the French will make more than a formal gesture of defence.

Allies' Speed Cut.

Dynamited roads and artillery fire more than a pitched stand at any place have cut the Allies' speed and vacated garrisons along the line of the advance have indicated that the defence is more a token than a reality.

The Allies, stressing that they are marching in as friends rather than as foe, are avowing resolution in the use of their superior strength. They have built anti-German propaganda well along the Levant's defenders on their side and already exiled groups are reported to have joined arms with the Allies.

Although the British apparently control the whole area south of the river, they cannot be certain of the French resistance still exist there.

British troops have put up small forces ashore along the road ahead of the advancing Allied column to fight off the enemy which have replaced land mines and blown up bridges.

"Stiff opposition", however, was reported encountered by British forces landed on the Lebanon coast north of Tyre under the guns of warships of the Royal Navy.

Fighting also was reported at Merdjayoun, 15 miles from Marjayun, where British forces advanced from the northern tip of Palestine.

Sources here said several hundred prisoners have been taken on that fronts, but it was not certain whether these were captured in battle or gave up when they saw the "writing on the wall."

GERMAN CRUISER, PRINZ EUGEN, BELIEVED HIT

British Planes Unload Large Weight of Bombs On Port of Brest

STATEMENT ISSUED

London, June 11.—(CP) —British planes attacked a German cruiser believed to be the Prinz Eugene at Brest last night.

A large weight of bombs was dropped on docks and anchorages but there was no specific claim to having hit the cruiser

The 10,000-ton Prinz Eugene accompanied the German battleship Bismarck on her venture into the Atlantic when she ended in destruction of the Bismarck after she had sunk the British battle cruiser Hood. The Prinz Eugene, however, parted company with the Bismarck soon after the Hood was sunk.

An authoritative statement on last night's bombing said:

"Last night a strong force of bomber command aircraft attacked docks at Brest where a 10,000 ton cruiser believed to be the Prinz Eugen is taking refuge along with the battle cruisers Scharnhorst and Gneisenau. A large weight of bombs was dropped on docks and anchorages".

Previous Royal Air Force bombings of Brest were believed to have damaged the Scharnhorst and Gneisenau so severely that they were unable to leave their anchorage.

Activity of the British air force over the British Isles during the night was on a small scale.

Ensure Enlisted Men Jobs on Their Return Aim of Proposed Bill

Ottawa, June 11—(CP)—Legislation is being prepared to ensure so far as possible that men who give up positions to enlist for active service will be re-employed when they come back, Labor Minister McLarty told the House of Commons today.

The legislation will be introduced when Parliament reconvenes after the summer adjournment.

Mr. McLarty said it was felt that those who go overseas should have as much security as possible in their peace time occupations.

The bill probably would employ will, so far as possible, reinstate men who had taken for enlistment, the position he was forsaken when they might have attained had they not enlisted.

The legislation will be modelled generally after a British measure designed to attain the same objective, Mr. McLarty said.

Angus MacInnis (CCF Vancouver East) asked if the government would make the principle of the proposed legislation effective in provincial spheres.

The minister said the bill had not yet received final consideration of council but he was confident it would not be restricted in its application to those who enlist after the measure becomes law.

The minister said a draft of the bill had been submitted to the Labor Advisory Committee and other representative labor bodies, and to the federal committee on demobilization and rehabilitation of the Pensions Department.

Would Welcome Meeting of Premiers

London, June 11 (CP). — Prime Minister Churchill told the House of Commons today he would warmly welcome a meeting of Dominion prime ministers in London, but could not be easy to arrange for all of them to visit Britain at the same time.

He was replying to Sir Thomas Moore, Conservative, who asked whether any approaches had been made to or by the government of the Dominions concerning formation of an Imperial war cabinet.

Mr. Churchill said there was not an Imperial general staff to direct military operations and an Imperial defence committee to direct strategy, and suggested it was logical there should be an Imperial war cabinet to direct the war effort.

"That is a very large question and I am not prepared to deal with it now", said Mr. Churchill.

The prime minister replied "No, sir" to Colonel Shilcott's question whether there had been any official request from the dominions of an inquiry.

When Edgar Granville, Liberal National), who had previously repeatedly broached in the House the question of an Imperial War Council brought up the matter again, Mr. Churchill replied, and laughed that "I am afraid that at times that gentleman is very annoying".

"There is a considerable public opinion," said Mr. Granville, "which desires this matter to be investigated but does not desire to bicker or hinder the Right Honourable in the conduct of the war".

In a speech to the War Cabinet, the Liberal National member contended, "I am only following the writings, precepts and footsteps of Winston Churchill".

This appeared to be a reference to Mr. Churchill's extensive writings on the First War, and also during the latter part of which an Imperial War Cabinet directed the Empire's war effort.)

Axis Motor Trucks Numbering Thirty Destroyed by RAF

Cairo, June 11 (AP).—Royal Air Force Middle East headquarters reported today that British bombers and planes destroyed about 30 Axis motor trucks, including 10 huge "large tankers"—in an attack on a factory between Barce and Derna, Libya.

R.A.F. bombers also struck a heavy blow against airdrome defences on the island of Rhodes last night and the night before, it was announced today.

Two aircraft were burned out in the Rhodes airdrome and hangars damaged and destroyed by bombs at Calato, it said.

Besides the attack on transport in Libya, it reported hits on a ship and on the docks at Tripoli, and attacked Axis supply port in North Africa, on the docks at Benghazi, on docks and the landing grounds at Derna, Gambut and Gazala, damaging some aircraft.

Recent Arrivals of Nazi Prisoners More Subdued Than Early Comers

Somewhere in Northern Ontario, June 11 (CP)—Townsfolk of this little village resort near a German prison camp gossiped today that the attitude of recently arrived German prisoners is modified from the cocksure manner of the early comers.

This camp, a large brick building behind a double wire fence was glimped by American newspaper women as they sped through beautiful lake country on a tour to see how Canada is standing up to the war.

A group of about 30 prisoners, young Germans dressed in blue outfits with a large red circle on the back of the jacket, were seen returning from voluntary road work. The day's task which have replaced land mines and blown up bridges.

"Stiff opposition", however, was reported encountered by British forces landed on the Lebanon coast north of Tyre under the guns of warships of the Royal Navy.

Those in this camp now are non-commissioned men. They are ship has it that there are about 500 men in the camp and that they are guarded by 350 Canadians.

The prisoners have a swimming pool fenced in by barbed wire that not only extends up out of the water but is grounded at the bottom of the lake. The prisoners maintain their guard. One visiting newspaper women saw several of them snorkelling.

Road signs warn that no one is to pick up a hitch-hiker in the area.

The camp is something of a tourist attraction as hand pulled cars cannot linger in the neighborhood of the camp for long. Word has it that an enterprising citizen near the lake was reportedly a peek through the telescope at the camp and until the alert authorities put him out of business.

The best story current is that a perky little excursion boat plying the lake bears the name "Heil Hitler Save the King" as it went out in the morning and "Heil Hitler Always be an England" when it came home and just as it passed the camp.

400 Children Led to Safety From Orphanage by 30 Brothers

Huberdeau, Que., June 11.—(CP) —Some 400 children were herded to safety by thirty Fathers of the Benedictine Order of Notre Dame De La Misericorde when fire early today destroyed the building in which their orphanage in this Argenteuil County Village, about sixty miles north of Montreal.

All the orphans asleep when the fire broke out, and other occupants escaped as the flames burned through the wooden building until none was left standing. Brother Leon who suffered severe burns was the only casualty. He was taken to the hospital in Montreal.

Father J. L. Thibodeau parish priest, said that the fire was discovered at 3 a.m. The Orphanage night watchman, who had made his rounds a short time before, smelled smoke and investigating, found flames raging in the the orphanage recreation hall.

Father Thibodeau in charge of the orphanage had time to remove all the children from the main, fire-storey building, from rear, before the fire reached it.

Volunteer fire-fighters attempted to halt the spread of the flames but were powerless.

The evacuation of the main building was orderly and the children marched calmly from their dormitories just before dawn.

The buildings were of wood construction and were burned to the ground. There was no estimate of loss.

The village folk were faced with the problem of caring for the children and an appeal for help was sent to officials of the public assistance branch of the provincial government.

NEWEST ARRIVALS ANXIOUS TO GET INTO THE FIGHT

Scores of Canadian Airmen Arrive in England After Uneventful Voyage

NO SUBS SIGHTED

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Somewhere in England, June 11 (CP).—Scores more Canadian airmen have arrived in Britain, eager as the thousands preceding them to get into action against the Germans.

"Give us planes and let us fly over Germany" was the unanimous cry of all.

Graduates of the Commonwealth Air Training Plan, they included sergeant pilots, air gunners and observers from all parts of Canada.

Crossing Uneventful.

The airmen said the Atlantic crossing was uneventful, with no enemy submarines or warplanes sighted. The only excitement was when foe clamped down over the convoy during the night of arrival.

After landing the airmen entrained and came to a Royal Air Force reception depot. They will spend a few days there and, like all arrivals, receive kits of equipment and steel helmets. Then they will be posted to various units.

The arrivals include Sgt.-pilots Jack Ritchie and Eddie Russell of Toronto, where they live in adjoining streets. They arrived on the same day and trained at the same camps throughout their course in Canada.

"I'm glad to get here and look at the Jerries," said Russell and Ritchie declared he was glad the long training period was completed.

Voiced Thoughts of All.

Bill Gilfings, sergeant-wireless operator-air gunner from Hamilton, Ont., voiced the thoughts of all the newcomers, declaring, "I'm looking forward to getting as many Huns as I can."

"That is a very large question and I am not prepared to deal with it now", said Mr. Churchill.

The prime minister replied "No, sir" to Colonel Shilcott's question whether there had been any official request from the dominions of an inquiry.

When Edgar Granville, Liberal National), who had previously repeatedly broached in the House the question of an Imperial War Council brought up the matter again, Mr. Churchill replied, and laughed that "I am afraid that at times that gentleman is very annoying".

"There is a considerable public opinion," said Mr. Granville, "which desires this matter to be investigated but does not desire to bicker or hinder the Right Honourable in the conduct of the war".

In a speech to the War Cabinet, the Liberal National member contended, "I am only following the writings, precepts and footsteps of Winston Churchill".

(This appeared to be a reference to Mr. Churchill's extensive writings on the First War, and also during the latter part of which an Imperial War Cabinet directed the Empire's war effort.)

London, June 11 (CP)—A reliable United States source said today that a British bomber equipped with a United States automatic bomb-sight sank an Axis ship off the Netherlands coast June 7 with a direct hit from 8,000 feet with the first bomb released.

This source said a United States stabilizer bomb-sight expert was aboard the bomber at the time.

Britain has already reported use of the bomb-sight, but today was the indication the United States has given Britain the modern sight.

Canadian Women Interned in France Will be Released Says Report

Ottawa, June 11 (CP)—All Canadian women interned in France are being released, said a statement issued by the External Affairs Department today.

A recent list of Canadian women interned in France numbered 59.

The Department said it has been informed that the German civilian internment authorities in occupied France had explained this decision to the United States representative in Paris.

The Department recalled that on May 29 a list of Canadian women reported interned in occupied France was published.

At that time it was stated that representations had been made by the Canadian Government through the United States Government. Mrs. Ethel Hurley advanced but not been interned in Canada merely on the ground of their nationality.

Munitions Will Get To Places Needed Says President

Defence Materials Totalling $75,000,000 Already Transferred Under Lease-Lend Law

REPORT GIVEN CONGRESS

Washington, June 11 —(AP)— President Roosevelt, reporting that "a little over $75,000,000" of defence materials have been transferred under the lease-lend law, told the United States Congress today we will help Britain to outstrip the Axis powers in the munitions of war.

"And we will see to it," the President emphasized, "that these munitions will get to the places where they may be effectively used to weaken and defeat the aggressors."

He made no mention of methods to be used to ensure delivery.

It was his first report on the progress of the gigantic program of supply arms to Britain, China and the other democratic nations. The lend-lease authorization was signed three months ago today. How much of the $75,000,000 went to Britain and how much may have been transferred to other nations was not indicated.

"We have supplied and we will supply," Mr. Roosevelt declared, "planes, guns, ammunition, and other defense articles in ever increasing quantities to Britain, China and other democracies resisting aggression."

The report, a lengthy printed pamphlet containing tables and charts as we as text, showed that the transfers of war supplies already made, the greatest portion of $75,302,453 was for "aircraft, craft, etc." to a total of $26,182,193, with ordnance including arms and miscellaneous next with $20,580,109. Aircraft was shown for $4,038,296.

Other Categories

Other categories included ammunition $9,760,361, vehicles $5,666,111, clothing and textile supplies $616,000, signal and chemical equipment $1,804,84, agricultural products $1,998,261, machinery $242,181, raw materials and metals $407,806 and miscellaneous $26,530

The figures did not represent actual cost of the weapons of war. Some were approximations of value while others had depreciation and deterioration were taken into account.

And while the total was relatively small, Mr. Roosevelt noted that export of war goods to Britain had risen steadily since September, 1939 when the total was $4,000,000 to payments for the period from March 11 to May 31, the end of the first month of this year, the President said, Britain and Canada had shown 1,427 deliveries. Officials did not say why the final total showed such a reduction in the April totals.

The figure for May was attributed to the Memorial Day holiday week-end by some officials.

Tokyo, June 11 (AP). — Domei, Japanese News Agency, said today the government is expected to withdraw Kenkichi Yoshikwa, chief Japanese negotiator at Batavia, as a result of The Netherlands East Indies' "unsatisfactory answer" to Japanese trade proposals.

He would not say, however, that resumption of negotiations was impossible.

Asahi also reported that the Japanese steamship Nichiran Maru sailing from Batavia tomorrow, would carry 47 Japanese women and children returning home. Three other ships leaving Batavia shortly were reported fully booked.

Tyendinaga Farmers to Consider Means to End Raids on Sheep

Huge Sums Paid Out Annually Because of Losses Due to Bands of Wild Dogs or Wolves

With destruction of sheep and other livestock by wolves and dogs assuming alarming porportions in the Tyendinaga Township district, the past several years efforts are being made by Dr. Harold Wehr, M.P.P., for East Hastings, to have Provincial authorities take a hand and help arrive at some solution of the problem.

According to Dr. Welsh there was a influx of wolves into Tyendinaga Township several years ago and these wolves breeding with dogs in the district produced a species of half-wolf half-dog which lived in the caves and depressions in the commons along the course of the Bleasdell River and which sustain their livelihood by frequent raids on farmers' sheep and other livestock.

During 1939 the Township of Tyendinaga paid out in claims for sheep losses a total of $2,300 with the revenue from the dog licenses amounting to only approximately $600. Last year the amount paid out by the township council decreased almost a half to $1,300, but this spring sheep losses have again assumed alarming proportions and during the month of May $500 was paid out to farmers losing sheep due to the raids of wolves which have cross bred with dogs.

Owing to the fact that the creatures preying on sheep in Tyendinaga are of the wolf species, of wolf, the provincial authorities are not pay bounty when they are claimed. In several instances residents of the district have killed members of the animals fi cares or dens, have had them declared wolves by county officials, only to have the bounty refused by the provincial authorities on the cross breed.

In an effort to arrive at some solution to the problem which is causing the destruction of sheep in the district a meeting has been called on Saturday evening at which every farmer is invited to attend. The meeting will be arranged by provincial officials from Toronto who will look into the distressing situation.

New Curtiss Plane Exceeds 400 M.P.H.

Buffalo, N.Y., June 11 — (AP)— The Curtiss-Wright Company announced today it had sent more than 1,000 fast Tomahawk fighters to Britain and demonstrated a faster, spike-nosed pursuit plane whose performance and armament were secret.

Officials of the company said more than 200 of the many Tomahawks had reached Britain or the Middle East and had not yet received detailed reports of their performance in battle.

The Bell Aircraft Corporation, which makes the P-39 Airacobra, said it had sent eleven of these cannon-carrying fighters to Britain, but none had yet seen action. Curtiss expects production capacity of its combat planes is on the upspring, and Bell six a day.

The new Curtiss plane, more pointed and streamlined than the P-40 Tomahawk, flew down before returned war correspondents who went through the Curtiss and Bell plants. Although company engineers said they could not talk about its performance, they declared it was "much better" than the Tomahawk and would be safely in the 400-mile-an-hour class.

The new Curtiss is powered by an Allison engine, believed to be the new 1,225 horsepower motor with improved supercharger. Burdette Wright, Vice-President of Curtiss-Wright, said he believed the P-40 would equal any foreign fighter.

Bob Wright and Lawrence D. Bell, President and General Manager of Bell Aircraft, said motor production in Allison has been increased by keeping up with plane production. Neither Bell nor Wright indicated how much of their production went to Britain, but correspondents noted that most of the planes being finished on the day they visited either bore the Royal Air Force insignia or had special British fittings.

At the end of the Bell production line were four Airacobras, three fitted with mountings for 30-millimeter guns, which Britain is ordering and the fourth with the American 37-millimeter cannon.

Bell gave no indication of the size of Britain's order but said he had been told that the authorities had 2,000 airplane cannons there for installation when planes arrive.

Bell officials also disclosed that United States engineers working on the rocket had been permitted by the Government to examine a German Messerschmitt 109 fighter.

Rev. D. A. Chatreau Addresses Closing Banquet of B.Y.P.U.

Rev. D. A. Chateau addressing the B.Y.P.U. at their closing banquet Tuesday night in Victoria Avenue Baptist Church, threw out a ringing heart-searching challenge to all young people to hold on to their faith, to feed and grow strong on the word of God and not let it slip through their fingers.

Referring to St. Paul's epistle to the Hebrews in the sixth chapter wherein he said "Let us go on into perfection" the speaker reiterated that it was necessary to put blood, silver and wood into the job of being a Christian that we may always be striving upward and not slipping back or nearly standing still. Young Christians should not be content to live on a milk and water diet in their Christian experiences and therefore remain spiritual babes but they must feed on the strong, virile meat of the word of God through diligent and diligent study of the Scriptures and by accepting their full responsibilities in the work of the church.

Two lovely vocal solos were given by Miss Anna Hogle which were heartily appreciated by the audience. Mrs. Charles Franklin gave a portion of Scripture during the period of devotion and several hymns and favourite choruses were sung. Chairman W. Hale gave a toast to the King and a toast to the church was proposed by Mr. A. E. Hay, to which Mr. Fred Fox responded.

In an impressive ceremony the new officers for the ensuing year were installed by the retiring President, Mr. W. Hales. The new officers are:

President—Mrs. Chas. Franklin.
1st Vice-President —Miss Jean Thompson.
2nd Vice President—Miss Dorothy Moorman.
Group Leaders —Miss Edna Johnson, Mr. Eric Naylor, Mr. Eli Burn.
Treasurer—Miss Marjorie Hales.
Secretary—Miss Violet Grant.
Pianist —Miss Marjorie Payers.
Tabernacle Oscar Cook.

The benediction was pronounced by the Rev. Mr. D. A. Chatreau.

CENSUS TAKERS STARTING LABORS

Population of Canada Expected to be Over 12,000,000

Ottawa, June 11 (CP), — Some 17,000 census enumerators started today on the task of checking and finding out facts and figures of Canada's population — estimated after the nation-wide canvass last year to be about 13,000,000.

Officials here were confident the count would start right on its revised schedule and pointed to a stream of letters, telegrams and telephone messages from local officials assuring that the army of nose-counters was ready for action.

The census originally was scheduled to start June 2, but the date later was set back to leave a clear field for canvassers for the Victory Loan. However, the information which the enumerators will seek out will be the general state of health of Canadian as of June 2.

Even in the beginning population of the dominion will be included in the census and the first day of every typical commissioner will be to ensure that this element is recorded immediately. This will avoid the possibility of a wanderer being counted in two different localities, or missed altogether.

Clear Check by the Maids.

Salvation Army hostels, missions, small hills, and even "jungles" beside railway tracks will be visited by day and a thorough check will be made.

Members of the general public who will be leaving their homes soon on summer vacation have co-operated, officials said. Many have written to census offices asking for the enumerator's name so they may have the information recorded before they leave.

In "sore spot" areas of previous censuses no difficulty is expected. Interpreters will accompany enumerators to aid those who have difficulty in understanding the procedure because of a language barrier of English or French and who may not understand that information will be kept secret. In Doukhobor areas, where in the past residents have protested against giving information, no opposition is expected.

Only trouble expected, in fact, was complication of the job of forest fires in some eastern Canadian areas.

Letter To The Editor

PROTESTS AGAINST UNSIGHTLY CONDITION OF UPPER HARBOR

Belleville, Ont., June 11, 1941.
The Ontario Intelligencer,
166 Front Street,
Belleville, Ont.

Dear Mr. Editor:—

I wonder if you would allow me to use a few lines of your valuable paper or raise my voice in protest re the conditions of our harbor supposed to be one of the beauty spots of Belleville.

I wonder how many of our citizens have visited that locality lately, especially our harbor commission and have we one? It is a disgrace to the name of our fair city with its woe weeds and marsh growing right under the door-steps of some of our citizens who live in that vicinity.

Surely, Mr. Editor, with a little co-operation of our different bodies that control our city there can be something done to eliminate these unsightly conditions that prevail there.

As a closing suggestion, I wonder what would happen if this was owned by some private citizen, I wonder what our Health Dept. would do? Would they sit idly by and still let these conditions exist? How many of you would like to live where Mr. Frank Keegan or Mr. Leonard Tisdale does who owns two of the oldest established boat businesses in this district.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor for this valuable space, I remain,

Yours truly,
R. L. Zufelt, 34 Octavia St.

YOUTH CACHES SUM OF MONEY IN SOLES OF SHOES

Four Toronto Youths Arrested in City; One Has $21.00 Hidden in His Shoes

Found loitering at the rear of the Modern Cleaners' plant on Pinnacle St. shortly after 3.00 a.m. today, four Toronto youths, who gave their names as Albert Townsley, 16, Donald Branson, 20, Charles Anderson, 17 and Gordon Carpenter, 17 were arrested on Constables Wright and Arnott on charges of theft. Police say the quartette had entered a Modern Cleaners' delivery truck at the rear of the premises and stole five shirts.

When questioned at the police station later Anderson and Carpenter were found to be in possession of $23 in cash which they contended they had earned in Toronto. The quartette came into Belleville on a Canadian National Railway freight train late Tuesday night. The constables were on patrol when they noticed the four boys lurking around the Modern plant.

After being questioned at the Police Station today, young Anderson was taken aside and searched. Secured between the inner and outer of each shoe worn by Anderson was found $21, a dollar bill being in one sole and $11 cached between the soles of the other shoe.

The Anderson lad refused to comment on why he had hidden the money in his shoes. Later Chief Kidd acquainted the Toronto police with the apprehension of the four boys who are being held on theft charges and pending further investigation.

Labor Congress Protests Order Of Labor Minister

Kitchener, Ont., June 11.—(CP)—Protest against the order given by Labor Minister Norman McLarty that the scope of the government Conciliation Board set up to inquire into labor disputes here be widened into a thorough probe of the situation in the Twin City, was made when the Board resumed sittings Tuesday.

The protest, together with charges that the decision was unfair, was made by M. M. McLean of Ottawa, Executive Board member of the Canadian Congress of Labor, representing Trade Unions in the various disputes here.

Mr. McLean intimated that the Chairman of the Board, Judge J. A. MacGibbon, of Lindsay, had acted unfairly in going to Ottawa where he obtained a letter from the Minister of Labor authorizing the board to widen the scope of its activities.

He referred to Twin City manufacturers being in Ottawa the same day and protested the "most strongly against this apparent collusion." Continuing, Mr. McLean said: "I was almost going to say collusion."

"You had better not," was the sharp answer from the chairman.

The Board agreed to adjournment until three o'clock to give the employers an opportunity in deciding whether or not they will sit down with employees and conciliate the disputes at the Waterloo Manufacturers' Association, the Is. McGrire Co. Ltd., and the Dominion Truck Equipment Co.

11 Survivors From Robin Moor Taken Aboard

(Copyright, 1941, By The Associated Press)

Aboard the S. S. Cearo, June 11 (AP)—On June 8 at 10 o'clock in the evening, in latitude 4o north and longitude 37.37 west, I rescued 11 survivors in one lifeboat of the North American ship Robin Moor, which was torpedoed May 21 at the position latitude 6.15 north, longitude 25.30 west.

Their names are John L. J. Banigan, Karl Nilson, Virgil Sanderlin, William S. Clary, Peter Bunn, Donald Schabelse, M. O. Rice, R. Carlisle, Alexander Scott, John Murphy, and P. C. Eccles.

The saved members of the crew declared there were three more lifeboats with 26 members of the crew and seven passengers, including three women and one child.

The Commander of the Brazilian ship Tamandare, which I also requested to investigate, said that about 1 p.m. yesterday he found pieces of baggage consisting of one suitcase and children's toys.

Unfortunately nothing more has been found up to now.

Among the 11 rescued are three officers.

We are continuing to Recife (Pernambuco), Brazil, where we expect to arrive tomorrow night.

Judge Upholds Right Of Paper to Criticize Upon Court Decisions

Jefferson City, Mo., June 11.—(AP)—The Missouri Supreme Court yesterday dismissed contempt of court citations against the St. Louis Post-Dispatch and two of its staff members in an opinion upholding a newspaper's right to comment upon court decisions.

The late Circuit Juwge Thomas J. Rowe in April, 1940, fined the Pulitzer Publishing Company, owner of the Post-Dispatch, $2,000, sentenced Ralph Cochlan editor of the editorial page, to 30 days in jail and a fine of $200 and Daniel R. Fitzpatrick, cartoonist, to ten days and $100 fine.

The convictions were based upon two editorials and an editorial cartoon criticizing dismissal in Judge Rowe's court of an extortion charge against former State Representative Edward M. Brady.

The Supreme Court held, however, that the newspaper's criticism was not comment upon a matter then pending before the Circuit Court and, therefore, such publication did not constitute punishable contempt.

"To rule otherwise would be to narrow the limits of permissible criticism so greatly that the right to criticize would cease to have practical value," the opinion said.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Horrible poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

It takes those good, gentle Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you "up and up". Harmless and purely vegetable. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. Refuse substitutes.

Tweed Cons. School Concert Delights Capacity Audience

Tweed—The annual school concert given by the pupils of Tweed Consolidated School was held in the Community Hall on Friday night, with an attendance of nearly 500 people. Every available seat was taken and a number of persons were standing throughout the performance. The popularity of this annual concert, which has been held formerly in the school, had made it necessary to look for more spacious quarters where the parents and friends of the children might enjoy in comfort the program which has become an annual feature of the school.

Mr. C. H. Myles, chairman of the Consolidated School Board, made a most efficient chairman, welcoming the audience and expressing appreciation of their interest in the work of the school as shown by their attendance. He commended the teachers for the excellent work which they are doing, and expressed satisfaction as a parent in the high ideals which the teachers hold and to the children of the school. During the course of the program, Mr. Myles commended the staff for the excellent training in discipline which the children received as evidenced by their fine deportment during the evening.

Miss Lois Richardson, teacher of music in the school, played the accompaniments for all the choruses and grade songs. The excellence of the singing reflected great credit on the musical training which she had given the children throughout the year. With two exceptions, all the musical numbers used on the program were learned during the year in the usual music periods. Mr. S. H. Connor, principal of the school, assisted Miss Richardson in the training of the school choir of 96 voices, and acted as director during the school choruses on the program.

Apart from the musical numbers, a delightful Dutch Dance was given by six girls of Grades III and IV, who were trained by their teachers, Miss Edith Taylor, the dramatization of "The Wise Men of Gotham" a selection from the Reader, by pupils of Grades IV and V, under the direction of their teacher, Miss Grace Moran, was greatly enjoyed by everyone. The Scarf Drill by 16 girls, trained by Miss Florence Blakey and Miss Catharine McQuarrie, was one of the finest numbers on the program.

A great deal of favorable comment was heard on all sides for the excellence of the program, with especial reference being made to the school flawless rendering of "The Lord's Prayer" (Malotte) by the school choir.

Mr. A. W. McGuire, B.A., public school inspector, delivered an excellent address, during the course of which he said that parents of children attending Tweed Consolidated School have good reason to be proud of their children, their school and the staff. With each teacher qualified in a special subject the children receive training in subjects other than the 3 R's, a training which will prove of value to them in the years to come.

Jack Paul, chairman of the local Victory Loan committee, spoke briefly, urging everyone to assist in Canada's war effort by purchasing Victory Loan Bonds during the present campaign.

A very pleasing feature of the program was the presentation to Miss Lois Richardson by the children of the school of a beautiful bouquet of roses. The address was given by Carl Bateman, a pupil of Grade VII, and the presentation was made by Barbara Ann Richardson and Judith Johnston, pupils of Grade II and Grade I. Miss Richardson, taken wholly by surprise, was deeply touched by the thoughtfulness of the children.

The proceeds of the concert, amounting to nearly $0, were forwarded to the Evening Telegram British War Victims' Fund. This recalls to mind the fact that when the fund was less than $25,000, Tweed Consolidated School forwarded their first contribution $1.38, to this fund the first school in the Province of Ontario to do so, according to a statement made at the time by Jim Hunter. Since that time they have sent additional amounts.

THE PEOPLE AND THE TORCH

Principal R. C. Wallace of Queen's University touched a profound note which found lodgement in the hearts of thousands of citizens at the Torch of Victory ceremony in Belleville as he spoke of the privileges we enjoy in our democratic way. In his journey through the peaceful countryside between Kingston and Belleville, in a sort of reverie, he mused on the blessings of the homes with their boys and girls, the rights and freedoms and happy minorities, the freedom of the church and religion, the nobility of the opinions and ideals of the people, the freedom to do as they list—all these the very warp and woof of life in a land free from dictation and tyranny. Then there was the thought that all these things and many other things were threatened by aggression.

As Dr. Wallace spoke to the people, the scene was one that Canadians love, an early evening of a lovely June day, the golden sun shedding its heat-giving, light-giving, health-bestowing rays, which glinted on Canada's Victory Torch, symbolic of a united national effort towards victory. Here were people typical of those in similar Canadian scenes, happy to live their lives within the wide scope of freedom, to be allowed to have their homes, their families, their friends, to work and to achieve; but to do evil or harm to none.

What a noble creation or living spirit is therefore this British liberty, developed out of the yearning of the British race for the finest expression in organized society! How much like their British cousins are these Canadian people. After what Britons have endured for the homes, the streets, the shrines of their cities, and the very soil and the institutions of England, Scotland and Ireland, which are thereby rendered sacred because of what its people have withstood, Canadians in thousands of communities now realise how dear to them are the hearts Canada and the Motherland through the very example of stalwart sons and daughters of Britain. In the words of Sir Walter Scott, than whom there was never a greater patriot, Canadians can say sincerely,

"Breathes there a man with soul so dead
Who never to himself hath said
This is my own, my native land?"

Here these people realize not that all they are and have is due to their British heritage under the glorious skies of Canada and on our rich earth. Here they are willing to work and make the fertile land produce food for this nation and other nations. Here they cherish the right to dwell in a democratic society and pass on the torch of civilization. They know that the essential needs of a happy people are few, the right to live and have their homes, to work as they prefer and to play without molesting the rights of others, and to seek for knowledge through schools and universities in order to learn more of the laws of life which make a noble society possible.

Such a gathering is a sidelight on thousands of other communities in spirit and in aim.

From this area have gone many of this neighborhood who are now serving in Britain's defence on land, on sea and in the air or are stationed in Canada. These peace-loving people know that the defence of their liberty is the worthy task of every son of liberty because such freedom must endure.

This audience was brought close to every other community in Canadian patriotic zeal in the presence of the Victory Torch which is being carried across Canada and is to be taken to Britain bearing the tidings that will say that Canada has raised of her wealth over $600,000,000 for the Victory Loan. The Torch is a visible symbol of Canada's heart and soul in the great enterprise of beating down Hitlerism. As the material torch is described as "light or luminary formed of some combustible substance as resinous wood, twisted tow, soaked with tallow and generally carried in the hand," so is the symbolic torch, the spirit of the Canadian people, the united spirit of individuals formed into a light-and-courage-giving luminary in the time of war.

OURSELVES AND OTHERS...

THE STORY OF A FIVE-DOLLAR BILL

"It wasn't so long ago that I was a bright, crinkly youngster nestling snugly in the pocket-book of an old man. There we were, four of my brothers and myself, fresh from the presses of the Government, our lives ahead of us and eager to see the world. For a long while my brothers and I were closer than the hairs on our owner's head, until one day we found ourselves crushed by a heavy weight. There had been silent footsteps behind the hip-pocket where we reposed in a weather-worn wallet. We heard a cry and felt ourselves going through space. Then a hand grasped our worn wallet and an ugly face suddenly leered at us through the sudden light of a flash."

"Then we were crumpled by a hard, horny hand into a jumbled mass and placed in an evil smelling pocket. Later we were blinded with a powerful light. We were in a brightly illuminated room. Men were talking, drinking and gesticulating. I was suddenly pulled from my brothers and placed on a wet table. Then I disappeared in a shiny thing that had a bell and where others of my older brothers lay. The next day I was taken to a bank, and for the first time that I did in the pocketbook of a fashionable young lady. Gee, it was awell in there. Pretty perfumes, lipstick, letters and other strange things."

"I awakened from a sort of a dream and found myself in another cash register and later in another pretty purse. During the next few days I saw plenty of the world. I was given to a waiter in a night club, gave me to his wife. I visited grocery stores ,more banks, a miner's sooty pocket and a farmer's dusty overalls. By this time I had lost all my new crinkly appearance and was becoming soft and pliable and dirty in spots."

"But one day, after I had rested in the pocket of a careless laundry man, I felt a new found freedom. Covering me was a soiled handkerchief and as I lay there reminiscing of the past, and wondering what the future had in store for me, I felt myself suddenly whisked out of my pocket. In some manner I had become mixed with the handkerchief and as my owner jerked it from his pocket, I flittered to the sidewalk. I couldn't have cared much about me for he never stopped."

"I lay on the pavement for some time, wondering what Fate had in store for me. Then I heard an exclamation of surprise. A little boy bent over me, amazement in his eyes. He cried out, 'Mother, see what I found.' A poor woman, her shabby clothing hugged close about her, came and looked at me. Her eyes shone with surprise. She took me in her hand and stroked me. A tear rolled down her cheek. 'It's a long time since I have seen one of these,' she muttered. Then I was stuffed in a funny purse, none like I had ever been in before."

"The next thing I remember I lay on a rough table in a dimly lighted room. People were talking. 'Our Jim,' the woman who found me was saying, 'is in England with the soldiers and he says he needs smokes. What shall we do with this money, Bob?' A man answered. 'It is impossible to find the owner, I suppose, but we'll advertise that we found it and if nobody claims it . . . well.' "

"A week passed. I lay in the darkness of a drawer. Then again I heard voices. 'It is the best thing we can do to help Jim and the Empire,' the man was saying. 'I know we cannot really afford it, but I am working now and we can make up the balance O.K. What do you say, Mother?' The woman's voice replied, 'You're right, Bob. It's what all of us should do. And it is the least we can do to help.' "

"So here I am. The proudest five-dollar bill in the city. I am attached to a Victory Loan application, ready to do my bit, and glad of it."

"Soon I shall be on my way in the world again, mingling with my brothers of higher and lesser degree. But I shall recall this experience with pride and like Churchill said of Britain and her people: 'This is my finest hour.' "

JUNE WEDDINGS

Because of the shortage of cloth caused by the war the Fascist government of Italy has declared wedding gowns will be trails to be in bad taste.

In Sweden the church authorities suggested that in view of the food shortage rose petals should hereafter be thrown at newly married couples.

Marriage and marriages are derived in a roundabout way from the Latin word "maritus," meaning husband.

The common belief that June marriages are likely to be lucky is a superstition. Roman superstition! June was named after Juno, wife of Jupiter and the goddess of women and the patroness of happy marriages.

In Australia and New Zealand, December is the favorite marriage month.

It is estimated that one out of every hundred marriage licences issued in the United States is returned unused because one of the parties has a change of mind, loses his or her job or some similar reason.

In 1858 Lucy Stone caused quite a sensation by demanding that the word "obey" be omitted from marriage services.

Marriages in Great Britain are not legal if they are performed before 8 o'clock in the morning or after the evening and eight in the morning.

The custom of wearing engagement and wedding rings on the fourth finger originated in an ancient belief that a very delicate nerve runs directly from that finger to the heart.

Among most Christian peoples the wedding ring is worn on the left hand; but among members of the Greek Orthodox Church it is customary to wear it on the right hand.

Wedding presents are customarily sent to the bride and not greatly by the bride from evil spirits.

Our forefathers believed that if a man married a woman who was a witch he would not be liable to her creditors if he received her from the nuptial altar, magically without any of her property, including clothing, been left behind, while the bride wore nothing but a simple smock provided by the bridegroom, who was known as a smock marriage.

A resident of Schenectady, N.Y., has enabled persons to take skiing lessons indoors by inventing wooden slides over which plates attached to students' shoes move with a resistance similar to that of skis on snow.

Discontent Grows Around Il Duce

By Eugene Lemaherf

The very sudden death of Signor Bocchini, "the Italian Himmler," from a heart attack has caused a sensation throughout Italy. No one suspects that he has become the omnipotent head of the secret police, and every phase between calm and terrific is being discussed. It is rumored that Bocchini's unexpected death was another nerve blow in the case of the air crash in Libya, when Marshal Balbo was killed. There is talk of murder.

Signor Bocchini, by whom tens of thousands of Anti-Fascists have been thrown into prison or sent to slave in the sulphur mines of Sicily, has for fifteen years been the most hated man in Italy, and, since Mussolini, in the vain hope of easy booty, dumped his people into war on Hitler's side, this hatred has enormously increased. For it is an open secret that after 1940, the activities of "Ovra" have attained unprecedented dimensions. Resentment at what large sections of the population regard as the criminal adventure has led to expressions of opinion which the Italian secret police, with its close network of spies, could no longer suppress. It is a difficult task to suppress these "subversive" elements which suddenly appeared among all ranks of society. The Duce, in a lively harangue, ordered his Chief of Police to silence opposition without a moment's delay.

Once again Bocchini was forced to display his customary brutality. The number of executions during the five months following Mussolini's declaration of war has been very greatly above the average of recent years. Despite official denials the Ovra's activities continue even in high places. It would be useless to search for Bocchini's name in Pamphili in his own palace. He has been "banished" to Ventotene, which is a captive on one of those inhospitable islands used by the Pontifex regime in the Tyrrhenian. Prince Doria is the last male issue of the princely house of which Pope Innocent is descended. Never in the history of Italy has such approved still less the Duce's friendship for Hitler. This aristocrat of fifty-five years, who detested the break with England, voicing his opinion in the circle of friends who, though they would have regarded a visit to Ventotene as natural, looked upon a brotherhood-in-arms with the Führer as a commonplace betrayal of their allies in the World War. Mussolini would gladly have imprisoned the hapless prince. This being impossible, Bocchini stepped in. Hence, perhaps, also the fact that the Prince has brilliant friends—his mother was a daughter of the Duke of Newcastle—a charge was trumped up of maintaining illicit connections with the Vatican. Here was grounds for deportation.

Among other arrests was that of another scion of the Roman nobility, Don Alessandro Torlonia, son-in-law of Count Alfonso. Torlonia has an American mother and was brought up in America. Bocchini he brought over certain ideas of liberty and freedom which were difficult to reconcile with Fascist conceptions. These have now left him in gaol.

It must not be supposed that the generals' revolt, the rise of which, of course, involve "unknown" military figures, is free from political criticism. The underground opposition, which is growing rapidly, is busy all over the country. It derives special support from the numbers who fought in the Abyssinian campaign, men to whom the Duce declared in 1936 that they were going out as "pioneers" to conquer the rich and fertile lands of the Abyssinian for Italy, and to be a source of wealth for their families. Instead they found poverty and disease, and the fruits of victory. In East Africa they learnt to their cost that all talk of empire was futile. The Italian colonists, the men were sent back to Italy as a "gift" to Hitler. There awaited them further disillusionment and bitterness, which meanwhile been given to others.

Today the people of Italy know that once again they have been deceived, that behind the fine phrases of the Duce, which the Germans and colonies, with which Mussolini has filled the air, there is only the harsh disappointments are in store for them. Despite all the efforts of the regime to rouse enthusiasm, people are beginning to realize that he (Mussolini) is certain strong hopes of a British victory, and a feeling of the masses for their country and its people, and not upon a sense of solidarity, remorse and admiration. The fact that the German-American supplies for Britain promised a close collaboration between the Anglo-Saxon countries, which much inevitably lead to Germany's collapse."

Hitler has not allowed Mussolini the Italian Riviera, Corsica, Nice, Tunis, Malta, Gibraltar, Suez, Cyprus.

Hitler has not allowed Mussolini the Italian Riviera, His troops occupied 10,000 square miles of Mussolini's French territory; Mussolini was compelled to await peace negotiations, at which the Fuehrer will undoubtedly play off France and Italy against each other.

The bombing by the R.A.F. of Genoa, Turin, Milan, Leghorn, Naples and Taranto has also helped to swell the tide of criticism. Still more has the attack on Piraeus in Greece which turned out so disastrously to what Mussolini expected. Had the invasion of Greece succeeded on the first day and had Italian divisions, as was originally promised, entered Athens without a shot being fired, the Duce's prestige might have silenced criticism. The turning of cheap taunts by spectator methods employed against a boxer who might even have been applauded, instead of hissed, if he had put up a magnificent defence of which victory was denied him, drove out the invader. It is part of the methods of dictatorship to cover its their victims without actually striking to fight their own battles. Resistance of the Greeks has shown up the chinks in Mussolini's armor. Mussolini's prestige depended on the statement that they had been defeated by the might of the Axis, and were glad to save their skins.

Italian hopes of an honorable issue to the war are all the smaller, because the Italians themselves are not eager for a victory of the Third Reich. Despite the grovelling adulation paid to Germany's leaders by the controlled Italian press, newsreels, Italy occasionally gives vent in veiled form indignation at the treatment which Rome is forced to put up with from Berlin. Strikes in the United States

New York, June 11 — It's not a pleasant thing to see an army moving in upon a striking plant. And it is shockingly unnerving to the nation to continue to tolerate defence plants whose labor disputes are sweeping the country as Communist inspired. It is also Nazi assisted. The German-Russian pact, or better still, the Hitler-Stalin pact, has repercussions everywhere on earth. The two brothers are working hand in hand in the street. People would stop arguing whether this country can be invaded, if they would once get it perfectly clear in their minds that we are dealing with an international revolutionary conspiracy backed up by war, and that the revolutionary tactician invaded us long ago.

So far there has been little evidence that the Government knows how to deal with the situation. On the one hand a wave of anti-labor fever, or, on the other, some "liberals" rise indignantly to protect the rights of labor organizations. In the end the army and the N.L.R.B. are left to clear up the mess.

I believe drastic action should be taken against the Communist and Nazi organizations in this country. That is needed is the power of the Bund and its affiliates should be destroyed, leaders prosecuted and put into jail with good still sentences. The fact that members of the New Masses should be suspended; the Bund and its camps dismantled and their leaders prosecuted followed up. These people intend to quench the democratic spirit of the United States and to foment civil war, and it is impossible to be capable of finding means to deal with a threat which is so obvious as incompetent and rips for ruin.

The Communist and Nazi cell systems would still be difficult to deal with. Both are modelled on Bolshevik American institutes and each, separately, is waging war on the other, and, namely the creation of chaos in the economic life of the country.

The question arises, how do they get their cells? Are they imported? Or are they converted American workers? Are the strikes supported by American workers as a result of the activities of this nation, at this moment, of Communist agents? They may be infection as free men from sheer terror.

The way the Communists work is to get control of the executive offices of a union. The executive with authoritarian organization in each section, with its paid local orders, in blind obedience, from the top. They use trickery, intimidation, social pressure and physical terror. At union meetings any opposition is shouted down, and any member who emerges as a possible opposition leader has his knees put on him outside the meeting and is beaten up. Union rules are framed so that members can be expelled for opposition and expulsion means the impossibility of further employment.

These villains shut down parts of the plants by sabotage. They lay down tools in the presence in the shop of a member of another union, or of a non-union member. They create "incidents" and make them the cause of calling strikes.

Their technique is exactly the same as that of gangster-racketeers. If the majority have no protection in law against them, if they are organized and ruthless while the majority is individualistic and decent, they will win. After all, the whole world is being conquered by this technique, and it is very easy indeed to conquer it against a few thousand men, with the cells right in their midst.

To try to get at this by the usual detective methods is perfectly useless. These methods end by having to call in armed guards.

What is needed is the will of fair practices for unions, rigorously enforced by the labor leaders at the top and by the Government — a desire that will be respected by unions.

It would be infinitely desirable for the unions to draw up this code, but since the unions have not shown any desire to do so, Government should. But when the Government makes the code, it must be counter-action, to see that the labor organizations themselves must know that they don't have to be afraid to report any abuses, lest more know that if they set out to get control of the unions, in which, in the majority are patriotic traitors and termites, they will have the support of the United Senators at the top and the public opinion at the bottom.

They ought to be able to tell the authorities about any misbehavior being branded as "scabs" and "stooges" for the employers.

The code ought to include:

(1) Prohibition of all strikes without a majority vote before conciliation. No strike without a majority vote of the union's workers concerned votes with secret ballot. Supervision of all strike elections.

(2) Establishment of a tribunal in every factory, by the union, with the participation of the public, before which workers can present claims against terrorization and intimidation. Anyone found guilty of using terror and intimidation will be expelled from the union.

(3) No expulsion of a member from a union, except because of opposition to a union official or his policy, except through the tribunal.

(4) Elimination of "professional" union leaders by a rule that no one may be a union official who has not been a member of the specific industry for at least five years.

(5) Prohibition of union to be rank and file of all funds and expenditures. Election of the so-called progressive unions never account for their funds to the rank and file. Communist organization and propaganda.

(6) No supporter of Communism or Nazism may be a union official, and membership in the union on the matter on complaint of any ten union members.

(7) Limits of initiation fees and abolition of the practice of collecting such fees on a commission basis.

(8) Democratization of unions by the election of officials, the formulation of programs and the presentation of demands by "democratic" resolutions, whereby the union membership can say what it wants and something he doesn't want as well.

Give the workers a chance really to exercise self-government in the unions and to protect themselves against racketeers and fomenters of chaos and they will take care of their strikes. And the people who suffer most in the first place.

DR. R. G. SINCLAIR CHOSEN TO HEAD HORTICULTURISTS

Moving Pictures of Local Flower Gardens Shown Delegates

PLANS DISCUSSED

The Ontario Horticultural Association, District No. 3 concluded its annual convention with the afternoon session held in Christ church Parish Hall on Tuesday afternoon with a greatly increased attendance over that which was present during the morning program. The afternoon session was featured by a number of short addresses by eminent speakers on topics closely connected with the program of the O.H.A., and by the election of a new district director for District No. 3, Dr. R. G. Sinclair, Picton, who succeeds to head district director, Mr. H. Livingston of Brockville, whose duties made it necessary for him to tender his resignation.

The showing of moving pictures of local flower gardens in beautiful panachrome color film, by Mr. Mc-Gowan, drew applause from appointment from delegates in attendance as the afternoon session of the convention commenced. These pictures were followed by short address by Mr. B. C. W. Pickford of Brighton, who spoke on the value of junior judging competitions.

Outlines Junior Work

Mr. Pickford gave a very comprehensive outline of the work, which must be undertaken when sponsoring a junior judging team and stated that the success of the venture depended on co-operation which their instructor received from the horticultural society. The two requisites of a successful junior team were, first, to get the team, and second, the conducting of instructive classes, he said. The juniors really appreciate what is being done for them. Mr. Pickford assured, and strongly recommended the local society to sponsor a team, which, as he termed it, "would be a source of strength to the organization in years to come."

Mr. A. A. Martin, Inspector of Public Schools for Northumberland County, outlined the program of rural school beautification, which has met with outstanding success in his district. "The idea of having rural schools beautiful is a new one in most schools," stated the speaker. "It is an idea which was developed from Arbor Day, and it is due to the efforts of horticultural societies, that the measure has met with such success."

Refers to Trophy

Mr. Martin referred to the Carter trophy, which is put up for competition among rural schools entered in rural school beautification scheme, and stated that the award was made on the basis of improvements effected rather than upon initial excellence. No elaborate layout insofar as school grounds were concerned was necessary, as improvements effected during the year were taken into consideration, he said.

The speaker stated, that in the past school grounds, especially in rural districts, were tolerated because of the idea, that presentment meant the expenditure of considerable money. "There has been a change in the attitude of people toward the appearance of school grounds, however; the old toleration is out of date, and this is especially noticeable where horticultural societies are active. In the matter of cost, it was stated that government grants are obtained to help defray expenses and in any event costs were not prohibitive insofar as planting was concerned. "If horticulturist societies will only take the initiative, the remaining opponents will be overcome, and ultimo school grounds will fall in line," concluded Mr. Martin.

Mrs. D. W. Boucher, of Kingston, Provincial President of the O.H.A., gave a short outline of the Ontario Horticultural Society program, stating that programs and membership were very closely related. She emphasized the need for rural school beautification and stated that horticultural societies should cast about for a school upon which to centre their efforts, which would in turn create competition. It should be a part of the program of every horticultural society to choose certain army or military hospital grounds which to beautify as their constitution toward the war effort, she said.

The importance of juvenile work should also be part of their program, Mrs. Boucher continued, as she stressed the importance of keeping the younger people interested in horticulture. "Get good leaders, no matter in what phase of the work it may be, and it is amazing the co-operation and assistance that can be obtained," she concluded.

Advocates Ribbons For Money

In a general discussion of questions relative to Society and Association work, Mr. John F. Clarke, Official Lecturer of the Ontario Horticultural Association, advocated the elimination of the money at flower shows with the substitution of ribbons and awards, instead. He said, would be of benefit to a general increase in membership in the Societies and would prevent one or two exhibitors taking a major percentage of the money.

The question of rural school beautification received comment by Mr. Clarke who stated, that the average school board was sympathetic toward and that teachers were anxious to co-operate in the program. It was necessary that at least five schools in the district signify their willingness to enter before a competent judge be arranged and a trophy provided for the winning school. The co-operation received by agricultural representatives in the various districts in regard to this work was highly commended by Mr. Clarke.

In conclusion Mr. Clarke urged the local society give serious consideration to the sponsoring of a junior judging team, because, "if we are to keep up interest in horticulture, we must have recruits," he said.

Words of appreciation toward the Belleville Horticultural Society for the hospitality that had been extended was forwarded by visiting delegates to the convention which was climaxed by an official tour of the Provincial Entomological Laboratory on Dundas Street and to the Belleville Purification Plant, on the Trent Road.

County Council Shelves Motion Passed by Elgin Council Asking Young Farmers be Exempted

Reeve Linn Expresses Opinion Farmers' Sons Should be Placed on Equal Basis With Anyone Else With Regard to Service

SHARP DISCUSSION

Hastings County Council at its inaugural session of the annual June session yesterday afternoon in Shire Hall, went on record as taking no action in the request for concurrence by the Elgin County Council in a petition proposed to be forwarded to the Department of National Defence that the government "refrain from calling up for military service young men who are employed in the production of food."

Decision of the council as a whole that the request be received and filed followed a brief but spirited discussion in which several members took part.

Reeve William Linn, fiery Marmora Village reeve, immediately moved that the request be tabled as soon as it was presented to council. Before it could be seconded, Reeve Sam Nicholson promptly moved an amendment for concurrence. "The men overseas have to have food," he declared, "as well as guns and shells. Farmers' sons should have exemption at least until the fall so they could have the summer to work for the production of essential foodstuffs.

Postponement Could be Asked

Reeve R. E. Elliott, Deloro, informed council that exemption from military service by any class of young man was impossible, but postponement could be granted for anyone employed in essential industries. "And I certainly am of the opinion that agriculture is a very essential industry."

Reeve Charles Rush, Rungerford, told the body that during a recent convention, the Chamber of Agriculture spent several hours discussing this question, but got nowhere. He agreed with Reeve Nicolson for concurrence.

Again Reeve Elliott reminded council that there was a vast difference between postponement and exemption.

At this point Reeve Linn jumped to his feet. "What right," he demanded, "have farmers' sons to exemption any more than any one else? I have 'a boy over there and he did not look for exemption."

Reeve Ruah told the Marmora reeve that he did not wish to indulge in any personalities, but reminded him that a good many farmers' life earnings and savings were tied up in their crops and stocks. "Hastings County farmers," he declared, "were as loyal to the old land as the members of any other industry in the district. It is a shame to see their life earnings doing nothing for the want of help. Can your son take the place of a farmer's son?" he demanded of Reeve Linn. "There is a difference between you and me," he said good naturedly, "you have made your fortune and are living on it. I am earning mine now."

But Reeve Linn was not to be outdone. "When you are as old as I am," he grinned, "I hope you will have made your fortune and you will if you work as hard as I did."

Reeve Elliott rose to his feet at this point and told council that he did not agree with Reeve Nicolson's amendment nor the request for concurrence as it was read. "But," he added, "I am in favor of an amendment for the postponement of the four-months term of service for farmers' sons until winter or whatever period of the year it is necessary to the farmer."

Can't Take Places

Reeve Nicolson: "I agree that our boys are no better than any others to join the army, but I think they are engaged in necessary production. If others could take their place everything would go alright."

"All of these boys you claim are walking the streets and should be in the army, have been turned down because they are medically unfit," declared Reeve D'arcy Ketcheson of Frankford. "We have several cases in our village."

After hearing the request for concurrence read again by County Clerk Eric Denyes, Reeve Nicolson withdrew his motion due to misinterpretation of the request. The original motion that it be received and filed carried.

Warden Addresses Council

"I hope the year's business continues as in the past, on an economical basis, yet in the best interests of the ratepayers of the county," Warden W. J. Davis told members of the council in his opening address.

"These are trying times, he pointed out and expressed his pleasure at the fine showing the county has made to date in the current Victory Loan campaign. The response will be very encouraging to the boys overseas," he said, urging all to do their best in contributing to the loan.

Prior to the formal opening of the session the Rev. Dr. James Semple, minister of Bridge Street United Church, conducted the Invocation. Members of the staff of the National Anthem rang through Shire Hall at the conclusion of the June session.

Committee Named

Personnel of various committees named by the Warden included: Estimates Committee—J. H. Sprackett, R. J. Graham, W. H. Thrasher, Chas. Rush, George West, Geo. Caldwell, Thos. E. Fleming, G. B. Bedford, Eric R. Denyes, Jas. H. Haggerty and the Warden.

Equalization Committee—A. A. Harvie, J. A. Nickle, W. C. West, J. F. Wilson, J. A. Bell, Jas. A. Bell, C. E. Muffett, George MacDonald, Chas. E. S. Bongard, Arden Davis.

During the session council concurred in a resolution forwarded by the Welland County Council asking the Ontario Government to increase the present grants to schools.

Reeve Wilson of Sidney Township brought an invitation for fifteen members of the council to visit the Central Flying School at the Trenton base of the R.C.A.F. Lots were drawn and the fifteen lucky ones will visit the station this afternoon under Warden Davis.

Jeffry Lynn and Geraldine Fitzgerald in the novel and suspense story, "Flight From Destiny," also at the Belle with Eddie Albert and Joan Leslie in "The Great Mr. Nobody," gay laugh hit.

20% CUT IN TIRE COSTS HELPS MOTORISTS SAVE

Swamp B. F. Goodrich Dealers

Longer-Mileage Savings Come At Crucial Time when Economy Means Most to All Canadians

KITCHENER, Ont., June 11—While motorists ran dubious thumbs along worn treads, kicked tire walls experimentally, wondered whether or not they could afford new tires this summer, B. F. Goodrich announced biggest news of the season — a new "Life-Saver" Silvertown tire containing the miracle discovery "Duramin" cutting tire cost 20%. For every four miles that the original "Life-Saver" Silvertown gave, this new tire gives five.

"Duramin" is a combination of chemicals proven to be the finest defence against rubber's great enemies—heat, sunlight and oxygen—keeps rubber young and alive—resistant to the grinding wear of the roughest roads. Not content with a 20% reduction in tire costs alone, B. F. Goodrich went even further . . . added one "super" on top of another . . . super mileage . . . super blow-out protection . . . super safety from skids. Result—this year's Life-Saver Silvertown is the toughest wearing, safest - riding smoothest-rolling tire in B. F. Goodrich history. It gives you more protection against blow-outs, more safety from skids, more riding comfort—without any premium in price.

"SAFETY-WELD" NEW DEVELOPMENT IN TIRE CONSTRUCTION

"Safety-Weld" accomplishes for tires the same thing that singlecast welding of steel body with frame has done for the auto. It builds a steel-strong tire carcass where bonds top-chality Hi-Flex cords with "Duramin" toughened rubber compounds. It puts the famous "Golden-Ply" protection into every ply! Thus the new 1941 Life-Saver Silvertown is able to resist internal heat, withstand severe road shock, and protect against pot separations caused by high speed driving—proven to be "the safest thing on wheels."

TABERNACLE W.M.S.

The Women's Missionary Society of the Tabernacle United Church met in the Ladies' Parlor Tuesday afternoon, with President, Mrs. H. W. Frosts, in the chair.

The meeting opened with the National Anthem, followed by a hymn and the Lord's Prayer. A short business period and a reading "Mrs. Brent's New Committee" by Mrs. A. Fisher, preceded the worship service which began with a "Meditation" read by the President, emphasizing the importance of "Friendliness". Mrs. G. F. Reid had charge of the Scripture Study and Mrs. Percy Cornell contributed an appropriate solo with Mrs. M. F. Duff at the piano.

Mrs. Stanley Spafford of Alkena, was the speaker of the afternoon, and since Tabernacle is one of the time Mrs. Spafford's church-home, Mrs. Frosts said there was no need of a formal introduction to the ladies present, but Spafford's subject was "Community Friendship". She said that church women of today have many more important responsibilities to the "shifting population" of young people in urban and suburban communities, and that among the duties our young people are likely to become a "drifting population" because we have to say that the effort to keep in touch with them and so bring them in touch with the church.

"Our hospitality to newcomers need not be elaborate but it should cultivate a general neighborliness. Every W.M.S. should appoint a member of the "Community Friendship Committee".

Mrs. Douglas Rews expressed grateful appreciation to Mrs. Spafford for a very excellent address.

Mrs. Frosts called the attention of the ladies to the fine display of articles for the Supply Sale for September, also a sample of Community Friendship to other Canadians.

The meeting closed with a hymn and the Mizpah Benediction, after which afternoon tea was served by Mrs. Frikle with Mrs. R. Johnson, Mrs. S. Coon and Mrs. Fisher assisting.

Home Shampoo Requires Care

Lynne Roberts has beautiful, natural, curly hair.

By HELEN

SHOULDER length bobs dispensed with the fingar wave; long tresses put the undulation out of form. The fingar wave may no longer a crying need, lots of high school girls decided to do their own hair. The home shampooers are quite an army, and this day's beauty prescription is addressed to the young lady who launders her head and does up her glorylocks, in metal curlers.

Don't think that you can get your hair clean if you do a hurried job. You are dealing with a combination of shampoo stuff and the oil secreted by the sebaceous glands of the scalp. Rubbing a bar of soap over your tete and standing under the faucet will result in hair that is dull-finished and streaked, but curl won't stay in worth a cent.

Liquid Shampoo

Place a bar of liked soap in a quart measure jar, fill the jar with hot water, let stand three days before using. To half a glass of the clear top liquid add an equal amount of hot water. Begin with a rousing brushing and lift the hair away from the scalp. Turn on the bath spray—you can't do a good job without the spray—and flood away the surface dust.

Pour off a little of the soap, friction well, adding more suds. The first soapings won't be frothy. Use the spray, apply more soap. That time you should have lather like the beaten white of an egg.

Three Soapings

If the hair is thick, long and oily, you will need three soapings and as many rinsings, may have to use three glasses of the liquid soap. As you use up the contents of the jar, you can add more water. There will probably be enough shampoo for seven or eight shampoos.

If possible, dry your hair in the sunlight, which is life giving. Apply antiseptic lotion, wind and do them up in curlers. A shampoo every fortnight should be often enough.

Remember The Boys at Camp

A couple of weeks ago I began writing to me wanted to know what she could send to her husband in camp, to let him know she'd been thinking of him for a single minute. I suggested several things.

First was a good photograph of herself, as she had her husband had gone away with only a miserable snapshot, and didn't want him to think of her looking like that. For the girl, I suggested a good haircut and no hat. Above all, I urged her to try to look natural.

Then, I urged his favorite "eats", and a few other things which didn't take up much room. A day or two ago I received the following letter from her:

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"I had a good laugh when I read that you thought my husband would enjoy some of his favorite home cooking. He would, indeed, but it would probably cause the laughter of the entire Post—his favorite is corned beef and cabbage. He never has a great hand for sweets, but he's a fiend for homemade bread. But wouldn't it look pain to send a man bread and wouldn't it get stale by the time it reached there?

Well, I had a good laugh at the idea of sending corned beef and cabbage to the camp. He could get plenty of it down there. As far as the bread is concerned, a double wrapping of cellophane would keep it green and mouldy.

Other inquiries for suggestions have been legion. One young wife had a pretty good idea of what would appeal to a homesick husband. She kept a diary, and made different days of the week put down all the things that happened, each only in their home but in the home town.

A page which she sent me read: "Monday: Slenderizing breakfast, orange juice, black coffee, poached eggs; so starved by ten-thirty that I ate a quarter of pound of caramels. Had to pay six cents to the telephone company. Forgot to return book. Smoky (the cat) caught her first mouse. Whitewashed the chicken coop. Spend ten dollars chickens. Mrs. G's long-deferred baby arrived. Boy. They're considering names. I wanted to suggest lobster. Resisted buying summers saucepans. I hear the Govt. will need aluminum for airplanes—that's two we needn't anything special about the page of the diary sent, but think how homesick men, marooned not more than a year, would enjoy reading about three families' happenings.

Mothers, wives and sweethearts have requested me to inquire what they could send. Naturally, you wouldn't send anything too bulky for the limited space or ourrack life. You may send hard-to-get-things, things that won't be in the way, and you can send "eats".

I've used to say in those priggish little Christmas letters we were taught to write in school a couple of weeks before Christmas: "Thank you so much for your gift. I thank you, but the kind thought which prompted it." Write lots of this been poked at the sentimental preservation and the fibs it teach your children to tell, and not much truth in the old saw.

Then we can send them to turn out angel's food, fruitcake, fudges and pinochi. Write lots of love across the cover on the corner and the confectioner's across the way. It's the thought which counts when the soldier boy in Camp.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Hostess' Quandry

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When a woman wishes to take a couple to dinner at a restaurant where you cannot arrange for the payment of the meal in advance, just how do you proceed to pay the check and also the tip?

1.—Is it correct to give the man the money beforehand and let him pay the check?

3.—In a case like this, is it ever proper to tip the maid in advance?

4.—Shouldn't the hostess settle all expenses?

B.

1.—Be very direct and natural about paying the check. Remember you are giving this delightful meal in term of hospitality and there is no reason for being the slightest bit embarrassed. You do the inviting, and that means that the party is yours. The paying of the check and the tipping can be just as natural if you do not make it unnatural by being too conspicuous creep into your manner. Just take it all in the matter of course that it is it.

2.—This isn't necessary, and it will be easier and simpler for your guests if you take care of all the details of the evening.

3.—No. You give the tip as well as the check.

4.—Yes.

Hotel Tipping

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am planning to visit in a large city for a week and will be my first as a hotel. Will you please tell me how much should be the room tip and if it is necessary to tip elevator operators?

Proper Cleaning Saves Holiday Garb

What is so rare as a day in June, and what is so luscious as a ripe, red strawberry? Both are here this month with all the grand, exciting things happen. Like weddings and graduation and the Junior Red and O'-all Strawberry Festivals. We will graduate at our house soon, but Spring festival, they make us feel eternally young at heart.

So, if you haven't gotten an invitation to one of these festivals, festival you probably will. Or no doubt your church or club will. Or no doubt you'll give one. Perhaps you're saying "What'll I wear" or "I haven't a thing to wear." Well, you do have — take a look in your closet. Isn't that lovely white lace with the velvet bowknots? "Lovely" you think, "why, it looks like an old rag to me". It does, but that's because it is. Well, I'll tell you what you can do to it to make it look like new. All you need is a good dry cleaning and perhaps you'll treat lace, net and organdy summer dresses.

Perhaps you'd like to know why your dress looks so limp and languid when it was so stiff and perky when you got it. It's because materials of this kind have in them a substance known as "sizing". It's a kind of starch that gives laces and organdies that crispness and sheen. But this sizing is water-soluble. So if you happened to get caught in a shower, or where a spilled some water on your dress, its original glory is gone. Also just the moisture in the atmosphere, or a spell of dusty weather will soften sizing. But perhaps you didn't know this: The National Association of Dyers & Cleaners have found a way of restoring this sizing. They have a method of spraying it back after your garment is cleaned, so if you send that lace dress you scorned to a first class cleaner, he will return it to you looking as pretty, fresh and bouffant as the day you bought it.

And when you're thinking about strawberries and strawberry festivals, it's a good thing to know that a dependable dry cleaner will always be relied on to right minor tangles that occur in plaids and festival time. Just in case — you know, the way the rain sometimes pelts in your lap instead of your mouth.

Dr. Dafoe's Column on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Play Apparatus Recommended for Growing Children's Amusement

In this column I have made several references to the "jungle gym" as a piece of play apparatus for the physical development of this Dionne Quintuplet quintet. Each time I have had letters asking me what a jungle gym is, and so I've provided more details.

It is a worthwhile a gadget as any parent could install in the backyard for the entertainment and development of small children, and it requires little space.

The jungle gym which can be made by any handy man, is a square cage of ladders erected over a heavy sod which acts as a shock absorber in case of falls. It's usually about five feet high.

A horizontal bar, or a set of climbing bars with rungs at various heights, gives children the opportunity to develop their arms and leg muscles and, just as important, their confidence. Climbing ladders are natural instincts in children and should be given every chance to develop. The "jungle gym" is simply a grouping of such bars, and can be ordered by any small plumbing pipes.

Attached to it a slide can be attached to the same supports. A slide built not too high, with a ladder leading up to the platform at top, develops sureness of step balance and fearlessness.

Apartment-dwellers who do not have a backyard or terrace where there can be a jungle gym for the youngster, can at least place a swing in one of the doorways. No type of plaything is more important in childhood than exercising apparatus.

The Dionne Quintuplets had their first experience with the "jungle gym" when they were about two years old. They have outgrown it now but, for about three years, it was the most fun important piece of furniture we had around the place.

When the gym was first set up in the yard we were amazed for it seemed so high for the little tots and we were so used to taking extra special care of them that I was fearful of injuries. So at first when they climbed, I had nurses beside them to catch them if they fell. But the Quints quickly began clambering over it like little monkeys. Of course, they had their falls. Some of them right from the top.

One day Yvonne fell, when not much more than two, from the top of the apparatus, and its rather forcefully on her seat. The nurses and I ran over, expecting to find her howling, but not a bit of it. Just sat there, uttered a very expressive "Oh", and then got up. She didn't cry, but climbed right back to the top of it again.

For those who have the Quints considered the gym as a game. If they made a mistake they felt they were letting the gym beat them. So they went back to ride it. Consequently it wasn't long before they were acting like circus acrobats on it. Many a time I have heard a gasp of anticipation go up from amongst spectators as one or two of the Quints performed some extraordinary looking feat or other.

The effect of it in the development of their muscles and strength in their arms and backs and legs was apparent. The apparatus contributed both happiness and health.

Fashion Flashes

A FAVORITE with many of us is the simply styled, shirtwaist type of afternoon frock, fashioned in such rich fabrics as metallic cloth or metal shot crepe. These frocks are going to stage a comeback for autumn and you may look for them among late summer advance fashions.

DRUG PROFESSION SUBJECT OF TALK

College of Pharmacy Inspector Addresses the Kiwanis Club

Achievement reports and an interesting address on the drug profession made the weekly Kiwanis luncheon at the Queens Hotel on Tuesday an enjoyable affair. A number of the chairmen reported for their respective committees and William Smith, of the College of Pharmacy and inspector for this district told of some of the trials and tribulations of the druggist. The president of the club presided and the guests included officers from the R.C.A.F. Air Station at Trenton and members of Victory Loan Committee, who were cordially welcomed to the luncheon by Eddie Logan. Al Reynolds collected the several fines and Harold Carruthers directed the community singing with Russell Wotten at the piano.

Jack McIntosh reported for the members, who journeyed to Oshawa last Wednesday stating it was the greatest inter-city visit he ever attended and complimented the Oshawa Club on the fine entertainment provided for the visitors. P. C. MacLaurin requested that more Kiwanian women turn out for work for the Red Cross and told the members to inform their wives and sweethearts that meeting days will be on Friday instead of Thursday as Red Cross headquarters. Ray Grant reported for the agricultural committee stating that the Poultry Project was progressing favorably and that the children were quite enthusiastic and that their pets were developing at a rate among the chicks due to the excellent care they have received. Jack McIntosh, chairman of the membership committee stated that eight new members had been added to the rolls since the first of the year and there was a large number of prospects to be interviewed.

Something Thanked

President Jim Barclay thanked the House Committee and the Program Committee for the excellent service they had given the club. Ormonde Dinsmore, Chairman of the Public Affairs Committee, who is making arrangements for the Parade of Floats, that will be viewed in this city on Friday asked for the co-operation of the members. He stated it was proposed to have the floats under cover twice until one thirty but this was in the proposal stage only. He requested that all cars be kept off the route of the Cavalcade and that Kiwanian members and the committee every way possible.

Harry Seldon introduced the speaker of the day, Bill Smith of the College of Pharmacy in Toronto, while Kiwanian appreciation was expressed by Stan Barclay. Mr. Smith told of the requirements necessary in an academic way for a young man to enter the drug profession. He stated that he must have Honor Matriculation in nine subjects and while serving an apprenticeship of three years can only fall in one year, while he must take up two years work in Pharmacy in Toronto. He admitted the apprentice was not paid very much in salary but stated that the druggist was taking the responsibility of teaching him and could not afford to pay a large salary. The speaker told his listeners that druggists were required to purchase more licences than any other business and that it was necessary to keep track of all prescriptions filled, also all the narcotic and poisons sold. "A prescription is not legal without the signature and

North American holds plane orders for the British and American governments amounting to $100,000,000, and the United States government has indicated that unless the strike is ended at once and work resumed, Washington will step in and take over the plant. THE WAR TODAY

By DON GILBERT
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

The Royal Air Force is believed to have located and bombed at Brest the German cruiser Prinz Eugen, the 10,000-ton companion of the battleship Bismarck in its break into the North Atlantic last month.

Only hours after the sinking of the Prinz Eugen's sister ship, presenting a good target for British bombers, to a port which has been so frequently and successfully attacked by the R.A.F.) Already two battleships of Germany's small fleet, the Scharnhorst and the Gneisenau, have been put out of action while docked at Brest.

These 26,000-ton modern battleships, however, are believed to have been damaged in action at sea and to have limped into Brest for repairs. There they were attacked by the R.A.F. while not in sea-going condition. But the Prinz Eugen has not been reported in action, and with its 32 knots and wide cruising range, might well have eluded British patrols in the North Sea and reached a safer German haven.

Yet it will be recalled that the Bismarck herself, crippled by aerial torpedoes from the Fleet Air Arm, was headed for Brest when intercepted and sunk by the British fleet 400 miles west of the French port, Ne Cedes Made of Bit.

MEIGHEN WANTS GOV'T CONTROL OF LARGE SALARIES

Believes That Interests of Shareholders in Large Corporations Should be Protected

DANDURAND OPPOSED

Ottawa, June 11. — (CP)— A Bill imposing budget increases in income tax rates received second reading in the Senate last night after the Conservative Leader, Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, said he believed "the time has come when it is a province of government to exercise some control over salaries".

"I don't mean government salaries—I mean corporation salaries," he said. "I have never been a believer in those big, stupendous, mountainous salaries".

Senator Meighen said he had always complained initiative and drive got ahead in the private enterprise system. Nevertheless, salary control should be exercised in the interests of shareholders".

He said the minority shareholder "has nothing to say" in regard to fixing vast salaries of high officers of corporations.

It must be remembered, said the government leader, Hon. Raoul Dandurand, that many persons drawing large salaries were devoting all their time to their business interests. They had no time to undertake other financial duties for the security of their families, remaining employed because of their salaries.

Providing for appointment of an Associate Deputy Minister of Labor, another Bill amending the Labor Department Act provoked considerable discussion.

At one time Senator Meighen, there was one minister in the Labor Department with an $8,000 salary, but cost of the country now of the Deputy Minister of Labor office "must be close to $25,000."

He said the office now has a Deputy Minister, an Associate Deputy Minister and another assistant.

"We had a war then," he said, "but we didn't have to man the Labor Department to the war footing."

Senator Dandurand read a statement from the Labor Minister, Hon. Norman McLarty, on the Bill, which referred to the growing importance of the Labor Department activities.

"As soon as the difficulty appears, it is turned over to the Department of Justice—the Labor Department wishes its hands", interjected Senator Meighen.

The Bill was given second reading.

FIRE DESTROYS SIDNEY TWP. BARN

Farm Tenanted by Carman Sine and Loss Estimated at $2,000

Third of Sidney, (Special)—Fire of an undetermined origin completely destroyed a large frame barn on the farm tenanted by Carman Sine, 4th Concession of Sidney, shortly after the noon hour on Tuesday last. The fire was discovered by Mr. Sine's six-year-old son, who immediately ran to the house to inform his parents, but the fire had gained considerable headway and it was impossible to save the structure. Little more than an hour after fire was discovered the barn was totally razed.

Neighbors hearing answering the alarm which was raised were able to save several articles of machinery from the blazing building but a grain binder, some grain, and several hens were lost in the flames. Later in the afternoon neighbors assisted in tearing up sheds in which to milk cows.

The farm on which the barn was situated belong to Mr. J. C. McCarthy of Belleville. Loss to the barn will be in the neighborhood of $2,000, while the contents of the building were partially covered by insurance.

Representatives In Netherlands Ask to Come Home

Tokyo, June 10 (AP)—The newspaper Yomiuri said today the Japanese Government had been asked by its representatives interested in economic negotiations in the Netherlands East Indies to call them home.

The newspaper said it believed such action was being seriously considered in the meetings of Japanese leaders in Tokyo devoted to the Netherlands reply to Japanese trade proposals.

The Tokyo press, meanwhile, blamed Great Britain and the United States for failure of the Indies to meet Japanese demands for a great share of the Indies' rubber resources from the islands. Government sources maintained a reserved attitude.

U.S. Newswomen Go Hungry While Lunch Waits

Camp Borden, June 11 (CP). — Ten visiting American newspaper women drop their pert powdered noses, failed yesterday to take to Camp Borden.

They were defeated and turned back at the north barrier entrance by military regulations that said "no women on week days."

The scribes, invited to tour Ontario by the Provincial Travel and Tourist Bureau had been greeted at the Canadian border by Premier Hepburn and told to have a good look around but all they got to see at Camp Borden, the Dominion's largest military camp, were grinning guards and amused but keen first military police.

The newspaper women drove up to the gates of Camp Borden in a chartered bus accompanied by a representative of the Ontario Government, Douglas Oliver, Director of Travel and Publicity.

"Halt!" said a military-faced guard. Oliver explained that the group was due for lunch with officers of the Royal Canadian Air Force. The guard shook their heads. They had no instructions to let the party in.

Long-distance telephone calls were put through to officials at Ottawa but the officials weren't available. The girls waited at the roadside. They held a council of war.

"Go try your southern accent on the guards", Margaret Kernodle of the New York staff of The Associated Press, who comes from North Carolina, was instructed. The guards smiled approvingly but military regulations held.

"Mon like red," Marie Tighe of the New York Post, who wore a bright red coat, was advised. "Vou try." She did. Other girls patted the handsome soldier who had adopted the guard post.

But the army held out.

Two buses went by. Hunger attacked the attackers. Several headed for a nearby C.C.A. canteen just outside the gates and when they came back of "delicious butter tarts" being available, the other girls succumbed.

The commanding officer came through. "Mr. Eric McCuaig was very sorry. The guards were very sorry. The military police, who arrived suddenly from somewhere, were very sorry. Flying Officer Hughes, who came down to meet the party was very sorry.

And lunch had been all ready, too.

Warden of Hastings County Signs Scroll Of Honor After Race Against Time

The far-flung districts of Hastings County will be officially represented on the Scroll of Honor that will accompany the Victory Torch of Victory to Britain in the near future. After a race against time, Warden W. J. Davis, who through ill health of his own was unable to put in an appearance at the Town Hall last night, finally affixed his signature to the document before it resumed its journey to the eastern port of embarkation for overseas. Representatives which caused a long delay to the county official were finally brushed aside and he raced from his home in Maple Leaf, near the northern borders of the county, to Belleville. But he was too late. The ceremonies had concluded and the Torch and Scroll put away.

County officials came to his aid and rushed him to Trenton where the Torch and Scroll had been placed in the police station there under guard.

It was but the work of a moments to produce the scroll, and there perhaps occurred one of the most unique signing ceremonies in the history of the armabdic articles. With police, guards and officials looking on, Hastings County's official signature was affixed to the historic document.

Three One-Hitters Tossed In Shibe Park this Season; Warneke Last to Turn Trick

Bobby Feller Wins 13th of Season and Eighth in Row Beating Senators

BRIDGES FANS 14

By JUDSON BAILEY
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

If the fans at Philadelphia don't get a no-hit ball game there this season they are going to be greatly disappointed.

Various National League pitchers have provided four one-hitters at Shibe Park already and three of them have been crowded into the last eight days.

Hank Gornicki, St. Louis Cardinals' rookie who since has returned to the minors, held the Phillies to a lone safety on May 3. Thornton Lee of the Phils duplicated the trick against Chicago Cubs June 5. Three nights later Johnny Vander Meer of Cincinnati Reds pitched what some of his teammates call his second no-hitter, giving Phils only one very scratchy single off shortstop Eddie Joost's glove.

Yesterday Lone Warneke, the lean veteran of the Cardinals, joined the select circle with a 3-0 shutout of the Phils in which the only blow was a line single by Danny Litwhiler, the home club's first man up in the first inning.

There was no other fine pitching yesterday. Bob Feller achieved his 13th victory of the season and eighth straight by holding Washington Senators to four hits while Cleveland Indians slapped out a 4-1 decision. It was the 14th loss in 17 games for the hapless Senators.

Yankees Now Second

Steve Peek, rookie knuckleballer of New York Giants, had a one-hitter going into the ninth inning against Chicago White Sox. He weakened to allow five singles and three runs in that final inning, but the Yankees won easily 8-3 and took over second place in the American League.

Tommy Bridges, the little veteran of Detroit Tigers, put on a strikeout show against Philadelphia Athletics, fanning 11 batters. He was in the late innings and had to be rescued by Al Benton as Detroit won 4-2. Benton worked the last 1 1/3 innings and received credit for the triumph, which was achieved with two runs in the ninth on Barney McCosky's pinch double and singles by Pat Mullin and Charley Gehringer.

A night game between Boston Red Sox and Chicago White Sox was postponed.

Dodgers Cut Their Slump

Brooklyn Dodgers cut short their slump with a 6-3 victory over Pittsburgh Pirates, who were held to six hits by their old nemesis, Fred Fitzsimmons. It was the second start and fifth appearance of the year for Fitz, who beat the Pirates six out of six last season and five out of six the year before.

Johnny Vander Meer achieved his sixth success of the season by scattering nine hits as Cincinnati Red beat Boston Braves 4-3 for their ninth conquest in eleven games and took over third place in the National League. Frank McCormick graduated from a batting slump, hit three doubles to figure in all the Reds' runs.

Vern Olsen pitched Chicago Cubs to an 11-3 victory over New York Giants on seven well-spaced hits, while Lou Novikoff waded into Fiddler Bill McGee with their wax dolls yesterday. It was McGee's fifth straight loss as a Giant.

Baseball's Oldest Rookie Trudges To Mound June 25

Dallas, June 11—(AP)—Baseball's oldest rookie will trudge to the mound here June 25 and roll back the years for Dallas of the Texas Baseball League.

James Patrick (Snipe) Conley, who quit professional baseball when most present-day players were watching through knot-holes, is coming home to grab again at the glory he knew in the 30's.

President George Schrops of the Dallas Club announced today he had signed Conley and believed he could win in the Texas League.

At 46 he will be baseball's oldest rookie. Because under Texas league rules, which classify a rookie as one who has not played in the loop of A-1 classification or higher within two years, Conley will just be starting.

Schrops believes Conley can win because he can use his spitball. Under league rules a spitballer who was in the loop in 1926 can return and continue to throw his spitter. Conley started in professional baseball in 1912. The husky right-hander has a perfect Series and Texas record with two victories and no defeats with Cincinnati in 1918.

Conley holds the Texas League record for consecutive victories, with one of them a no-hit, no-run performance.

WINGS, ROYALS IN VIRTUAL TIE AS RUNNER-UPS

Bears Beat Montreal Three Straight to Give Team Commanding Lead

LEAFS DIVIDE

(By the Associated Press)
Rochester Red Wings, eager to make a three-cornered affair of the current International League baseball race, can't complain of lack of co-operation from the leading Newark Bears.

The Bears have done their bit by taking three straight victories from the second-place Montreal Royals and as a result the Wings and Royals are in a virtual tie for the runner-up spot today, three games behind Newark.

Last night's 5-0 triumph over Baltimore Orioles lifted the Wings within .003 per cent of Montreal, when Royals dropped an 8-2 decision to the league leaders.

Rochester's Jim Bivin pitching his first complete game since returning from New York baseball camp, muffed whitewashed the Royals with four hits.

Ky Vandenberg turned in the shutout for Baltimore, holding Baltimore to six safeties and striking out 10.

Detroit lowered Baltimore to within a half game of the seventh-place Syracuse Chiefs, who split a twilight-night-double-header with the Buffalo Toronto Leafs. The Chiefs took the overtime opener in the eighth 6-5 while Leafs won the nightcap 3-2.

Syracuse's marked the twilight contest, with the sixth Toronto mishaps paving the way for the winning run.

Buffalo evened its three-game series with Jersey City at one all, beating the Little Giants 6-5.

Virgil Trucks earned the route for Bisons, surviving a shaky start. He walked one and allowed four in notching his seventh victory.

BILLY CONN DUELS VERBALLY DAILY WITH MANAGER

Johnny Ray Worn Nearly to Frazzle by Antics of His Fistic Charge

CONN TAKES CHANCES

By SID FEDER
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

Newark, Nr. Lakes, N.J., June 11—(AP)—The big question up here in the open-air wilderness that surrounds Billy Conn's training camp isn't whether Billy will be right for Joe Louis next week, but whether Manager Johnny Ray is going to be right.

At his calmest, worryin' Johnny is about as sedate as a jumping beans on the loose. But at the current high rate of Conn's wear and tear on his nerves, it is doubtful that the little guy who brought "junior" to the fore in the Marquis Queensberry ship match is even going to be able to step into the ring Wednesday night, much less work in Billy's behalf.

For instance, Johnny came out of his cottage one day before dawn, looking for Conn. He happened to glance around and there, taking a sunbath, was Billy, balanced carelessly on the edge of the cottage roof. Johnny let out a yell of fright who could have become a hospital case for the duration of the war.

Johnny staggered off, moaning with the exhaustion that a gale which may come within shouting distance of hurricane force. Polo Grounds was lying hap-hazardly on the edge of the roof spoke.

There was some horseplay one morning early this week between Conn and Johnny Ray, the trainer. In the course of a watchmaking duel, the latter drew a water glass bounced off the bridge of Conn's nose and Billy's left hand Johnny 10 years.

"That Junior," he mourned, "is strictly no good. If it wasn't for the title, I'd root for Louis next Wednesday night."

VIKING LASSIES DEFEAT DEACON GALS BY 22 TO 17

Mike Powers' Charges Score First Win of Season in Girls' Loop

HEAVY HITTING

Rallying in the latter stages and scoring nine runs in the sixth inning Mike Powers' Viking lassies chalked up their first win in the City Ladies' Softball League in a free-hitting contest at the Armouries last evening when they defeated the Deacon gals 22 to 17.

In winning the Vikings pounded the offerings of two Deacon hurlers hard and without mercy once they rallied, while Rita Rabble, labouring on the hilltop for the winners, pitched the entire game for the winners. Youthful Jean Cornel started for the Deacons and fared until she developed a wild streak in the sixth and was replaced by Peggy Shufelton, who in turn failed to stem the tide of Viking hits once they got under-rolling and took the lead.

After a shaky start, during which they booted the ball for continued errors, the Deacons rallied defensively in the latter stages as Marg Tunmon and Norma Lee turned in some sparkling plays around the keystone sack. Running catches by Jean Cornel, Nora Weeks and Betty Bangar in right fielded for the Deacons.

Scene Nine in One Frame

Deacons went out in order with an even dozen runs in the initial three innings, Jean Cornel leading the Vikings 14 to 9 when the Vikings rallied with a nine-run splurge in the sixth. Jean Cornel helped her own cause with two circuit blows and singles with Nora Weeks had a brace of doubles and two singles and Sarah Rose one-base blows for the Deacons.

Norma Baker led the winning Vikings on the attack with two doubles and a single, while Rita Adams had the game's only triple and a single to boot. Marg Zebedee counted four one-base hits and Dale M. Tunmon, Mike Powers' new-found shortstop, three.

The line-ups:

Vikings: B. Cook, 1f.; M. Zebedee, c.; S) Adams, c.f.; Chambers, r.f.; R. Cook, 3b.; Adams, 3b; Maker, 2b; Tunmon, s.s. and Rabble, p.

Deacons: Sharpe, c.f.; Ridley, 2b; Samain, s.s.; Weeks, lb; Woodhouse, c.; Cornel, lf. and c.f.; Shufelton and S. Barzagar, r.f.; Taylor, r.f. and Scollick, p.

Between Innings
GOSSIP NEWS COMMENT

The fact that Joe Louis has fallen considerably below par in bringing down challengers for his crown of late has caused some fistic experts and wishful thinking fans to decide that the champion is on the down-grade. In his last three bouts, with Munio Sinto and Buddy Baer, Louis has failed to stop the first opponent, after having been his best. However, this may lead to the investigation of the deadly effectiveness of his fist. Any opponent who will adapt his style to offset Louis' particular style of attack, and who is well and isn't scared to death of Joe before he enters the ring, will undoubtedly give Louis trouble. Whether the man to accomplish this feat is Pittsburgh Billy Conn remains in the lap of the gods, however.

A week tonight Billy Conn gets his chance at Louis' crown in the Polo Grounds and if Conn does not construct a bad case of fright, Louis will face the most tantalizing and feather-footed opponent of his glorious ring career, Jack Miley, well known American sports writer, who appears to be slightly partial to Conn, points out the fact that Conn has beaten some really good boys and compared with Harry Greb and a necktie but sported a costly diamond stud and a beard, is dead at 97.

Miley says: "Conn is the only boy Louis is wearing thin as an attorney and if Conn can't do it, would mean new ring interest will 'Uncle Sam' Jacobs knows this. Jacobs must have been some heavyweight fighter or else he would not have recently signed a contract for Conn's future engagements. As years remember, Gene Tunney defended Jack Dempsey's title away from him and hitting "The Manassy" while going away, which is an art in itself. Does Conn possess this ring attribute?

Do you remember when decisively outplaying his rivals in the closing chukkers, the United States Men the Westchester Cup international polo series two years ago Tommy Hitchcock Jr. scored only 9-4. It was the second straight victory for the Americans, who reduced the third game to the status of an exhibition.

"I used to beat out a lot of bunts at Kansas City, but up here the infield basepaths are almost up to the grass, watching me," moaned Phil Rizzuto, shortstop for the Yankees, last week. "If they played there for Joe DiMaggio, they'd have their heads torn off."

The Belleville Golf and Country Club resume their city golf series at the east end club today. Last week the Bay of Quinte "duke and duchess" of golf battled home links 2 1-2 to 21 1-2, but the Belleville players are predicting revenge on their own shorter and trickier course today. Again in September when the two clubs meet again in two 18-hole matches, one at each course, and the city golf championship will be decided upon the four games. Last week Harry Ridley (Belleville) matched Tommy Bowen of Little, the Country Club pro, and lost 2 1-2 to a half. Ken Bowen and Harry crowe clear weather today and on the more difficult Belleville course may well admit Bill down to his own size. Actually the results say little as the way a top-notch golfer is simply because he may admit defeat and is always trying to hole out from the most difficult angles, they tell us. The Belleville golf team always play "hot golf" on their own tricky course. Golf is the most tense game played and it is the player with the greatest iron nerve who generally wins in tournament play. It is the courage in the clutch that wins in golf and those who can regard his slices, and bad breaks into the hazards who generally win. This holds good whether playing for the American open or merely in a local tourney, such as today's at the Crown at the Isles golf club.

Only one standard was reached at the Eastern Ontario track and field meet, held at Kingston last Saturday under the sponsorship of the Ontario Athletic Association. Bobby Wilson of St. Michael's Academy, Belleville, ran the 100 yard dash in 10.8 secs, this being the only record set during the entire meet. Congrats, Bobby. According to Kingston Scribe Bill Hall the competition was keen and interesting, but Wilson was the only athlete to reach the quality desired. Incidentally we understand Bobby's mother, who helped to train him for the meet, was a feminine track star in her own right in her younger days in Toronto.

There was a lot of lusty hitting at the armouries last night when the Vikings staged a belated rally to score nine runs in the sixth frame and snatch a 22 to 17 win from the lasses from Deacon. Mike Powers has plugged up the Viking' sheep-like leak and Marg Tunmon, sister of "Tip" Tunmon will shortly breed Norma Lee and hall player who is now in the R.C.A.F. Incidentally Marg Tunmon was seen over the Deacon bench last night and apparently the urge to coach a baseball outfit with girls' softball could not be overcome, as the former mentor of the old National Maids and Beavers is back again. Actually all the Deacons need is a little help in the coaching department at their end and they'll be the team to beat in the league. Skipper Scollick's nine have plenty of individual ability but their lack of team play is an art in itself. Does Connie Mack play baseball?

Do you remember when decisively outplaying his rivals in the closing chukkers, the United States Men the Westchester Cup international polo series two years ago Tommy by defeating Argentina 9-4. It was the second straight victory for the Americans, who reduced the third game to the status of an exhibition.

Jack Dempsey, the Manassa Mawler and former world's heavyweight boxing champion of the world, will referee a wrestling card at Toronto next month. Jack Dempsey has never failed to hold the title; sometimes in or out of the ring and is perhaps one of the most popular celebrities in the history of fisticuffs, as he will always be remembered as "the man who knocked out the Fall Guy." He will broadcast over the Brantford radio at 4:45 p.m. this evening.

Aldon (Lefty) Wilkie, who hurled the Pilsbury Pirates to a shutout win over the Phillies recently, is a native of Saskatoon, Sask., where he starred in baseball, football, soccer Canadian who is making good in the ranks of the major leagues.

Did You Know—all of the first division clubs in the National League are batting with the exception of the Giants!....Leo Warneke hurled a one-hitter as the Cards blanked the Phillies 3-0 yesterday...It was the third one-hitter to be pitched in Shibe Park, Philadelphia, inside of a week....Tommy Hughes, of the home club and Johnny Vander Meer of Reds being the other two moundsmen to turn the trick....Vander Meer seems to have found himself at the age of 24 after two years in the minors....What's really the matter with Mel Ott?...he no more "off days" in his many years than most of the others....Connie....."I need plenty of boxing experience." Louis is quoted saying, which would indicate he expects Conn to stand off and spar.....That feller Feller is in again....."Rapid Robert" chalked up his eighth in a row and his 13th of the season by letting the Senators down with four fielding errors today....The Yanks beat Chicago and the Bees and Reds are set at first place, with a big Yank and Indian double header today....Throw it back and let it grow.

The Stars Say

For Thursday, June 12
By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

A MOST exhilarating and promising day may be heralded by very auspicious planetary vibrations, with the forecast of the element of surprise, suddenness, strange and intriguing adventures and experiences, all of which combine to enhance personal prestige, popularity and happiness as well as to put the financial status on a prosperous and productive basis. Unexpected opportunities to achieve cherished aims and ideals may be looked for but there is a hint not to be carried away by over-ambitious projects or by the peculiar eccentricities or extraordinary developments. Change is involved but be watchful in public contacts or relations.

Those whose birthday it is may be assured of a pleasant year of unexpected advancement, much progress with increased popularity, prestige and fulfilled ambitions, attainment of many cherished hopes and wishes, both practical, material and aspirational. An all around expansive and warming as well as surprising sentiment combines, the only menace being a too exhilarated or ambitious pace, with some constriction and an eye to public antagonism developing. It is a time for advance upon the highest goals and ideals of happiness.

A child born on this day should be excellently endowed for the pursuing of success and accomplishment which will crown its expansive and generous life. It may have practical talents as well as much cultural and humanitarian ambition.

CEMETERY HOUSE DAMAGED BY FIRE

$1,000 Loss Sustained When Fire Destroys Small Shed and Summer Kitchen

Picton — Fire Tuesday did damage amounting to more than one thousand dollars to the home occupied by Mrs. Cora Golden, superintendent of Glenwood cemetery, and located on that property. Mrs. Golden and friends were just starting dinner when a small shed was noticed blazing and this soon spread quickly to a summer kitchen, which was fitted and some articles burned. The dining room was ruined by smoke, water and the heat, the walls being blackened, plaster fell and the paint was blistered. The entire contents of this room were practically ruined. The front room and bedrooms above escaped damage but some in an attic over the kitchen were damaged by smoke and water. Most of the furniture in these rooms was some of it being blistered by the heat.

Firemen found the blaze a stubborn one to control since the fire might lurk between the outside partition. Cause of the blaze is not known, but since there was no fire in the summer kitchen or shed, detective wiring is given as the probable cause.

I.O.B.A. Members Entertained

Eighteen members of Picton I.O. B.A. went to Kingston on Monday where they were entertained by Major Dr Derry Lodge, which they had previously entertained in Picton.

Captain Widdis inspected Picton Collegiate Cadets on Tuesday and highly complimented them on their showing.

Transfer Protested

Action of the Settlement Committee of the Bay of Quinte Conference in transferring Rev. Mr. Gilbert, student minister on Cherry Valley circuit to Perth Road, near Kingston, is meeting with vigorous opposition from all parts of that circuit, where he has been stationed during the past year.

The change was not requested and came as a complete surprise to the members of the congregations, when it was announced, a delegation went to the Settlement Committee at the conference but were not satisfied with the reasons they gave for the transfer. An interview with a professor at Queens University which Mr. Rice attends reveals that it was recommended that the latter remain at Cherry Valley and also commended the work he is doing.

Following service at Cherry Valley Sunday morning, the congregation unanimously voted in favor of retaining Mr. Rice and in the evening a delegation representing the congregation waited on Rev. J. O. McKee, Wellington, a former chairman of the conference, and asked his help.

Has Done Fine Work

Mr. Rice has been very active in Alfred, proving a gifted preacher, a good organizer and a talented musician. Under his leadership the various churches under his pastorate and the adherents of the church are strongly opposed to a change and feel that they have had a fine preacher replace him. The feeling is that an injustice is being done Mr. Rice in the transfer.

Sandy Burrows Serves as Warning

An occurrence at Picton Air Station late Saturday night brings to attention the fact that civilians have no business inside these grounds unless on official business. In this event, permission can be secured at the guard house at the Gun Gate, and those, who have sought admission have always found the guards and others most obliging in this matter. However, there may be those, who seek admittance to the grounds, who have no business there and Saturday's occurrence should serve as a warning to them.

Late last night a civilian was challenged by the armed sentries while attempting to get over the fence surrounding the station. He took no notice of the challenge and then, the sentry fired two shots at him, whereupon he turned and managed to run away. Had he been hit, it would have been entirely his own fault. This is a government station and with a war on such property must be properly guarded, and the public will no doubt take warning.

In connection with the air station being located here, there is the possibility that items of government property might come into the hands of the public, and it should be understood that receipts of such property are liable to prosecution as receivers of stolen goods. Those so marked and can be identified. No such cases have as yet been learned but it is hoped a warning will guard against any such occurence.

The public will understand that the authorities are called upon to protect all government property.

Victory Loan Rally

A rousing Victory Loan rally was held at Cherrily Valley hall on Monday evening the large crowd fully occupying the seating accommodation provided.

Guest speaker was Cpl. M. Gupwell who is an armourer with the Royal Air Force at Picton Bombing and Gunnery School. He wears the coveted Air Gunners Badge, indicating service in the present conflict and a year ago was on active service with the Canadian Air Striking Force operating in France and Luxembourg. He was twice shot down but escaped serious injury and also took part in the evacuation at Dunkirk.

The speaker is a most interesting talk on his experiences.

The program was presided over by Philip F. Doolittle, County Publicity chairman. Rev. J. B. Creegan led in prayer and also gave a five-minute address.

LIGHT ACTION AT TORBUR

London, June 11 (CP)—Considerable patrol activity has broken out at Halfaya Pass, in the no-man's land west of Salum, Egypt, but not enough to indicate any major attack is developing, a British source declared today.

The Axis German planes again had raided British-held Tobruk, in Libya, but with little damage. Twenty raids were reported to have slowed down fighting.

Spencer Tracy and Mickey Rooney the screen's two greatest actors at the Belle today in their eagerly awaited sequel to "Boys Town," the memorable production which fetched them both Academy Awards.

Shaw Confesses He is Trying to Die But Can't

London, June 11.—(CP)—Bernard Shaw, nearing 85, confesses he is trying to die but just can't do it.

Writing to the president of the Lewis Vegetarian Society he said yesterday that if the war goes on much longer "vegetarianism will become compulsory and "people will have to starve."

"I've lived quite long enough", he said, "and have been trying to but simply can't do it. A ringle beefsteak would finish me but I cannot bring myself to touch one.

"I am oppressed with the dead of living persons. I find the only disadvantage in vegetarianism".

Says Reich 'Recognizes Japan's Interest in Dutch East Indies'

Berlin, June 11 (AP). — A Nazi spokesman asserted today that Germany "recognizes Japan's interest" in the Netherlands East Indies.

(Japan has made demands on the East Indies government for exports of oil and other war essential materials, but the Indies government has refused to meet the Japanese requests in full.)

I love my wife, but oh! you Strawberry Blonde! Jimmie Cagney as the naughty boy of the nineties just can't make up his mind whether it's sweet Olivia de Havilla or fiery Rita Hayworth he's in love with in "The Strawberry Blonde" coming to the Capitol Theatre tomorrow.

Honeymoon Gold

by PEGGY DERN

—Why should I?" answered Brooks curtly. "After all, it's YOUR honeymoon."

"But not yours! I suppose you just came along for the ride!" demanded Natalie, hurt and trying to hide the fact from him.

"Something like that," answered Brooks, his tone as hostile as hers.

Natalie had a moment of impatience and resentment, after all, wasn't he making a most terrific row about nothing? It hadn't been meant to embarrass him by forgetting for the moment that she was married to him; by giving her own name instead of his at the hospital. She was sorry, but surely he was making a mountain out of a mole hill. She was tired, nervous, strained. She had to set her teeth to bite back some angry words along this line as Brooks sat into the car beside her and they drove to the hotel.

Thanks to the fact that this small town was on one of the main north-south highways, and thus enjoyed a great deal of traffic, it had a surprisingly good hotel. Brooks and Natalie were given two large rooms, each with twin beds, and a connecting bath, but there was no private sitting room, and when Natalie elected to have dinner sent up they agreed to have it served in her room.

When Brooks came in a little later, after the waiter had arrived with laden trays, Natalie was busy with her opened bags, selecting various bits of lingerie and stowing them carefully away in her gold-filled overnight case.

"You are repacking? You—what are you doing?" Brooks demanded and there was a certain sharp, almost angry quality in the last words.

Natalie lifted a flushed face and eyes that were almost shy. "I'm getting together a trousseau for someone who never had any pretty clothes, and so will appreciate those even more than I could," she told him eagerly. "That poor child back there—Coralie—who works in an overall factory and didn't dare get married until she discovered she and her Johnny could be the guests of an eccentric millionaire on some crazy island—"

"Halcyon Island?" demanded Brooks sharply.

"Why yes—how did you know?" she asked curiously.

"There's been a good bit in the newspapers lately," answered Brooks. "My firm handled a lot of old Mr. Markham's securities, stocks, bonds and the like. Naturally we knew about the island."

"Tell me about it," urged Natalie, snapping the lid of the pigskin case and sinking into the chair that Brooks held for her at the table.

Brooks answered her questions politely, his manner courteous, almost aloof. But Natalie was genuinely interested in what he was telling her. She forgot for a little that he was not in love with her, and that he resented the scene in the office of the hospital earlier in the afternoon.

"So THAT'S the sort of honeymoon those two were so excited about," marveled Natalie, when Brooks had told her what he knew about Halcyon Island.

"Well, if you spent your life in the slums of some large city, working in an overall factory or an automobile shop, suppose the idea of thirty days of freedom beside the sea in a place like Halcyon Island would seem pretty wonderful," Brooks reminded her.

"Yes, I suppose so," she agreed. "Of course, if you were as terribly in love as those two are, I suppose most any place would seem pretty wonderful as long as you were together."

Brooks looked at her curiously and she thought there was a slightly derisive expression in his eyes.

"In love, my dear Natalie—don't tell me you believe in anything so ancient and old-fashioned as love!" he drawled. "Not the famous and lovely Natalie Schuyler, most modern and sophisticated of ladies! Love is for—oh, for chambermaids and girls who work in overall factories—"

"Don't you believe in love, Brooks?" she asked almost timidly, and would not quite meet his eyes.

"I? My dear, don't be quaint! Remember all the divorces and the broken homes and such wrecks that our friends strew about them?" he asked, and now she was sure of that derision. "People in Circle's world need a touch of glamor in their drab lives, and the emotion known as love supplies it. It's free, you see, and so they can afford it. Girls like you, who can afford anything in the world that attracts their fancy, have no need for anything as cheap as love—"

"Brooks, I'm sorry about this afternoon," she cut in clearly. "Sorry that for just a moment I forgot about being married. I know now that I should have asked you to see the people in the office at the hospital. It's only that—well, I've never had anybody; I could turn to for things like that. I've always had to do it myself—"

"I quite understand," said Brooks, and was polite and pleasant, but not friendly, she realized with a sinking heart. "I shall always be glad to be of any service."

Little Benny's Note Book

Batliday after supper ma said to pop, let's have a day I thought it would never end, I feel like going to bed and staying there indefinitely. At least not bothering to get up for breakfist.

Well why should you? pop said. Nora will bring you up your breakfist and you can eat it propped against two pillows like a movie queen on her eiderdown throne, he said, and ma said, it sounds seductive, I admit, but I couldn't give way to the impulse even if I had it, because told Nora she could sleep in her sisters tonight and she's not coming in till noon, so I'd have to get up anyway to get Sunday breakfist for you and Benny, she said.

On the contrary, Benny and I will get Sunday breakfist for you and bear it aloft on the wings of devotion, pop said, ill brew you a cup of coffee such as only I can brew it, and by golies I'll make you my special stack of scramble eggs country style with bacon. Are you a lucky lady I envy you, he said, and ma said, Now Willyum how is that kitchin going to leak?

Like a kitchin in a bride's food fancy, pop said, and I said, I'll tell what I'm going to make for you, ma said, I'm going to make flapjakes. I know how to do it, you just pore out some stuff from the Mamsy Jimmy Pancake box and pore in some milk and go ahead and make them. Oh boy you never had such a swell breakfist. It's going to take 3 trays to carry it up, and then even if one of you tripped on the way you'd still have a whole tray full.

Thanks just a - same for lane sakes, but I think I better take the will for the deed and get up and make you a nice Sunday breakfist, ma said, and I said, O, ma, will you make me flapjakks? and pop said, I think I'd like to have a nice service platter of scramble eggs country style, now that they have entered the conversatin.

Sounding like a swell breakfist.

Graded-egg Prices Slightly Stronger

Toronto, June 11 — Ready clearance of light fresh receipts strengthened prices somewhat on graded eggs on the Toronto open produce market yesterday, but were unsettlingly.

With current supplies reflecting production and consumption and demand good under present storing operations, the egg market showed a firm tone. A general advance of 1-2 cent a dozen was recorded in the graded section of trading, but prices in the ungraded field held at previous levels.

Many buyers remained out of butter market while awaiting monthly report on storage holdings and sales of June 1. Wholesale dissolids were barely sufficient to establish a basis for trading, though there was no selling pressure, holders were slightly firmer in the first-grade product at 31 cents a pound.

Branch of Canadian Federation Of Agriculture Formed Here

Prominent Farmers of Hastings Hear Addresses on the Benefits That Would Accrue to Agricultural Industry Through Proper Organization

CANADIAN MEMBERSHIP TOTALS 350,000

Representative of a strong section of the Hastings County from its borders on the east to the west and including part of Quinte for the northernmost townships, farmers of Hastings County showed a big auditorium of the city hall on Tuesday afternoon participating in favor of the formation of a county branch of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture. Speakers of the evening included H. H. Hannan, President of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture; V. S. Milburn, Secretary-Treasurer of Ontario Federation of Agriculture; H. L. Fair, District Agricultural Representative and Dr. Harold Welsh, M.P.P. for East Hastings.

Delegates to the County Council attended the meeting in a body, and Reeve Warden W. J. Devlin as chairman for the evening, listened to the addresses which led to the setup of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture. He stated that the County Council of East Hastings had been the direct outcome of Farm Forum discussions on the air during the past winter.

Mr. Milburn told his listeners a brief history of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture from its inception in 1936 until the present and stressed the fact that the Federation is not the result of any impulse, a federating or uniting of all existing farm organizations for the purpose of improving the social and economic position of those engaged in agriculture.

Mr. Milburn brought out the point that agriculturists have been critical of labor organizations but nevertheless have "taken a leaf" from their organize to push agriculture down, but have failed because they were often in the past, agricultural meetings passed resolutions and then permitted things to rest. "The Government will not act on resolutions put forth by public opinion," he stated. "The Federation is a non-political organization as a means to get the quick and effective agricultural interest in the national movement was formed to secure for the farmer a representation of farmers, which to date the organization itself was quite simple but making it work is a considerable task. Before the question of finances, which to date has been on a voluntary basis, contributions from existing farm organizations and from county councils are being considered and legislation is being sought to make it possible for the collecting of 1 cent per acre on improved or a fifth of a mill on assessed property values, which would be turned over to the County Federations of Agriculture. Anyone not in favor of the tax would be exempted from the collection."

Keep Clear of Politics

Mr. Milburn urged that farmers keep talking about their problems, assuring that public opinion necessary to get action, but emphasized would then be forthcoming. The necessity of keeping the Federation out of partisan politics was stressed by the speaker and said they have got to keep our organization clean of politics. First of all let us be agriculturists."

"If you decide to have a County Federation of Agriculture," he concluded Mr. Milburn, "elect the best men, keep them there. Familiarize yourself with the agricultural problems and remember that the effectiveness of organization is in the rank and file of membership."

Mr. Hannan in speaking of the national organization stated that now, for the first time in the history of Canada, agriculture in the Dominion was represented by the Federation with a total membership of approximately 350,000. The recent establishment of the Federation has already greatly strengthen the Federation, he said.

Entitled to Equal Position

The question was asked, he might be asked, "Why Federation?" "Let me assure you," he said, "the people of this country are entitled to be the first citizens of the land, and to receive for their labor an equal footing with -the skilled worker."

Referring to the comparison between agriculture and labor, Mr. Hannan stated that only one farm Milburn stated that only one farm in ten has a bath, and only one in seven had running water in the house or kitchen, only one in seven had telephones, and only one in seven a bathroom. In comparison a labor standard of living required one hundred per cent in each case, he said.

"The farmer is on par with the skilled workman any day," avowed Mr. Hannan. "The farmer is willing accept a lower standard of living, a lower standard of education?" he asked. "If so, we must admit of a lower standard of citizenship."

Carry On At Sacrifice

The speaker claimed that with the organization of the new agricultural problem is the most serious that has confronted us. Farmers are loyal, they will still produce below cost. They will continue to give their share of the war burden and more. They are carrying on at a great sacrifice, but not at the sacrifice. Farmers have made a far greater contribution."

Mr. Hannan claimed that when a change was made to a wartime policy "Agriculture has always had been neglected and that the government has adopted a policy of cheap food at the expense of the farmer.

He admitted that the price of certain farm products was higher now than at the outset of the war, but disclaimed that the Federal Government was in any way responsible for the increase. Indication of this, he claimed in favor of the formation of a county branch of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture. Speakers of the evening included H. H. Hannan, President of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture; V. S. Milburn, Secretary-Treasurer of Ontario Federation of Agriculture; H. L. Fair, District Agricultural Representative and Dr. Harold Welsh, M.P.P. for East Hastings.

He admitted that the price of certain farm products was higher now than at the outset of the war, but disclaimed that the Federal Government was in any way responsible for the increase. Indication of this, he claimed in favor of the formation of a county branch of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture. He stated that this organization that was partly responsible for the increased price of cheese and of butter now in effect. "The Federation is not out after any all they can get," he claimed, "but only to see to it that a certain price is fair."

It was not the intention of the Federation to encroach upon the powers of the various existing agricultural organizations, but to bring these organizations together so as to co-operate as a unit or group to support those in another, asserted Mr. Hannan. He stated during that he would like to see agriculturists go into business, to buy and sell and get away from the influence of the big corporations.

Will Ask Increase

"Let us do more than just talk," emphasized Mr. Hannan. "Let me assure you, the farmers' day is coming. Let us serve notice that from now on the farmers are going to ask for a square deal."

Dr. Harold Welsh moved complete accord with the sympathetic views held by the Federation speakers and stated that the government in the past had failed to put forward resolutions put forth by farmers in direct proportion to the support which was behind them. "Let your organization to build for a market position," he said. "Don't accept the challenge to organize," pleaded Dr. Welsh.

Plan County Federation

With the meeting thrown open for discussion following the addresses by the two guest speakers, Reeve Warden W. J. Devlin of Hastings County would form a County Federation of Agriculture later to affiliate with the National Federation.

A county directorate, to be comprised of 44 members, 20 from the various municipalities in the county from existing rural organizations in the county, and 24 from the county at large, voted to organize accordingly with the usual provisions of directors being appointed.

War Expenditures Committee to Sit During Recess

House Adopts Report of Special Committee on Expenditures During the Sitting

ALLOWED $15 A DAY

(By Frank Flaherty)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, June 11.—(CP)—Parliamentary investigation of war expenditures will continue throughout the summer while parliament, itself is adjourned.

By adopting last night the report of the special committee which started war expenditures during the present sitting, the House of Commons placed its approval on the committee's recommendation that it continue its work after adjournment, which is expected to come this week.

The question of remuneration of members of the committee for their services during the recess for the session was left a proposal that they be paid allowance of $15 a day provided they are not receiving pay.

The supplementary estimates totalling $45,000,000 to provide for payments in connection with the budget proposal that they vacate the personal and corporation income tax rates at the 1940 level of the war.

Opponents are to equal the either the provincial income tax collections in the provinces where they are levied on provincial debt whichever the provinces choose.

Changes at Last Year's Basis

Mr. Ilsley said the intention was to make the changes on the basis of the last fiscal year. The capital would be in allied hands by nightfall.

Another Allied column, pushing northward along the coast of the Mediterranean, was moving toward Beirut, capital of Lebanon.

There was no exact information as to extent to its progress.

No Heavy Fighting

French defenders of Syria and Lebanon have made only half-hearted resistance, official quarters here said today, and there has been no heavy fighting had developed.

The Allied forces have been deliberately proceeding slowly in an effort to avoid shedding French wherever possible.

It is believed the Allies were making extensive use of loginess, parachute troops and fifth column troops to join the Free French forces and were distributing large quantities of leaflets to the civilians of the natives.

The leaflets were proving effective.

French sources in Cairo agreed that a minimum of resistance was being offered by the Vichy forces. A number of Vichy troops holding Damascus had joined the Free Frenchmen, preferring not to fight on either side.

Officials Silent

Official sources were silent on the progress of the Allied and Free Frenchmen's air base and there was no indication that Beirut had been sacrified.

Palmyra, oasis cross-roads of desert caravan routes in bygone days, is approximately 150 miles east of the Iraq frontier and 130 miles from the Lebanese coastline. It is situated in a collection of Arab hovels, Palmyra was a flourishing city in the days of the Christian era, when it was known as Tadmor. It is famous for its ancient ruins, but it is strategically important as the key to Syria since it is a station on the oil pipeline from Kirkuk, Iraq, to the oil port on the shores of Lebanon.

Launching an Allied drive into Eastern Syria is to enable them to seize the important air base at Palmyra. Reports from Britain awaited word that the ancient city of Damascus had fallen to the Allies.

Battle For Somme Base

Units of the Australian forces which participated in the recent fighting in the Greek campaign are taking part in the push toward Palmyra. Within the past few days they has bombed several times because it was used as a German air base.

Official reports from Cairo said the British-Free French column driving toward Damascus from Northern Palestine frontier said 'art night it was within eight miles of the outskirts of the city. London expected the fall of the capital would be in Allied hands by nightfall.

Palmyra, oasis cross-roads of desert caravan routes in bygone days, is approximately 150 miles east of the Iraq frontier and 130 miles from the Lebanese coastline. It is situated in a collection of Arab hovels, Palmyra was a flourishing city in the days of the Christian era, when it was known as Tadmor. It is famous for its ancient ruins, but it is strategically important as the key to Syria since it is a station on the oil pipeline from Kirkuk, Iraq, to the oil port on the shores of Lebanon.

Syrian Campaign Is Now Entering Decisive Stage

By EDWARD KENNEDY
Associated Press Staff Writer

The Allied campaign in Syria, June 10 (Delayed) (AP)—Long artillery duels were reported between Australian and French batteries on the Damascus-Palestine-Lebanon frontier, where reinforced Allied forces were driving deep into French-mandated territory has been formed.

The Free French Agency reported today that the Allies had taken Metulla Post, eight miles, 5 miles other mountain top stronghold, blocked the advance northward. Other dispatch said the French still held positions in the sector, however.

Some French officers who capitulated expressed satisfaction at their with the Allied cause and hatred for Germany, it was said. They then, the fourth the Allied forces, they replied:

Have Duty to do

"We have to do our duty and clear our honor before coming over to you."

Captured Lebanese, Algerian, Tunisian and Senegalese troops told British forces "we had to do what our officers told us."

To the east and west the Allies swept northward with the center of the line in the old days of warfare this middle-eastern land has been the battleground of empires.

Coastal Command planes also bombed docks at St. Nazaire, on the mouth of the Loire River in west France, and air bases at Mandal and Stavanger, in Southern Norway.

A Coastal Command torpedo plane scored a hit amidships on a 3,000 ton merchant ship and a 2,000 tons off the Norwegian coast, but the commander could not see whether the vessel was sunk.

From all these operations, it said, the Coastal Command plane is missing.

How a heavy bomber parried attacks by two Messerschmitt 109s off the Norwegian coast, Flying Officer Vilsland was described by the Air Ministry News Service.

An 18-minute engagement was fought at about 100 feet above the water. The fighters came in simultaneously, one from the port quarter and one from starboard, firing cannon and machine guns.

The rear gunner of the British bomber downed one of the Messerschmitts in the first attacks. "He just slid off his turn into the sea," said the Flying Officer's report.

The remaining Messerschmitt broke off after two unsuccessful attacks which the bomber dodged.

"We could see his bullets going into the water behind our wing tips," the captain declared. A sharp burst from the rear gunner finally drove off the enemy.

The bombers on the coast in southeastern England was bombed and machine-gunned some casualties were reported in South Wales.

The companion raid in Nazi air attacks on the British Isles during th last month was attributed to the unusually unfavorable flying weather. Informed sources placed little importance on reports that the Nazis had moved their planes from Western Europe to the Mediterranean front.

U.S. Refused Permission to Use Eire as a Stepping Stone To Send Supplies to Britain

London, June 11 —(CP)— Irish sources said today that Prime Minister Eamon de Valera of Eire had refused to permit the United States to use either seaports or airports in Eire as a stepping stone for transportation of war supplies to Britain.

The Prime Minister was said to feel that use of any part of Eire for such purposes would open the country to German air attacks as a legitimate military target.

It was understood, however, that he is agreeable to establishment of a terminus in Eire for trans-Atlantic passenger service.

The United States was said reliably to be speeding arrangements for a direct air link with Britain because of fear that German moves in the western Mediterranean and Atlantic soon might sever the present connection via the Azores and Lisbon.

Robert Hinckley, Assistant United States Secretary of Commerce who inspected airports in both Britain and Eire and negotiated for an eastern terminus for American-operated air service, was expected to report back to Washington in a few days.

Estimates Report Tabled Shows Tax Increase of One-half Mill

Report Will be Discussed at Further Session of County Council Before Adoption

ROAD COSTS UP

Hastings County Council today tabled an Estimates Committee report presented to them shortly before noon, in order that members might study estimated figures responsible for the increase of one-half mill in the tax rate this year. The rate as struck in the report is 21½ mills as against 21 mills of 1940.

Motion for adoption of the report was made by Chairman of Estimates Committee, James A. Sprackett, immediately following its presentation to council.

Reeve J. L. Churcher immediately arose to his feet and asked for the items responsible for the increase in the rate. He was told that increased costs of road maintenance and increase in school costs was primarily the reason for the rise in rate. The increase in road costs this year amounts to $30,000, while school levies are up $20,000.

It was pointed out by members that the rate struck for maintenance and construction of the roads and bridges equals the 1940 rate, was two mills, but this had been increased this year to 2½ mills.

Chairman of the Finance Committee Robson informed the body that in previous years large appropriations were made for roads and bridges had not met with the approval of the Department of Highways until it had been cut by figure amounting approximately to one-half mill. This year the full amount had been approved and ordered and all contracts for wages have been increased 5c an hour; items like the increase in truck a commensurate amount.

Road Superintendent W. L. Langlois, in supporting this statement, told council that labor on these roads was extremely hard to secure at the present time. One key man had already left the job, and there was danger of others leaving for more lucrative positions.

Reeve Charles Moffitt supported the motion for adoption, "We should be well pleased with the fact that the rate is as low as it is," he said. "Under normal conditions with other taxes being raised all around us, I think our rate has been kept well within the bounds in spite of the demands made upon the county."

"I am not so cheerful as Reeve Moffitt," declared Warden Rankin. "This council as well as others should be economical in every way. In raising the rate, council may have thought it was for vital necessity to the welfare of the county, but I want to go on record as stating it should not be increased."

Members of the council other than those acting on the Estimates Committee, had no chance to study the report submitted, the Dungannon reeve asserted. There were causes of increase, which he felt, should be explained to the council as a whole after the report had been carefully studied by them all.

He moved that copies of the report be placed in the hands of every member of the council and the report tabled until a future date.

If this council disapproves of the increase in the rate due to road costs, Warden Davis stated, it is evident that it doesn't want to spend the money it asked for in January and which since has been approved.

Don't Want to Rush Estimates

Reeve Charles Rush of Hungerford, told the council that it was not the intention of the Estimates Committee to "rush the report through." He suggested the motion for adoption be withdrawn in order to give members an opportunity to study the report before disposing with it. The motion for adoption was formally withdrawn and Reeve Churcher's motion for tabling of the report carried.

Prior to the discussion on Estimates, council accepted invitations to visit the Trenton base of the R.C.A.F., and No. 6 Air Repair Depot. Fourteen members left this afternoon under the guidance of the warden to inspect the air base, while the balance of council under Deputy Reeve Sam Nicolson, inspected the Air Repair Depot. On the invitation of Reeve D'Arcy Ketchenon, Frankford, who had made tentative arrangements for the body to visit the Bata Shoe Company at Batawa, council decided to visit that place as a unit at some future date. /

Jail Governor Says Newell Tried To Strangle Self

Toronto, June 11—(CP)—Governor Walter L. Rayfield of the Don jail said today that A.C. A. W. Newell, awaiting third trial on a charge of murdering his wife, Anne, is in the prison hospital "with a guard beside him day and night."

Last night C. P. Neslando, Deputy Provincial Secretary of Ontario, said that Newell had tried to strangle himself. He had been informed that jail officials found Newell with a large handkerchief about his neck trying to knot the other end to bars in his cell door.

One officer said that "when he got him loose, Newell grabbed himself by the neck with both hands and tried to strangle himself that way."

Governor Rayfield said "there was no mistake about what he was trying to do. Until his mother and father visited him yesterday morning, he had both hopes that he was going to be freed. When they told him he was to face a third trial he ordered he became despondent".

Newell was twice tried for the murder of his wife, but each body was found last Oct. 6 on Toronto Island and juries at both trials disagreed.

SUMMER BUYING OF COAL ASKED

U. S. Householders Warned of Possible Shortage Next Winter

Washington, June 11 —(AP)— Already confronted by threatened restrictions on gasoline, heating oil and electric power, United States consumers were told today by one official to "buy coal now" lest they encounter shortages of coal next winter.

Forecasting a "very grave danger" of a deficiency due to the defence strain on transportation facilities, a government statement last night urged summer buying and storage "as a direct and necessary contribution to national defence."

Interior Secretary Harold Ickes stopped speaking of the possibility of rationing and termed as "probable" and announced that people of the eastern seaboard "will be given a chance to express themselves" for their cars and probably less oil to heat their homes. Leon Henderson, Defence Petroleum Administrator, said the oil shortage is threatened by transfer to British service of tanker ships normally used to move petroleum from the Gulf ports to the east.

"Get out of us," Ickes said, "can save on the gasoline that we consume in our automobiles, by 1—limiting and driving speeds, 2—by refraining from the unnecessary, wasteful and less hasty getaways in city traffic, and 4—by adjusting our cars for maximum efficiency so that no gasoline will be belched through the exhaust pipe."

Ickes, however, gave no indication when a rationing program or civilian conservation might become effective or what form the measures would take—other than to say they would be based on a patriotic appeal for voluntary co-operation.

Special Committee of Council Given Power to Act Regarding Victory Loan Bond Purchase

Municipal Board Refuses Permission to Buy Bonds as Money Not Available in Sinking Fund

OTHER BUSINESS

Balked in their effort to purchase Victory Bonds totalling $20,000 by refusal of the Municipal Board to allow the purchase owing to the fact, that the Corporation does not have that much cash in the Sinking Fund, the City Council at their regular session last night appointed a special Committee of Mayor Thompson, Aldermen Clarke, Rollins, Jeffery, Fowler and Armstrong to enquire as to what other municipalities acquired an interest in this Victory Loan campaign and have power to act. The council has already voted to purchase $5000 of the issue and therefore the committee has power to act. This action was taken after a delegation from the Victory Loan campaign including J. E. Shortt, K. B. Byron, Chairman of the county organization and M. W. Anderson of the Speed Company committee had appeared before the council to ask their aid.

Addresses Council

Mr. Boyce addressed the council stating that it was intimated that the council had run into difficulties with the Municipal Board with respect to subscribing to the Victory Loan, but believes that if money is not given voluntarily to this loan, then it will have to be given some other way," said Mr. Boyce. Individuals have contributed the money for their war effort and it is a question whether the municipalities can give large subscriptions but that individuals cannot give anything and I am sure that every member of this council wishes to help the corporation should take a part and give leadership in this worthy cause", he stated. Mr. Boyce then read a list of municipalities which had contributed to the Victory Loan campaign and these gives will be contacted by the City Clerk to find out how they negotiated to obtain the money to purchase Victory. The speaker told the council the campaign was over the half-way mark but that the last part was going to be the hardest. Mr. Boyce then also endorsed the remarks of the former speaker in urging that the committee go forward to look into the matter.

Should do Something

Ald. Rollins felt as a member of the committee that the committee should do something and to find out if other municipalities have purchased the bonds on open account. Ald. Jeffery was in favor of the committee being given power to act.

Ald. Butler implemented the remarks of the former speaker and Ald. Clarke told the delegation that the council wanted to purchase the bonds and then read a letter from the Municipal Board refusing to allow the purchase. The Corporation has no actual cash in the Sinking Fund", said the Chairman of Finance "due to the payment of a $215,000 debenture due on May 15th. I would be agreeable to borrow on open account if that is the only way we can finance this purchase." Ald. Armstrong expressed the same sentiments and the committee was then formed to have power to act.

Asks For Co-Operation

Ald. Butler requested the co-operation of the citizens with respect to the Salvage Parade, which will visit this city on Friday, June 13th, by bringing their cars out to the route of the parade. The alderman stated the parade would be between twelve and one thirty on that day and would travel by way of Dundas, Pinnacle, Front and Highland Avenue through the city. All property obtained during the sale by the city will be immediately registered under its name accordingly.

Lessons of Heroic Struggle Should be Applied Without Delay Say London Papers

London, June 11 (CP Cable) — Afternoon Newspapers discussing Prime Minister Churchill's analysis of the battle now raging in Crete, regarded the debate as a tonic and warned that the lessons of the heroic struggle should be applied without delay.

The Evening Standard said the Prime Minister has given one answer to the question whether the various service commands have shown sufficient appreciation of the power of the air weapon and the ingenuity with which it is wielded by the Nazis.

"He tells us the arm on the spot believed Crete might possibly have been held with resources of men and weapons which we all we could conceivably assemble there," the Standard said editorially.

"It seems incontrovertible, therefore, that there was a miscalculation of the havoc which dive bombers might dispense on our troops massed in defence of the key scale on which troop-carrying aircraft could be brought."

Knowledge of the power of the German air arm has grown by progress more than ever before, "must affect all our decisions," The Standard said. "These include decisions as to where we can employ our navy, decisions about the training of our own army, and, above all, decisions concerning immediate steps to be taken for the defence of this island."

The Star said that "if the Cretan battle kills the most timid belief in nation's war councils it will have been well worth while."

"In this way, if quite certain," the Star added, "that all these lessons have been thoroughly learned by the statesman whose outlook never has been dominated by the most mind —Mr. Churchill."

T. B. Death Rate Decreases 45% From 1921 to '39

Quebec, June 11 —(CP)— The death rate from tuberculosis in Canada decreased 45 per cent from 1921 to 1939, Dr. G. J. Wherrett of the Canadian Tuberculosis Association, Ottawa, said in an address at the 30th annual convention of the Canadian Public Health Association.

Speaking at one of the concluding sessions of the three-day convention, Dr. Wherrett said that from 1921 to 1939 the tubercular death rate in Quebec Province alone was reduced 44 per cent.

The death rate decline in Ontario from 1921 to 1939 was 50 per cent.

Many might be surprised to learn, the speaker said, that in the last 25 years no new weapons to fight tuberculosis have been found and that no one drug has been discovered. Only the time-honored drugs, rest, good food and fresh air, supplemented by modern artificial therapy in selected cases has proved effective in the treatment of pulmonary tuberculosis."

Treatments Encouraging

"But," he added, "we are disappointed in the efforts to find a specific cure for tuberculosis. We have been encouraged by the results of methods of treatment that have been in use for many years and by the new forms of collapse therapy which are now in progress in all modern sanatoria."

Dr. Gordon Bates, of Toronto, General Director of the Health League of Canada, said in addressing the meeting that "if we are to control venereal disease by chemical means alone," he said, "and by so doing abandon the moral fibre of our people, then our last stage will be worse than our first and we may well emerge without physical health, morality and religion and as close to paganism as is Germany today because materialistic religion goes

Dr. Bates said he considered also."

AT THE BELLE

"Men of Boys Town"

Spencer Tracy and Mickey Rooney have had the unusual experience of stepping back into roles that won them Academy Awards, with "They again are seen in his characterization of Father Edward J. Flanagan and Rooney as Whitey Marsh, idols of Boys Town, in "Men of Boys Town," which is at the Belle Theatre for one night.

The Belle News of the Day and a clever color fun cartoon precede the feature presentation.

"Flight From Destiny"

Tomorrow the Belle Theatre will show one of the finest mystery thriller films. It is called "Flight From Destiny," and it is a picture as important as its title. The film stars Thomas Mitchell, Academy Award Winner, Geraldine Fitzgerald of "They Victory," Jeffrey Lynn, star of "All This and Heaven Too" and James, Stephenson.

Thomas Mitchell, "Doctor," played by Thomas Mitchell, learns from his doctor, played by Henry Stephenson, that he is suffering from a heart ailment which allows him only six more months to live. After much deliberation he decides that he can make his life worthwhile by doing away with someone who menaces others and whose crimes are not punishable by law. He hasn't the slightest idea who that victim will be but it isn't long before he finds a deserving candidate.

The wife of one of his favorite students, portrayed by Geraldine Fitzgerald, tells the professor that her husband is about to desert him. (Jeffrey Lynn's role) seem's to be in some sort of trouble but he won't reveal it. After some investigation the professor finds that the woman called Ketti, played by Mona Maris, owns an art gallery and specializes in the sale of fine copies of masterpieces which she sells as originals. Mitchell sets out to quit she threatens to expose him. The professor tells her in no uncertain terms that unless she frees Michael he will let her and she ridicules the thought of this weak looking man ture threatening her life.

The climax comes as pile up surprise after surprise in a film crammed with suspense.

Gay Comedy Hit

Warner Anderson is heading new comedy, "The Great Mr. Nobody," starring Eddie Albert and promising screen audiences a hearty laugh in the added laugh feature. In the supporting cast are Jane Wyman, Hale, William Lundigan, John Litel and Dickie Moore.

A special added attraction on the screen will be our colorful Canadian "Men of the R.B.I.—1941," J. Edgar Hoover's G-Men in action against spies and espionage in defence industries.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Strawberry Blonde"

"The Strawberry Blonde", which is scheduled to open tomorrow night at the Capitol Theatre for a three day film fest you've all been waiting for to close out the month of July's jolliest show this side of the naughty nineties, the new Warner Bros. comedy has the warmth and color that made those gay nineties so gay to us and so much to miss in it.

There's James Cagney, the guy who put the roar in the "Roaring Twenties", as the star of "The Strawberry Blonde" and which is a comedy that gives the nod to the gilded age. He's that way about Rita Hayworth, the "Strawberry Blonde, but his "pal" Jack Carson, elopes with her, leaving Cagney to console himself with sweet, demure Olivia deHavilland. In the end, Cagney gets a chance to get back at Carson and to win the Strawberry Blonde, but this is one triumphs and he chooses to stick with Olivia.

Director Raoul Walsh, whose last big hits include such films as "They Drive By Night" and "High Sierra", has kept up the swift pace of these action hits in the new picture, only this time Walsh is at a comedy with fun he's managed, too, to create an authentic picture of the era when a mug was use only for shaving and a racket was something you played tennis with. The music by Heinz Roemheld, composed of themes from memories of the days of Rather used to sing, adds to the charm and authenticity of the story.

The same programme includes Mack Sennett's Academy Award toon, "King for a Day", an interesting short subject, "Strange as it Seems" and the fifth chapter of Zane Grey's "King of the Royal Mounted".

AT THE McCARTHY

"They Dare Not Love"

A dramatic story of heroic lovers in a world of mad-making power, Columbia's "They Dare Not Love" which comes to the McCarthy Theatre with George Brent and Martha Scott as co-stars, failed to be a tale of suspenseful adventure and eye-exciting tenderness set in the present day confusion of a world in upheaval, "They Dare Not Love" tells the story of James Whale, the man who made "Show Boat", "Frankenstein" and other film classics, with a supporting cast which includes Paul Lukas, Roman Bohnen, Edgar Barrier, Erwin Kalser and Egon Brecher. Its screenplay, based on a novel by Vajda penned the original screen play.

Brmi is seen as a young Austrian prince, forced to flee for his life after sudden terror strikes his country and his people; Miss Scott as a young American girl, is simply not find forgetfulness and peace in the fantastic romance which comes to her.

In addition to its fascinating romantic theme, "They Dare Not Love" is a breathless story of high adventure and high romance, a suspenseful pace, with a surety which is seldom found in the screenplay workmanship of Mr. Whale, its director. From its terrors-haunted spirituality to its sudden, surprising conclusion, "They Dare Not Love" is packed with the excitement which comes from exceedingly dramatic material handled with consummate skill.

In lesser roles, Paul Lukas, Roman Bohnen and Edgar Barrier have been hailed by Hollywood for the finesse with which they have played for performances which ride hourly in a season or excellent performances. Miss Scott plays as the gentlemanly, cold-blooded memsis and Brent, as the lover, is able to invest his characterization with a warmth and sincerity of emotion which makes a villain despicable without making him ridiculous; he is the hero without being a bore because he wants to, and not because that is the way the script reads. Of equal moment is the performance of Mr. Bohnen, who made his screen debut as the pathetic spy known as "Dr. Mike and Mimi". As Lukas' colleague, Mr. Bohnen appears to advantage, in sharp contrast to Ray Linaker's security girl is said to provide a valuable "change of pace" in the screen portrayal of the supporting players.

"They Dare Not Love" raises highly among the major motion pictures of the year is a fact attested by the enthusiastic acclaim accorded the film by audiences which saw it during its premiere here, by Hollywood accustomed to good films.

Columns Advancing On Beirut and Damascus Held up by French Resistance

FREE FRENCH ACTIVE

London, June 12.—(CP)— British and Free French forces, advancing in six spearhead drives into French-mandated Syria and Lebanon, and bearing promises of liberation, sovereignty and protection against the Axis, reported important gains in all sectors today.

Officially, no place names or distances were given and in the same commuique the High Command reported what it called the guided resistance to the Allied forces.

"Minted by incorrect information regarding the objects of our penetration, they (troops) offered resistance in certain areas, obliging us to use force to prevent obstruction to our advance," said the communique, issued at Cairo.

"When these troops have been overrun many have expressed sympathy with the allied object of preserving Syria from German penetration."

Most news on the campaign came indirectly to London by way of Damascus or Vichy.

This featured the Allies again lashing at the out-lying defences of Damascus, Syria's capital, with tank-led columns within 10 miles from the city while other forces pushed down the coastal road to Sidon, 25 miles south of Beirut, Lebanese capital.

Sidon is the northernmost city visited by Jesus on the ancient road from Tyre.

The campaign was represented by three separate drives penetrating the mandated lands: One force headed in two, from Mesopotamia-Ras-el-Ain, on the Turkish border on its drive toward Aleppo, northern Syria; one curving acclimatize up the valley of the Euphrates River from Iraq toward Aleppo; one shoving along the oil pipeline from Iraq toward Palmyra, and three pushing on Damascus and Beirut from Palestine in Syria, Lebanon to the south.

SIX PROVINCES ACCEPT GRANTS

Intend to Accept Government's Offering of Income Tax Proposals

Ottawa, June 12.—(CP)—Six provinces until this fiscal year in receipt of special grants from the Federal Treasury in addition to their regular provincial subsidies, have indicated their intention of accepting the Dominion Government's wartime income tax proposals, Finance Minister Ilsley told the House of Commons last night.

The provinces are British Columbia, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island and Nova Scotia.

The Minister made no reference to the other three provinces, Ontario, Quebec and Alberta, nor to the proposal of Premier Hepburn of Ontario that a Dominion-Provincial conference to discuss various problems in relations between the provinces and Ottawa.

Mr. Ilsley gave the information as the special grants were struck from the estimates. Under the budget proposals, special events were to be discontinued and, to provide a clear field for the new and higher federal personal and corporation income taxes, the provinces were to cease levying personal and corporation income taxes for the duration of the war.

In return the Dominion offered to pay each province a sum equal either to the revenue from the income tax field in its last fiscal year or to its annual debt charges, whichever the provincial government chose.

ASKS REDUCTION IN EXPENSE ACCOUNT

St. Louis, June 12 (AP)—In these days of higher wage demands, Justice of the Peace A. H. Werremeyer surprised his superiors by asking them to cut his expense account. The court granted the request.

Sawmill Injury Proves Fatal

Blind River, Ont., June 12—(CP)—Seriously injured in a sawmill accident at Kynoch, miles south of here, George Tapp, 36, died today. Just as a plane arrived from Sault Ste. Marie to take him to a Toronto specialist.

While working at a saw mill, owned, by his brother, Edward, Tapp was caught between the log and fall on the circular saw. His right arm was almost severed and his head badly injured.

Dr. F. P. Hazell, of Blind River, was called and, later, the Red Cross Hospital at Blind River for a blood transfusion.

Had he lived an hour or so longer, a plane from the Ontario Provincial Branch at Sault Ste. Marie would have had Tapp in Toronto to be attended by a brain specialist.

NAZIS REPORTED MASSING TROOPS ON EAST FRONTIER

Waging "War of Nerves" to Get Oil and Grain Concessions From Russia

PRIORITY OF SUPPLIES

By DREW MIDDLETON
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, June 12.—(AP)— Information that Germany is massing troops, artillery and aircraft at Krakow in occupied Poland and in Rumania in a "war of nerves" intended to squeeze important concessions from Russia was received Wednesday by reliable sources in London.

Russian sources professed to know nothing of such reports, but Sir Stafford Cripps, the British ambassador to Moscow, arrived there today and said it is probable that he will be consulted on them.

No one specified the concessions which Germany presumably hopes to extract, but speculation centered around the Russian oil fields in Azerbaijan, Armenia and Georgia and the wheat areas of Ukraida. It was believed Germany will ask priority on these supplies plus the admission of technicians and increased rail transport.

Neutral military sources in London doubted that the apparent German withdrawal from Syria might have any bearing on these troop concentrations on the Russian front.

British military informants made no comment upon this except to say: "The Germans have not come in contact with Allied forces in Syria as yet."

Reports on German threats against Russia were surprising, since the Nazis already are waging a campaign for the Black Sea and Caucasus Near policy of flirting on only one front causes Britons to suspect that the German troop movements reported are threats and nothing more.

Unofficial but informed observers believe the $2,5.9 would agree to any but vital concessions, pointing to Russia's two-year avoidar-e of war.

People Who Are Able to Buy Victory Bonds and Do Not Indirectly Help the Enemy

Judge Cameron Says Canvassers Report Some Citizens Fail to Realize the Seriousness of the Situation

MUST BE NO SLACKERS

While the National Victory Loan has made good progress since it started a few days ago, and over one half of the $300 million dollar objective has been subscribed, indicative that the response to date has been good, much remains to be done to make the Loan a complete success, Judge Charles A. Cameron, General Chairman of the Hastings County Victory Loan Committee, told The Ontario Intelligencer today.

"The Loan," he said, "must not only be subscribed in full, but oversubscribed, if Canada is to show the world that she is with the Empire heart and soul."

Hastings County has done well in many quarters, Judge Cameron said, but more than one million dollars, or half of the objective of two million dollars has been subscribed. "But," he added, "the sum of $900,000 is still to be raised if the objective is to be reached."

"I regret to say," the chairman continued, "that members of the General Committee, in going through report cards of canvassers, found that a number of people, who, it is felt could subscribe something, if only a fifty dollar bond, have declined to give any assistance. In some cases this may be for special and valid reasons. In many cases, it is felt, it must be lack of appreciation of the situation in which Canada and the Empire are now placed."

"We would hesitate to believe that this failure to assist in the country's war effort is indicative of the fact that the persons concerned are desirous of limiting Canada's aid to the Mother Country, and the supply of arms and equipment to our forces.

"Surely this cannot be the case. We must lend to the limit of our ability if we really desire victory.

"If you have lent something—lend more."

U. S. Ship Robin Moor Undoubtedly Sunk by Nazi U-Boat Says Report

Washington, June 12—(AP)—The United States State Department announced today that a preliminary report on nine American convoi- sul in Pernambuco, Brazil, stated that the United States ship Robin Moor was undoubtedly sunk by a German submarine.

The report added that the commander of the submarine was fully aware that the Robin Moor was an American vessel.

Sumner Welles, Acting Secretary of State, made the announcement at his Press conference.

It received at the consul. Walter J. Linthicum, was based on interviews with 11 survivors of the ship which was sunk on May 21 in the South Atlantic. Two persons are missing.

Welles said this summarized version of the consul's report:

"The Robin Moor was undoubtedly sunk by a German submarine at 6 o'clock Greenwich time on the forenoon of May 21, at latitude 6:10 north and longitude 25:40 west. The commander of the submarine was fully aware that the vessel was American. All survivors in good health. Depositions of survivors taken and comprehensive summary will be sent soon as coded."

Full text follows:

Stephen Early, Presidential Secretary, said the full report is expected Monday, but it might be later. It must be studied by officials here, he said, before a course of action, if any, is set.

Welles was also faced as he appeared before reporters and read the report with questions as to whether the Neutrality Act.

The general cargo, Welles said, included "large types of goods from steel rails to women's hosiery and including automobiles, automobile parts, radio parts and numerous other items."

Welles said the cargo was consigned to Lorenco Marques, Port Natal, Cape Town, Port Natal and East London.

Refuses to Indicate Action

All of the ports for which the ship was headed are in Portuguese and British Africa.

Several days ago Early said President Roosevelt would prefer that judgment be suspended on the Robin Moor's fate until the facts are established.

Today, after Welles read the report, Early said:

"There is no longer seems to be any reason to reserve judgment."

Welles refused to indicate what action the United States would take.

BOMBERS WILL DECIDE WAR

Aid-to-Britain Advocates Surprised At Small U. S. Deliveries to Britain

Washington, June 12—(AP)—Aid to Britain advocates expressed surprise and disappointment today over reports from Canada indicating that only $75,302,425 of lease-lend equipment had been transferred in the period between March 11, when President Roosevelt signed the bill, and May 31.

Some opponents of administration foreign policy pounced on the figures. Senator Bennett Champ Clark (Dem.-Indiana), professed astonishment that so little of the $7,000,000,000 voted for lease-lend supplies "has been used to buy an interest in a lost cause."

To Senator Robert Wheeler yesterday's report demonstrated there is "no lease-lend program" and "there has been a lot of howling for that."

"We have sent over only $75,000,000 worth of lease-lend goods," the Montana Democrat added, "and there is no claim by the President that any of that has been sunk."

Senator Tom Connally (Dem., Texas), a sponsor of the British aid legislation, found it "distressing" that more equipment had not been transferred and Senator Harry Byrd (Dem.-Virginia) said the amount is "terribly disappointing."

Co-ordinator Needed

"This shows the need for a co-ordinator of defence to make the program effective," Byrd told reporters. "We ought to cut the red tape, stop strikes and get to work to help England and defend ourselves."

Senator Claude Pepper (Dem.-Florida), said that $75,000,000 worth of war materials "won't stop Hitler and it won't keep us out of war."

Formal Conclave Pledges Mutual Aid To Full Capacity

'Only True Basis of Enduring Peace is Willing Co-operation of Free Peoples' In Secure World

HISTORIC GATHERING

London, June 12 (CP)—Britain, her Dominions and her Allies adopted a resolution today affirming their determination to continue the struggle against German or Italian oppression until victory is won" and pledging mutual assistance to each other "in this struggle to the utmost of their respective capacities."

This action was taken in the first formal conclave of representatives of the British Empire and of all the governments with which it is allied.

Resolution

The resolution declared:

"There can be no settled peace and prosperity so long as free peoples are coerced by violence into submission to the domination of Germany or her associates or live under the threat of such coercion.

"The only true basis of an enduring peace is willing cooperation of the free peoples in the world in which, relieved of the menace of aggression, all may economic and social security."

"It is their (the Allies) intention to work together and with other free peoples both in war and peace to this end."

The High Commissioners of Canada, Australia, New Zealand and South Africa represented the four Dominions.

Prime Minister Churchill, addressing the meeting, declared: "Nothing is more essential" than that every "strain of his (Hitler's) infected and corroding fire

LOAN CANVASSERS RENEW EFFORTS FOR DAILY QUOTA

$33,000,000 Daily Average Needed to Put Loan Over Objective

LOW ON TUESDAY

Ottawa, June 12—(CP)—Victory Loan subscriptions on Wednesday totalled $23,158,400, bringing the cumulative total subscribed to Canada's $600,000,000 Victory War Loan since the books opened June 2 to $372,556,800, the Loan Headquarters Committee announced today.

The number of individual subscribers yesterday was 50,620, bringing the cumulative total of subscribers to 386,871.

"For the second day, we have to acknowledge that subscriptions are below the $33,000,000 daily average required to make the loan a success," said G. W. Spinney, National Executive Chairman, in a statement. Subscription books are scheduled to close June 20.

"While the figures are still below the daily requirement, the total is slightly increased over the day before," Mr. Spinney said.

Need Your Help

"A careful study of all the returns indicates that the small subscriber, the man in the street, is continuing to tender his dollars for war purposes. It also indicates that at the opposite end of the scale the large corporation is shouldering his patriotic responsibility.

"It also reveals to anyone versed in such matters that men in the salaried class and those on the moderate scale of business are somewhat slow in coming across and in shouldering their share of the loan. They are not yet taking advantage of the instalment plan which was designed largely for (Continued on Page Eleven, Col. 3)

Tank Barges Unload Large Cargo Molasses

Beginning early on Wednesday evening steam pumps aboard special tank barges of New York registration started unloading 300,000 gallons of steaming molasses into the newly completed storage tank built by the Canadian Industrial Alcohol Company at the Belleville plant. Four tank barges, each of 150,000 gallon capacity, were docked in the Bay of Quinte yesterday afternoon by tug, coming down from Ontario from Oswego by way of Murray Canal and Trenton.

The appearance of molasses barges in Belleville harbor is the first time in many years, probably for a number of years, A decade or so ago, molasses was brought to Belleville by water for use in manufacturing processes at a Corbyville distillery but of recent years the practice had been discontinued.

The molasses is manufactured in Cuba, being shipped by ocean tanker from there to New York City where it is pumped into huge storage tanks. From the latter it is pumped by lake barge to processing centres in various U.S. and Canadian cities. Steam agitators keep the molasses from congealing in the storage tanks and when pumped into the barges at New York, the temperature ranges from 130 to 150 degrees after which it is kept as hot as possible until pumped into receiving tanks.

Unfamiliarity with Bay of Quinte waters was responsible for the barge captain taking the wrong course into Belleville Bay Oswego, the Murray Canal route being taken instead of coming up through the bay past Picton. Considerable difficulty experienced in coming through the canal, it was stated, as the barges, drawing over ten feet of water and of exceptional width of beam, continually scraped along from the canal bed during transit. To unload the cargo of 300,000 gallons requires from 28 to 30 hours, it was stated.

Rev. W. H. Boomhour, Rednerville, Wins Checker Contest

The unofficial checker championship of Eastern Ontario came to the Belleville District on Wednesday afternoon when, as the result of a sixteen game series between Mr. J. Livingstone of Picton, recognized champion of the Eastern Ontario Checker Tournament played in the city earlier in the spring, and Rev. W. H. Boomhour of Rednerville, the Picton man lost out to his clerical opponent.

Owing to the pressure of his duties as pastor in the Rednerville community, Rev. Mr. Boomhour had never entered the checker tournament which is held annually at the Y.M.C.A., but local checker players had had occasion to realize his strength as a cross board player when he dropped into the "Y" for a friendly game. The series between Mr. Livingstone and Rev. Mr. Boomhour was arranged by Judge Deroche, the tournament being played by easy stages starting last Monday evening.

Rev. Mr. Boomhour's superiority over the recognized champion was established early in the series with the first two games going to the local man, and from then on the issue was never in doubt. The final score of the series was Rev. Boomhour's six games against Mr. Livingstone's one, with five ending in draws.

Red Cross Notes

At the regular executive meeting of the Belleville Branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society held on June 6, reports were received as follows: Mr. Howard Carter for Property Committee; Mrs. Mikel for Knitting Committee; Mrs. Mikel and Mrs. Hefkey, Treasurer, Mrs. Lacker's report of Women's War Work Committee follows:

June 6, 1941.

Mr. President, Members of Executive, Belleville Branch:

During the month of May, seventeen cartons of supplies were shipped to the provincial warehouse. These contained knitted comforts for the Army, Navy and Air Force, Women's Auxiliary Forces, clothing and quilts, blankets and afghans for the British Bombed Relief, as well as a small number of hospital supplies which are not at present as badly needed as other kinds of supplies. The number of articles made and shipped are as follows: British Relief, clothing, quilts and bedding, 817, which includes 12 cupboards, knitted comforts for all services, 444; hospital supplies, 64.

Owing to various reasons such as seasonal work in country, housecleaning in the city, holidays, etc., our work has decreased somewhat. May we ask that you do not relax in work necessary to the success of the Red Cross and especially unselfishly to the branch of nursing where we have the suffering of those less fortunate.

An important event of the month was the visit of our Honorary Director, Mrs. Plumptre, who spoke to the workers in the Y.M.C.A. in the afternoon and later in the evening to the graduating nurses of our hospital. We are greatly indebted to the Hospital Auxiliary for bringing Mrs. Plumptre to this city, especially here we had members of the Canadian Red Cross Women's Corps, very smart in their uniforms and very devoted to their work.

Another noteworthy announcement, or rather two of them, by Maclean Publishing Co. and The Toronto Star, came to our notice. Mr. Herbert Morrison, the Minister of National Security in Britain, has asked assistance through this publishing company, for the Civilian Defence Workers of Britain. The Canadian Red Cross Society has responded generously to the request of providing these gallant workers with whatever they may need and can ask the public to read the Chatelaine magazine, page 72, May 36, for full information or inquire at branch office. The Black Fund for the British Bombed Civilians is the second call and we are ready to make the clothing out of materials your funds will buy.

On May 31st, a very successful meeting of some 25 conveners of Red Cross branches in this district was held in our building to hear the report of the provincial meeting of conveners in Toronto this month. Mrs. Gilmour, assisted by Mrs. Wallbridge, served tea and biscuits at 4 o'clock and the display of our work was in charge of Mesdames Mikel, Cameron and Argue.

This committee wishes to thank Mrs. Mikel and Miss Hindness for giving her window for our display of knitted comforts and leather work. May the writer thank Mrs. Mikel too for her work in this connection.

Respectfully submitted,

FLORENCE M. LAZIER,
Convener Women's War Work Com.

Manufacturers Say 'Dangerous Men' Trying to Control Industry

Officials Make Plea of Govt. to Check Illegal Strikes

TELEGRAMS SENT

Gaigniory Club, Que., June 12—(CP) — Members of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, whose annual convention here concentrated on industry's wartime role, laid before government officials today a plea to check illegal strikes promoted by "dangerous men" trying to control war industries.

In a statement summarizing business at the three-day convention, which ended yesterday, delegates said that subversive activities among industrial workers had "seriously increased in recent months." They urged the Dominion Government to "take action immediately."

In a telegram to Prime Minister King, the C.M.A. warned that growing labor unrest was not a "question of the usual matters such as wages, hours of labor, conditions of working and cost of living.

SINKING OF GERMAN SHIPS

German ships have to slink "from port to port" while British ships sail the Seven Seas "with never less than 1,000 ships on the sea or less than 400 in the danger-zone on any day." Proof of this is in Mr. Churchill's statement on Tuesday that May was the best month Britain had had for some time in the Atlantic and that the Axis losses in that month represented 387,000 tons sunk, captured or seen scuttled.

This is good news. Mr. Churchill pointed out that the German shipping presented only one-tenth of the target to the British that the British shipping presented to the enemy. In spite of this the British caused very heavy losses to the enemy.

The importance of the sinking, capturing or scuttling of enemy shipping has a relationship to "the possibility of seaborne invasion because destruction of the enemy tonnage is proceeding at a most rapid and satisfactory rate," said Mr. Churchill, pointing out that in the Battle of the Atlantic anti-aircraft is playing an important role.

MUSSOLINI STILL BRAGGART

Mussolini is still the braggart. His whole speech and the entire settings of the celebration of the first anniversary of Fascist Italy's entry into the war were built on the old plan—to rouse the spirits of the people in the face of new trials in the war which has intensified in the Mediterranean area and which is certain to lay heavier burdens on the people of Italy.

The man who lost the greatest part of the Italian Empire in a few brief months and who was on the verge of being trounced by the Greeks in Albania had it not been for the latter's Balkan situation with the advent of Germany, dared to boast that in April if it had not been for Balkan developments the Fascist Italians would have overcome and annihilated the Greeks. But the leader had to go to prepare the Italian people for the possibility of the whole of the empire of Italy being lost.

OLD NAMES FAMILIAR

How rich in history the eastern part of the Mediterranean is and how closely it is wrapped up in modern civilization must be clear to anyone who today reads the dispatches from the theatre of war. Names which we learned in the earliest days in Sunday school and church are revived and their mention links up what so many boys and girls have learned in their days of schooling with the present day world. The latest name on everyone's lip is Damascus in Syria. In the past few months the papers have been full of such names as Egypt, Cyrenaica, Athens, Crete and now the centre of interest moves to Asia Minor whose early history and records are known largely to the Western World through the Scriptures.

Today parts of that ancient world which saw an amazing development in the centuries before the time of Christ and in the centuries which immediately followed are more clearly understood than they have ever been. The Book of Acts tells the story of St. Paul's journeyings in the Mediterranean, his shipwreck off the island of Crete, and his famous sermon in Athens and many other incidents in the life of the leaders of the early church. The mind goes back to the earlier days of the Hebrew people. Not many days ago there was a reference to Ur of the Chaldees whence came Abraham, father of the Hebrew people. One thinks of the Hebrew settlement in Egypt at the time of the Pharaohs and rereads the story of Joseph and his brethren and the story of the exodus from the land of the Nile.

In reading over the names associated with the culture of the Eastern Mediterranean and Asia Minor and Greece, one comes into very close contact with the past. Today the British are at the gates of Damascus, the oldest city in the world and the city known not only because it gave the world the name "damask" still used for cloth but also the name of one of its most famous streets, that called "Straight." In this street dwelt the great Apostle Paul after his conversion on the road to Damascus.

OURSELVES AND OTHERS...

A wandering unemployed carpenter, who claimed Toronto as his home, is an opportunist to say the least. Applying for a job from a construction superintendent of a nearby air port he stated his name was "Bill Churchill," adding with a grin, "Give me the job, and I'll furnish the tools." P.S.: He got the job.

"Bride wed in lace," says a Lindsay newspaper. And something else, we hope," comments the Brockville Recorder. Well that is not so bad. How about that Yankee couple who were wed in the air the other day?

Speaking of golf, the longest drive ever made by a member of the staff of this newspaper measured six miles after the ball had been teed off. The record cannot be found in any official books, for the newshawk drove the ball squarely into the centre of a load of hay travelling along the highway which has to be cleared when driving from the number 2 hole of the Picton course. The farmer lived six miles down the road.

There is a bit of irony in the circumstance that the consort of the German battleship Bismarck was the cruiser Prince Eugen. The Prince Eugen was named for the famous Eugene of Savoy who co-operated with Marlborough, Prime Minister Churchill's ancestor, at the battle of Blenheim.—Winnipeg Tribune.

"Don't you ever feel sick, going up and down in this lift all day?" she asked.

"Yes, ma'm," said the boy.

"Is it the motion going up?"

"No, ma'am."

"Is it the motion going down?"

"No, ma'm."

"Is it the stopping that does it?"

"No, ma'am."

"Then what is it?"

"SWEET ROOT"

Uncle Sam is looking into the possibility of growing his own licorice instead of importing it from tropics.

Licorice is the dried root of a plant native to the Mediterranean and parts of the American south which has been coming from Asia Minor.

The United States is getting a little leery about being dependent on anything produced outside the Americas.

"Licorice" is derived from two Greek words meaning "sweet root," pronounced "lick-er-ish" or simply "lick-ish." The correct pronunciation is "lick-o-ris," with the first syllable accented.

Ninety percent of all the licorice in the United States is used in the manufacture of chewing tobacco, to give it flavor, and in the sticks or cords candy.

Cough drops and other medicinal uses account for the other five percent.

Three centuries before Christ, the Greek philosopher Theophrastus, pupil of Aristotle and "the Father of Botany," wrote that licorice which he called the "Scythian root," was useful against asthma or dry cough and in general troubles of the chest, and is also administered in honey for wounds.

The licorice plant belongs to the bean family and it flourishes in Spain, Italy, Greece, Russia and the Mediterranean coast regions of Asia.

Cuttings from the rootstocks are planted about three feet apart and nothing more is done to the field except to weed it. The soil is then plowed and the roots gathered.

Processing is somewhat unnecessary because enough small bits are mixed in to reduce the field.

The licorice roots are chopped up and ground under water. The resulting mixture is then evaporated to the proper consistency, rolled into cylindrical pieces and sold as commercial licorice.

Attempts to raise licorice in the United States have in the past proved unprofitable.

The peculiar sweet taste of licorice is owing to a colorless crystalline glucoside known to chemists as glycyrrhizin.

In medicine, licorice is used as an expectorant, a laxative and to make distasteful drugs palatable.

As a flavoring licorice extract is used not only in confections, cough drops and other medicines, and chewing tobacco, but also in liquor and certain other beverages.

FOR LOYAL SERVICE

London (CP) — The new badge approved by the King for invalided men and women of the fighting services consists of a royal and imperial crown, surrounded by a crown, and inscribed "for loyal service."

The Huns Go to Work On a Polish Castle

It was a great historical monument. Here, in mildieval ages, lived the Masovian princes, and since the 14th century Polish kings resided there. In the 18th century, the Polish diet debated there and drew the famous Polish constitution of May third, 1791, was adopted in its halls. The Royal Castle in Warsaw was a priceless possession of Poland and a symbol of the Polish State.

It was not an accident that Germans have bombed the castle perpetually, and that the German artillery concentrated its fire upon it during the siege of Warsaw. The Germans decided to destroy the castle because of its relation to Poland's life.

In spite of some damages, the castle remained intact. Part of the roof was destroyed by fire, and two towers. A number of Polish artists carefully examined the castle, during the first days of October, 1939, and found that the damages to the exterior in several weeks to a state of usefulness.

The work was to be stopped immediately by Poles and paid for by them. Roofs were almost entirely rebuilt, windows glazed. Most of the valuable murals, frescoes, and paintings were saved.

Suddenly, on October 18, 1939, German Governor General Hans Frank came to Warsaw. He visited the castle and ordered all reconstruction to be stopped immediately. While there, he himself tore off a part of the silk tapestry with the Polish eagle-symbol from the throne of the Polish kings in the Senate.

From that day systematic robbery began. In September, two and a half months everything valuable had been taken away: several hundred paintings among them a famous set of three pictures of old Warsaw by Canaletto; tons of marble and bronze statues; the castle, in its present state, cannot be rebuilt. It will always remain as a proof of German culture. — Polish News Bulletin.

Large holes were drilled in the castle walls and dynamite charges were put in them. The holes, two to ten feet deep, were made at the bottom of the walls and in the pillars which supported the arches. However, the Winter, which was unusually severe, caused a delay in the work of demolition, except in the interiors.

Hundreds of Jewish workers were mobilized and assigned to a German contractor, named Rudolf Beautiful marble fireplaces were taken to pieces, panelled walls, hand-carved wooden staircases, marble statues were destroyed; old Polish arms, invaluable old paintings wooden floors were smashed with axes. The so-called "Caseiette room," in the throne hall, and in the Knights' hall, were entirely destroyed. All these, so carefully preserved by the Poles, were thrown in the yard where they were exposed to rain and frost. Afterwards, they were broken to pieces and taken away on trucks. Even doors and modern casements were taken away, and only the bare brick walls remained.

Not satisfied with their barbaric achievements, the occupants started to cut out the wooden beams in the ceilings and floors. They were mostly very old large larch beams. Because of this, the magnificent painting of Baclarelli on the ceiling of the great hall was destroyed. The copper roof of the castle was removed, leaving bare, gaping, blasted walls.

In the meantime, the decision to blow out the walls was withdrawn. Perhaps the results already achieved satisfied the Germans, or perhaps they wanted to keep the Gothic castle as a reminder to the population.

Warsaw now survived many wars only to be finally destroyed by the systematic hands of modern barbarism. The castle, in its present state, cannot be rebuilt. It will always remain as a proof of German culture. — Polish News Bulletin.

O.E.S. to Broadcast Appeal for Funds For Mobile Canteen

Recognizing the need of providing Mobile Canteens for the assistance of the Mother Country in caring for bomb victims, the Eastern Star Fraternal Association of Ontario is making an appeal for contributions for this purpose. On Saturday evening, June 14th over CFRB at 7.30 p.m., the facilities of the Band Wagon program have been generously offered in order to further this project. The need of Mobile Canteens is apparent to all. The desolation following terrific air raids leaves countless men, women, and children bereft of even the necessities of life and only by emergent relief on a large scale can these people of the Motherland be kept from utter starvation. Mobile canteens is an answer to the ruthless campaign of Nazi destruction.

The Eastern Star throughout Ontario has been most active in war work, providing funds for the purchase of four ambulances, and completing an extensive program for all services, and for evacuees. A few months' activities resulted in over eight thousand pairs of socks completed, 2,351 pullovers, 358 boxes packed for overseas, 668 scarves and other requisites in the same generous number.

Mrs. Arthur Naylor, Patriotic Convener for the district, is endeavouring to raise $600 this year through the fourteen district chapters for the Benevolent Fund and already $412 has been subscribed.

In Belleville the members have pursued war activities tirelessly and the conveners of the Parents Committee of both Chapters, Mrs. T. W. Law of Belleville Chapter, R.R. 8, Belleville, and Mrs. J. R. Wonnacott, Minerva Chapter, 20 Green Street, and district convener, Mrs. Arthur Naylor 300 Bleecker Avenue, are identified with the Mobile Canteen project and will receive gratefully any gifts, even though for twenty-five dollars has been contributed.

A busy war work from January 1st to June, 1941, Belleville Chapter has contributed to the Lord Beaverbrook Fund $446.11 and twenty-five dollars to the Red Cross, Overseas War Services Fund, the British War Victims' Fund, the Eastern Star Mobile Canteen Fund, the Queen Elizabeth Fund and ten dollars to the Red Cross for purchase of war parcels. The members have finished six quilts, 4 baby sets, 18 prs of socks, 16 sweaters, 6 pairs of mitts, five scarves and eleven blankets as well as 4 sets of bedding 36 soldiers' parcels containing socks, sweaters, mitts, scarves and toilet articles.

Minerva Chapter besides contributions of money for the Lord Beaverbrook Fund and of 14,305 cigarettes through the Past Patrons' Fund have done sewing and knitting for soldiers and refugees, also shipped to England, in the past five months as follows:— 81 pairs socks, 3 pair wristlets, 7 scarves, 13 sweaters, 8 suits pyjamas, 22 pairs bloomers, 2 dresses, 3 knitted suits, 5 quilts, 1 pair slippers, 2 gowns, baby clothes, 2 gowns, 6 slips, 6 pairs bootees, 1 wool coat, 1 wool bonnet, 1 wool shirt, 4 binders, safety pins and powder, 1 dress.

The Stars Say

For Friday, June 13
By GENEVIEVE KENDALE

WHILE the lunar and solar mutual aspect for the day point to considerable gain and stability of the affairs, mainly due to industry, application, well-directed energy to the affairs and obligations in hand, yet there is shown a menace of trickery, duplicity and divers phases of fraud, intrigue and undercover schemes of deep-laid and perspicacious complexion. In such treacherous circumstances it may be profitable to confer with elders, relatives or other responsible counselors. But keep alert to all illicit entanglements.

Those whose birthday it is although having a year of much concrete progress in the direction of putting their affairs on a stable and enduring foundation, may have work, fidelity, sound judgment and tactics yet may be subject to duplicity, fraud, illicit entanglements or some sort of baleful intrigue or stratagem, unless they are particularly keen to such duplicity. Confer with elders and superiors in tricky situations.

A child born on this day should be fairly enterprising, practical, constructive, with steadfastness and diligence, yet may suffer through subtle treacheries or peculiar entanglements.

For Cheerful, Dainty Bedroom

By ELEANOR ROSS

NO MATTER what the decorative scheme may be, cheerfulness and comfort are the two keynotes of the modern bedroom. The cheery note is struck by the judicious use of color, while good sleeping equipment takes care of the comfort angle.

Two promotions that are great favorites are gay and strawberry chintz for everything from window drapes to closet accessories. Luscious red strawberries in clusters on shaded green leaves against a white background. Ample valances, dressing table, skirts, stools, lampshades, bench, chairs and quilts are made from this colorful chintz. Rose prints are also popular. Ensembling is also easily done by combining chintz drapes with viole curtains of the same rose pattern, and for extra charm a rose colored lawn nightie is combined with a matching rose patterned robe.

Appropriate colors for bedroom decor include pink for youth animation and daintiness, while blue spells tranquillity and spaciousness. Green is restful and quiet and is useful for cooling down rooms which are too sunny. Orchid gives dignity and splendor to a room and is nice and rich furnishings. Cream, ivory and yellow are light and cheerful and are valuable where light is ordinarily poor, while tan and golden brown give warmth and light.

Black and white wil intensify other colors by contrast. Taupe combines well with others, grays should contain the dominant color of the room plan. Blue, green (except yellow green) violet and lavender are cool colors. Pink, yellow, cream, ivory, tan, golden brown and orchid are warm. Red and brown should be used sparingly or not at all for bedrooms and the same rule applies to such shades as purple, plum and mauve.

It isn't wise to place too much furniture in a bedroom. For the sake of health and proper slumber, there should be an uninterrupted current of air flowing through the room. Place furniture carefully and wisely, so that it will make dressing easy.

Pretty Towels Add to Kitchen Charm

A KITCHEN, however gleaming, modern and scientific, is no better than its dish towels. It does seem strange that in so many households where there is a super abundance of everything, this phase of kitchen equipment has not been done right by, and makeshifts are in use.

The minimum requirement in any proper kitchen is a dish towel suitable for both glasses and dishes, as well as the proper array of heavy dish cloths for the dishpan. Towels should be of good quality, preferably linen, as it will wear better and has many absorbent qualities. Linen comes in different weights for different purposes, and when woven in short fibres is excellent for crash and toweling. Although linen is generally so marketed, it is well to know that linen remains smooth when rubbed with a damp cloth, while cotton roughs up. Linen is hard to tear and the torn edge is smooth, while cotton is torn easily and the edges curl as they tear.

Good Investment

Good dish towels are worth the extra price and if they are carefully handled they will offer long kitchen duty. They should be rinsed out after each using, never left about in a soiled condition. It is a matter of but a few minutes and almost no effort to give the used towels a bath and hang to dry. They should go to the laundry or into the home washing machine for a proper washing at least once a week.

A kitchen roller of paper towels is a fine kitchen aid. Use the paper towels for polishing kitchen glassware and so save your fine glass towels.

New Gaiety

Kitchen towels have gone gay lately. For years the white towel with a chaste red or navy line border has been at home in the best kitchens. But now there are colorful and pretty patterns designed to tie in with that spot of bright yellow or green in the kitchen, and to bring the garden indoors, too.

Getting Ready for Hay Fever Season

Although the hay fever season does not arrive until late in August, if you have in mind taking injections to prevent or relieve the attack, your physician would like to get started at least six weeks ahead of the hay fever season; that is, some time in June.

There is no question but that these injections usually given twice a week for six weeks before the hay fever season have "cured" many cases. It is true also that sometimes the series of injections must be given for three or four years, before satisfactory results are obtained. It is also only too true that despite the fact that ragweed pollen causes the attack, the injection of ragweed pollen for as many as six years in succession has failed to cure some cases.

If the injections of ragweed pollen fail to give relief, is there any other treatment available?

A couple of years ago Dr. Philip Franklin, in the British Medical Journal, reported the results of treatment of 776 clinic patients with hay fever during 1935 by the use of "electric" treatments, which used the faradic current.

The nose is sprayed with a weak solution of a local anaesthetic and packed with thin squares of cotton, moistened slightly by a single layer of gauze soaked in a 1 per cent solution of zinc sulphate. After the packing the patient goes to the ionization treatment room and is treated with an ionization set connected to an electric supply derived from a special battery. Treatment is given for fifteen minutes and the nose is then inspected. Treatment is given immediately before the onset of hay fever or at the beginning of the attack.

Of the 776 cases, about 50 per cent were free from hay fever during the season, 35 per cent greatly improved, 46 per cent received slight benefit, 9 per cent received no benefit, and 2 per cent were made worse.

Last year I spoke of a new treatment used in 50 cases by Dr. C. S. Hart, Chamberlain, Arizona, in Medical World. It consists of the injection of the extract of the front part of the pituitary gland (3 drops, equal to 10 1-2 grains of the fresh gland) once a day for seven to ten days, then three times a week for two weeks, twice a week for two weeks, and about once a week thereafter until 24 injections in all have been given. Treatment is begun about two months before the usual time of onset of hay fever. Satisfactory results were obtained in 82 per cent of the cases.

HOUSE ACCEPTS SENATE MOTION WITH A RIDER

Commons Sends Polite Note to Upper House Claiming Senate Came Close to Infringing on Rights of House

ESTIMATES PASSED

By FRANK PLANERETT
Canadian Press Staff Writer.

Ottawa, June 12 (CP)—In polite note to the Senate that it came close to infringing the time-honored privileges of the House of Commons awaits members of the Upper House of parliament when they reassemble today.

In adopting a Senate amendment to a bill based on the budget the Commons on motion of Finance Minister Ilsley last night, attached a rider that it was waiving none of its rights and privileges and the action will not be taken as a precedent.

Then it asserted the principle that "only the elected representatives of the people in the Commons may deal with money bills and that the Senate may not increase or originate taxation."

Mr. Ilsley said the amendment was not really a revenue amendment and would have little effect on revenue. It provided that the application of a tax designed to force British and foreign insurance companies doing business in Canada to register with the Dominion government should not come into effect until the Supreme Court of Canada rules is constitutionally sound.

At present the tax does not apply to companies if they register with a provincial government and seven provinces have protested the change.

After 10 days of prolonged sittings the House hit a preadjournment pace last night as it broke estimates for the Departments of Agriculture, Fisheries and Finance were approved. Members sat until midnight and resumed at 11 o'clock this morning.

King Makes an Announcement

The long sitting yesterday was productive of a variety of information, on a Cabinet change, revealing figures, production of munitions and marketing of fish products.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King announced appointment of Joseph Thorson (Lib. Selkirk) to the post of Minister of National War Services, succeeding Norman McLarty, who will devote his whole time to his other department, Agriculture.

Defence Minister Ralston said the concentration of the army recruiting campaign is increasing and 97 per cent of the objective of 32,000 men, or 10,344, now have been enlisted.

Answering an earlier question from M. J. Coldwell, Acting C.C.F. Leader, (Lib. Rosetown-Biggar) he thought no good purpose would be served at this stage by making district recruiting figures available.

In some districts where recruiting committees were just getting going, Yesterday, said the Minister, was the largest day since the campaign started.

One-Third Fare For Soldiers

The Minister also had good news for soldiers, sailors and airmen as he announced an arrangement whereby the railway fares they pay when proceeding on annual embarkation leave will be cut to one-third.

At present service men get a return ticket for the price of civilians pay, for a one-way ticket. The railways will share half the cost of the reduction and the government will contribute the other half.

The plan, follows the plan already in force under such action by private steamship companies during the season.

These stressed the high cost of railway transportation in Canada over a long distance from their homes and who wished to go home before going overseas or on their annual leaves.

Labor Minister McLarty had another piece of news for the fighting men. He said a bill is being prepared to assure men who join the services of the return of their jobs after the war. It will be introduced next session.

Curtailed 40 Per Cent

Fisheries Minister Michaud said the demands of Great Britain for canned salmon from Canada would result in a curtailment of more than 40 per cent in the amount of this food available for sale in Canada and for export to countries other than Great Britain.

Out of an expected pack of 1,700,000 cases Canada has agreed to supply 1,300,000 to Great Britain against 500,000 sent to that country last year. Each case, he said, contains 96 half-pound tins.

The Minister also said the United Kingdom wanted 26,000 long tons of canned herring from Canada and in order to supply this it would probably be necessary to prohibit the reduction of herring into meal and other products in some if not in all herring fishing areas.

Creates Interest

An announcement from outside the House, the elevation of Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, former Conservative Prime Minister, to the peerage as a Viscount aroused interest among members. Conservative House Leader Hanson who with Mrs. Hanson visited Mr. Bennett was one of those who cabled congratulations.

The announcement, a member of the present parliament, Mrs. Cora T. Hoodes, (Lib. Edmonton East) was escorted to her seat by Prime Minister Mackenzie King and Trade Minister MacKinnon. She is the fourth woman to be elected to the House since the franchise was extended to women and succeeds her husband who died suddenly last winter. The only other woman member at present is Mrs. Dorise Nielsen (Unity North Battleford).

Mrs. Sadie Latta, Former Thomasburg Resident, Killed

Kingston, June 12 — Mrs. Sadie Latta, 56, a King Street rooming-house keeper, was killed instantly and Orilla Ouimet, 40, was seriously injured when Ouimet, between a large parked transport truck and a passenger car on Highway No. 2 early Wednesday morning. The accident took place about seven miles east of Kingston, close to the entrance of a large summer resort park.

Ouimet was taken to Kingston General Hospital with serious head injuries, where his condition was reported as favorable last night. A native of Cornwall, he was employed here as a farmhand carpenter with the Anglin-Norcross Construction Company.

The car driven by Ouimet crashed into the left rear of a Smith Transport truck, which was parked on the north shoulder of the highway, Bruce Taylor, Toronto, employed as a truck driver by the transport company told police he had pulled off the eastbound portion of the highway to check his tires. So terrific was the impact, Ouimet's heavy car was smashed beyond repair, although the truck was not badly damaged.

Dr. F. A. McLeod, coroner, stated tonight an inquest would be held although no fixed date has been set. Provincial Traffic Officer Harry Caldwell investigated.

Surviving are two children, Cyril Latta of Toronto, and Mrs. Harold McConnell, Hastings. Mrs. Latta had operated a rooming house in this city since 1927. She was born in Thomasburg, Ont., and spent the greater part of her life there. Her husband, the late Thomas Latta, operated a cheese factory in Thomasburg and Campbellford. Following her husband's death, Mrs. Latta conducted a tourist camp at Healey Falls for some years.

Many Indications Attack on Egypt Next Axis Move

(By KIRKE L. SIMPSON)

Washington, June 12 (AP)—The warning voice by Prime Minister Churchill against premature "julius-tion" here indicated clear concentration in Syria and Lebanon found acquick echo in repeated Axis bombing of Matruh in Egypt.

Invasion of Egypt from the west by "the German army of Cyrenaica," the Nazi high command's pet, our chief preoccupation in the Middle East," the most "formidable menace to Egypt," Churchill in the premo commander in the East, General Wavell, felt that his western front in Egypt was adequately reinforced to meet that possibility, he added, was the British-Free French invasion of the Italian-mandated Levant States possible.

Lack of General Wavell's ability to halt the powerful Axis drive from Libya into Egypt may be at the root of Mr. Winston Churchill's warning that front, more than 100 miles eastward from Mr. Churchill's Libyan border, is based on the Matruh railhead.

Two air assaults on Matruh in as many nights, either from bases in Libya or across the Mediterranean in Crete, imply that it is from that quarter that the first formidable German "menace to Egypt" is invasion of Egypt by land, while that reaction "remains sure" that the British-Free French-Churchill warned, jubilation over Nazi developments in Syria continues.

There are other indications that Egypt itself will be the next main battleground. Persistent reports which bear the stamp of credibility say that heavy German and Italian reinforcements were shuttled from Sicily to Libya while the Battle of Crete drew British sea and air power away from the Sicilian Straits bridgehead.

Reaction of French colonial forces in North Africa to the Allied invasion in the Levant is not yet certain. Neither Vichy officials nor General Weygand, Petain deputy across the Mediterranean, have clearly indicated what part Weygand's colonial troops might play in the struggle. He is variously reported as opposing aggressive French action in North or West Africa and as fully supporting the Petain-Darlan policy of "collaborating" with Germany.

Other factors of an impending Axis drive eastward toward Alexandria and the Suez Canal have come from Rome. Withdrawal of Nazi Air Force units, especially for service elsewhere, presumably in the Eastern Mediterranean war theatre, was recently announced by the Italian capital. Mussolini, in his war anniversary reading, stressed the agreement he reached with Hitler to take over the planning of the Axis-conquered Greece, releasing German forces there for other undisclosed missions.

Conflicting reports about the share Nazi air power is to have in the struggle in Syria do not preclude whole Independent German air operations against British sea and air bases in Palestine and Egypt. Either Crete or Italian bases in the Dodecanese Islands offer opportunity for German military air attack from the north to supplement a land drive over the Libyan-Egyptian border. Intensive bombing of the Matruh railhead supporting Britain's main western defense line would be a logical preliminary to such a drive.

British-Free French occupation of Lebanon and Syral would greatly lessen the danger of an Axis pincer attack on Egypt from east and west; but it also would extend British defense lines. The British Command has nearly 2,000 miles of Mediterranean coastline to guard if its ace front is to reach from the Libyan-Egyptian border to Turkish frontiers in Syria.

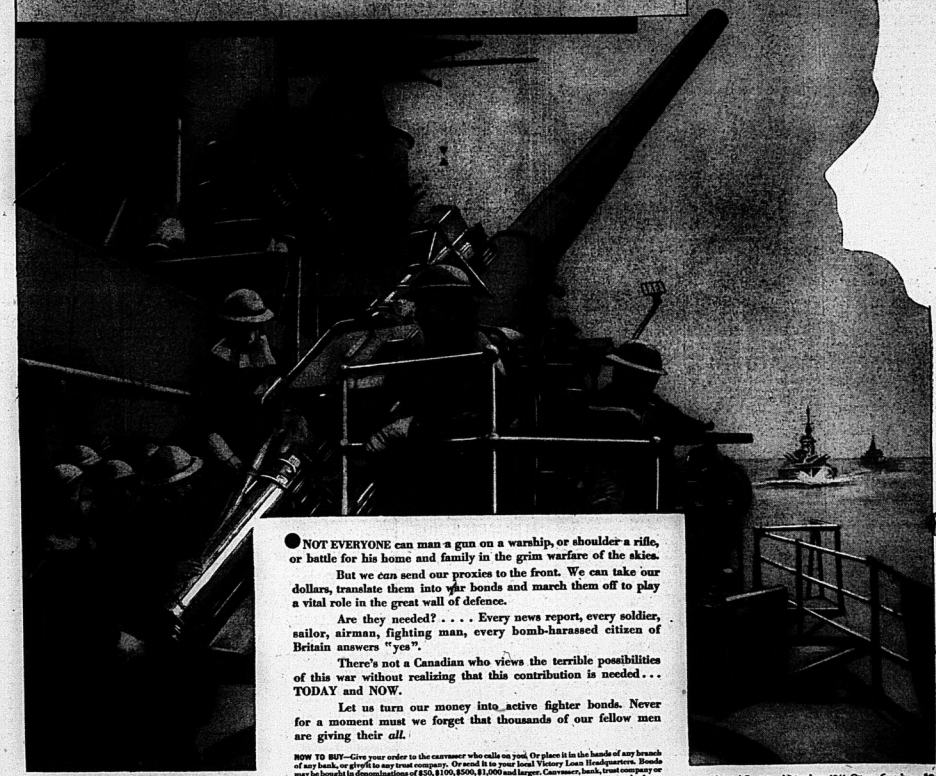
Buy your share in a Warship

TO DEFEND YOUR HOME



NOT EVERYONE can man a gun on a warship, or shoulder a rifle, or battle for his home and family in the grim warfare of the skies.

But we can send our proxies to the front. We can take our dollars, translate them into war bonds and march them off to play a vital role in the great wall of defence.

Are they needed? . . . . Every news report, every soldier, sailor, airman, fighting man, every bomb-harassed citizen of Britain answers "yes".

There's not a Canadian who views the terrible possibilities of this war without realizing that this contribution is needed . . . TODAY and NOW.

Let us turn our money into active fighter bonds. Never for a moment must we forget that thousands of our fellow men are giving their all.

HOW TO BUY—Give your order to the canvasser who calls on you. Or place it in the hands of any branch of any bank, or give it to any trust company. Or send it to your local Victory Loan Headquarters. Bonds may be bought in denominations of $25, $100, $500, $1,000 and larger. Canvasser, bank, trust company or local Victory Loan Headquarters will be glad to give you every assistance in making out your order form.

guns will be sponged and purged and, if asked, be blasted from the surface of the ocean floor.

On Hitler's Track

"It is doubtful if Hitler had fortunes that he will have to reckon with," Mr. Bevin, Churchill declared of Hitler. "We shall strive to see that he has not. We shall shall be on his track wherever he goes."

He said Hitler would find "no peace, no rest, no halting place, no breathing space."

Ending on a solemn note, he told the gathering that Britain and the United Nations of the Allied armies and navies, "driven to the uttermost hazards, he will attempt an invasion of the British Isles, as well he may. We shall not flinch from the supreme trial. With the help of God, of whom we must all feel daily conscious, we shall continue steadfast in faith and duty till our task is done."

The resolution of the conference was adopted by the governments of the United States, Canada, South Africa, New Zealand, South Africa, Belgium, Czecho-Slovakia, Greece, Luxembourg, The Netherlands, Norway, Poland and Yugoslavia, and by representatives of the Free French government.

AID-TO-BRITAIN

"If the volume can't be transported, I'll be pressed within a very short time," he said, "our chances of keeping Hitler and the war in Europe are mighty slim and Britain's chances are desperate."

Another supporter of the British aid program, Senator Styles Bridges (Rep., N.H.) bluntly remarked that $75,000,000 "is a mighty negligible amount."

"It is no wonder the British are laid to the basic," he said.

Need Five Times as Much

From Senator Robert A. Taft (Rep., Ohio), who opposed the original aid to Britain legislation, came a statement that "we should have shipped five times as much."

Senator Allen J. Johnson (Dem., Colorado) remarked that the report was very disappointing, but Hitler had better be looking at his hole card three months from now."

Expressing surprise at the report, Senator Walter F. George (Dem., Ga.), said he had assumed that between $1,500,000,000 and $2,000,000,000 would be made available.

London (CP)—Apparently pleased British newspapers printed under restrained headlines the United States President Roosevelt's announcement that $75,000,000 worth of United States equipment had been transferred to Britain between April 21 and May 31 under the lease-lend program.

If there was any disappointment at this sum, editorial writers did not as some add-to-Britain advocates had expected, the figure was not reflected in newspapers.

"U.S. sends more guns and more bombers," Roosevelt promises more and more," was the line over two million tons of shipping. As one were some of the headlines over stories of the President's report.

The report was printed without editorial comment, but the Daily Mirror, under the caption "U.S. speeds war aid," said Britain's daily war expenditures have been lumped in the United States.

Official sources said that 200 more ships are ready to make when told that some circles in Washington were critical of the progress of the aid-to-Britain program.

their convenience."

Mr. Mahaney said the number of instalment subscribers was so small as to be "quite remarkable."

Premier Hepburn commented: "It is pleasant and comforting at the end of the first 1000 subscriptions from day to day that the Canadian people have responded in such large indications were that, provided the organization can be completed within an early over-subscription would be in sight," the Sydney speaker said.

"That early progress has been maintained.

The Victory Loan Committee through its various publicity outlets had been exerting its influence to impress upon the people of Canada the importance of every one support the loan, not only within his immediate capacity but by taking advantage of the six month instalment plan as was provided in the terms of the loan. I believe the activities of the Victory Loan Committee and the Canada have created a patriotic fervor which far exceeds anything we have seen since the war began, but now is the time to translate patriotic fervor into action."

BRITISH CAPTURE

(The Eritrean coast is approximately 670 miles long.)

There was no confirmation, however of any dealings upon the French Somaliland coast, where a strong French garrison but which London apparently has at the disposal.

The fall of Asab was reported from Aden in a Reuters news agency dispatch. Asab is at the southern end of the Red Sea and on the second port of Eritrea.

Few Italians Captured

Two Italian generals and a naval officer are among the prisoners taken at Asab.

Britain's Middle East Headquarters announced that the port was captured as a result of a combined operation by the British Royal Navy and the Royal Air Force supported by naval bombardment and plan troops.

Previously so far counted include 30 naval ratings, 87 pilots and airmen, 39 German seamen and numbers of Italian civilians, the communique said.

Brigadier Wavell and Placentini with Captain Cotta of the Royal Italian Navy signed the surrender.

The communique also reported the capture of Agordat, an important town of Eritrea, 60 miles south of Asmara, and 100 miles north of Keren.

Asab is the second port of Eritrea.

Massaua, the chief port, was captured by British, Imperial and Free French forces April 8.

ALEPPO AIRDROME

One of the units advancing northward from Palestine was that of Col. Delr-es-zor after moving 75 miles up the Euphrates Valley from the Iraq frontier, press dispatches from Turkey said.

Railway Reaches Kalis

The other column, the same sources said, moved from Tell Kalis, 100 miles north of Deir-es-zor along the Aleppo-Baghdad railway, which parallels the Turkish frontier.

From Tell Kalis, according to these reports, are within 175 miles of Aleppo, the principal junction of air base and a rail centre.

Meanwhile, the Paris radio acknowledged that Allied forces had crossed the Syrian border from Palestine at Abou Kemal on the Euphrates, but failed to say how deeply they had penetrated.

Official British sources had little to say concerning operations in the southern front, but Vichy claimed its troops had withdrawn from Beirut and Free French forces at Bey on the outskirts of Damascus while yielding ground in the north.

Attack Quelled Is Claim

Heavy attacks launched by the free French yesterday just east of Damascus, in an attempt to drive through to the city, Vichy said were repelled, Vichy claimed.

The French acknowledged, however, the loss of Merdjayoun to Allied troops pushing toward Beirut from the south. Merdjayoun has fallen back to new positions on the heights of Hasbaya, dispatches said, after a narrow passage leading to the fourth.

Capture of Merdjayoun, 40 miles southwest of Beirut, gives the Allies the northernmost tip of Palestine. Other dispatches from sources Monday or the second day of the Syrian campaign advance elements moving along the road to Damascus.

700 EMPLOYEES VOTE TO RETURN TO WORK—FRIDAY

Strike at Two C.G.E. Plants Termed Illegal by Labor Minister McLarty

VOTE IS 201 TO 44

Toronto, June 13—(CP)—The 700 employees of the Toronto branches of two Canadian General Electric plants in Toronto, declared illegal by Labor Minister McLarty, voted today to return to work, ending a strike of the workers voted to return to their machines Friday.

The decision to end the strike was taken in a three-hour meeting of 245 of the workers, who voted 201 to 44 to terminate what they termed a "lockout." The workers will return to work Friday, pending until the company manager would complete with their union, the United Electric, Radio and Machine Workers of America, (CIO).

The Canadian Congress of Labor.

This meeting followed one held by the workers on Wednesday voted 96 to 15 to end the strike.

Statement by Workers

The workers' meeting passed a statement declaring holidays and O.H. workers be terminated on the basis of the Dominion Board's first offer of an immediate Board of Conciliation, Mr. Justice Wilfrid T. Cohen, Toronto lawyer, as their representative on a Conciliation Board.

Policy committees of the employees and the management of the company this morning to arrange details of the meeting today and another meeting of the workers will be held this afternoon to hear reports of these negotiations. Work will be resumed Friday.

Early this week Mr. McLarty announced that after three warnings to the strike leaders at the two plants or face prosecution of illegal stoppage of work, the strike was unheeded, he had turned the case over to the Attorney-General for action.

As late as last night there had been no indication that the strike would be terminated quickly. The strikers met yesterday and decided to remain out until some basis for settlement was reached between the tween union men and company officials.

Besides union recognition, the direct issue in the strike, the strikers also asked an increase of 10 cents an hour in wages.

The French said last night that forces in Jebel Ed Druz were holding Soueida, 60 miles south of Damascus, and British sources did not contradict.

Authoritative sources here said that the Allies are moving only in the hope of avoiding heavy fighting and avoiding many of the French defenders to their cause.

Vichy, however, claimed the French had withdrawn "of their own" at the hands of numerically superior forces, particularly in the Lisan River sector.

Certain Areas Resisting

THE WAR TODAY

This morning's Nazi (Berlin) radio broadcast by the Italian radio, said Hitler has ordered a "gigantic" air offensive against Britain, together with Britain, was doing and would do to overcome this menace to mankind's freedom. Neither did they quote Mr. Roosevelt's promise in his "fireside" yesterday that "we will help Britain to conquer the Axis powers in munitions of war, and we will see to it that these munitions get to the battle fronts." Both are extensively used to weaken and defeat the aggressors.

Must Get Supplies Through

Among the matters requiring being dealt with by Washington is that of getting supplies to the British forces in the Middle East, which has been complicated by the increasing activities of Axis air forces in the Middle Atlantic, between South America and Africa. The attempt which ships bound for the Cape and the Red Sea must pass.

Averell Harriman in charge of co-ordinating supplies from the United States to Britain by lend-lease, is expected to report to President Roosevelt on his return to the United States to see that its ships retain the right to sail the seas unmolested, the case may have profound repercussions. In the meantime Washington is urging the public to reserve judgment on the case until the full facts are ascertained.

R. B. Bennett Created Viscount, Will Take Seat in House of Lords

London, June 12. —(CP) — Created a Viscount in the Birthday Honors, Right Hon. R. B. Bennett, Canada's Prime Minister with a seat in the House of Lords, where he is expected to take an active part in Empire affairs, political circles believe he may possibly assume the role 'of an Empire spokesman comparable to the statesmen of Canadian and Empire affairs.

Some authorities indicated other honors had been offered Lord Bennett, but declined. The new peerage because he felt he could be more helpful to Canada and Empire at this critical period of the war.

Nearing his seventy-first birthday, he appears to be in his prime and should be the same vigorous statesman he was a few years ago on doctor's orders.

Smiling broadly, he received a Canadian Press correspondent last night at his home in London, a modest old stone house, black coat and striped trousers similar to those he wore in the Canadian House of Commons, he indicated he looked forward with keen anticipation to membership in the Parliamentary assembly. He talked of his interest in the welfare of Canadian political life, but mentioned only generally his future plans.

Many Peers are close friends who visit him frequently at his Surrey home, and he will have an appreciative audience in the House of Lords. Whether he will speak or not will select a Canadian name for his title.

"Will it be Calgary?" he was asked.

"Sorry, but I haven't decided yet", he replied.

Cardinals Rate Extra Credit For Staying in League Lead Despite Heavy Injury List

Loss Service of Third Baseman Due to a Broken Finger

REDS SHUTOUT

By JUDSON BAILEY
Associated Press Sports Writer.

It takes a great baseball club to survive a series of injuries such as the St. Louis Cardinals have been getting. In the course of beating Philadelphia Phillies 3-1 in 10 innings last night the Cardinals lost the services of third baseman Jimmy Brown for three weeks because of a fractured finger.

A month ago their regular catcher, rookie Walker Cooper, suffered a broken bone in his shoulder and a dislocation of his collarbone and since then both first baseman Johnny Mize and second baseman Frank Crespi have had broken fingers.

The fact that these bad breaks have not interfered greatly with the Cardinals' charge toward a championship is a fine tribute to the club and to the resourcefulness of Manager Billy Southworth.

Brown was hurt in the first inning last night at Philadelphia while sliding into third base for a triple that brought his team's first tally.

Two Full Games Up

This triumph lifted St. Louis two full games ahead of the second-place Brooklyn Dodgers ,who were shellacked 8-1 by Pittsburgh Pirates in another night struggle. The Pirates made it three in the first fifth on a homer by Al Lopez. Max Rosen's overthrow of first with the bases loaded, an da balk. Three more runs resulted as Vince DiMaggio's homer in the sixth.

Dick Riddleburn, who had not only one previous pitching victory, Boston Braves to a three hit, 2-0 shutout of Cincinnati Reds in the final with Bucky Walters.

Chicago Cubs and New York Giants divided a doubleheader, the Cubs winning 2-3 and 5-4 and losing 8-1. In the first game Claude Passeau kept 11 hits scattered and hit his own third homer of the year for the deciding run.

Ekrich Leads

Two games in the American League escaped into the mid-west, Cleveland Indians enhanced their lead by whipping Washington Senators 6-4, and Detroit Tigers downed Philadelphia Athletics 5-2.

Lefty Al Smith of the Indians had easy sailing after a four-run fourth inning.

At Detroit Buck Newsom pitched six-hit ball in the nite for the second time this season and Pat Mullin aided with a two-run homer.

Boston Red Sox and St. Louis Browns started their game, but it was halted with both teams leading 4-0 in the fourth inning.

"Told them I considered it a compliment," replied Mr. Picobac, proceeding to light his pipe freshly filled with the fragrant Canadian Burley for which Sunny Southern Ontario has won enduring fame. "I felt like a man of substance."

"Well, so you are," declared Mrs. Picobac. "You're not a millionaire but you're a substantial citizen in Essex Centre, and I think you can well afford to subscribe to Canada's War Loan."

"Don't you worry, mother," said he at last. "I'm a Canadian: I signed for duration once, and I'm doing my bit this time, too: I'll keep the old flag flying if it takes every cent in the world."

Head Protectors Ordered for Indians

Cleveland, June 13 (AP)—Cleveland Indians of the American Baseball League are going to get some head protectors, for optional use, as a result of the injury to Roy Weatherly yesterday. The stocky fielder was hit over the right ear by a ball pitched by Ken Chase, Washington left-hander, in the fourth inning.

"It was an accident," said Weatherly at the hospital. "I saw it coming, but just couldn't get out of the way."

Chase, declaring he felt "terrible" blamed his loss of control on a blister on his pitching hand.

After visiting Weatherly at hospital, where an X-ray showed no sign of a fracture, C. C. Slapnicka club vice-president, said:

"I'm going to get skull caps for the players. Several of the Indians have agreed to wear them and I'll try to get the others to do so. Wearing of the caps will be optional, however, just as it is with Brooklyn Dodgers."

CORBYS SCORE SIXTH WIN AT SACO'S EXPENSE

Johnny Bawden Throws Five-Hitter as Blank 'Boiler-Makers' 8-0

ONE EXTRA BASE HIT

Behind Johnnie Bawden's five-hit tossing the Corby's A.C. chalked up their sixth consecutive win in the Senior Softball League as they blanked the SACO team 8 to 0 at Coleman Plata last night.

Harold Bawden's undefeated string of victims was in the second frame and literally coasted in to win in a breeze without effort as Bawden mowed the Ethler-led "boiler-makers" down like chaff before the wind. Norm O'Neill's seventh inning triple was the only extra base hit collected off Bawden's deliveries by the losers.

Snappy fielding featured the game as three speedy two-ply plays were made, Corby's kicking in with two and the SACO making one double killing. The fielding sensation of the night was another Jimmie Bartrage, diminutive left-fielder for Corby's who made a thrilling running catch of Ken Holmes' long drive to the right field to double Storey off first base. Bawden aided and abetted by Bartrage led two, while Kerr, who was shelled from the SACO hilltop in the fifth following a few runs of doubles whiffed one and his successor, Jim Hunter, also struck another. The Corby's failed to score after Hunter took over the SACO pitching duties, however.

Cy and Jim Bartrage, Henn and Kiser all hit doubles for Corby's, Tuttle getting a brace of singles in his first appearance in a local softball lineup in two years. Tuttle returned to the game to handle defensive assists of his old battery-mate, Johnnie Bawden and donned a Corby uniform last night.

Boo Boo now flies to the meets in his plane, a nifty job he bought with his writer's winnings. . . . Speaking of planes, after Larry Macphail threatened Cookie Lavagetto and Dolph Camilli with $500 fines last week for taking flying lessons, he got a letter on Civil Aeronautics commission stationery pointing out fewer people were killed flying than by rattle-snakes. . . . GOSSIP NEWS COMMENT

It seems three Canadians, sleeping in a tent in one of Britain's shining areas, were rudely awakened by a terrific crash not far from their sleeping quarters.

"What was that, bombs or thunder?" suddenly asked one of the Canadians.

"Bombs," came back a laconic reply from the dark.

"Thank God," chimed in a third. "I'm glad for a moment there I'm going to have some more rain."

Now it can be told—the reason for the sudden decrease in the trees is attributed to morning practices, which some members of the McCarthymen were enjoying their last home stand. The Highlanders practiced two full days before the game and behind locked doors.

There just seems to be no stopping of Hirsel Bawden's Corby A.C. "smashhitters." Last night they bashed up Saco for their seventh win without a single defeat having charged against them this season. As Johnnie Bawden pitched five-hit shut-out ball against all the Corby's collected was a single counter to win, but the added punch in the persons of Ern Kerr and Orvel Hunter to cover in the fifth and sixth frames when slengzied Jim Hunter took over the SACO pitching duties the Corby's failed to score from the fourth to the seventh inning to connect three hits after the fifth frame off Hunt.r's deliveries. Corby's had chalked up seven runs inning, except the first and last when they collected five and six frames should caution Skipper Harold Bawden to watch the head of some batting practice, even if his mound opponent. Bawden's snappy fielding was seen last night when he handled in two or two double plays and SACO completed one two-ply killing. Jimmie Bartrage's diving catch of Ken Holmes' Texas league topper to double Storey off first, Storey off first, was the feature play of the game.

Do you remember when Ralph Guidall, Chicago professional, blasted out Rutland Hills golf course at Birmingham, Mich. in record time to win the United States' Open Golf championship four years ago today? The Texan-born pro posted 284 strokes for the round than the record made by Tony Manero in 1935.

En route last week to Tennessee to participate in Army manoeuvres, Private Hank Greenberg, who batted at every stop by autograph seekers and newspaper men, Greenberg-Hank, a member of the Fifth Division, expressed the feeling that he could be "just one of the boys." He added: "I appreciate it very much if the public feels that way but I get lost in the Army and forget about me. It's kinda nice and considerate of my friends, but all this publicity is doing me more harm than good."

It was a close fit when the Belleville Golf Green Fee club's 5c 26½ over the Country Club over the former's course in a city golf tournament yesterday. The visiting Country Club couples were awaiting the last while pill down the fairways, were a heart few points and 6 to 1 with "Buster" LaBarr and Bob Wray leading out on the 18th. "Buster" came through with three points and won for the homestretch, but there was considerable tension inside the clubhouse.

Harry Ridley got revenge for last week's defeat at the hands of Bill Little and won 3-1 over the Country Club pro. Little ran into some tough golf on the 18th hole when his first approach shot hit an elm tree and deflected into a thick clump of cedars and Bill carded a nine on a three-par hole. The remaining two matches of the city series will be played late in September.

"I'm just keeping in condition for next winter's hockey," cracked Tillie Dondiene, leading scorer of the Reliance senior puckchasers as he won the men's singles in the match played between the two local tennis clubs in the Trent Valley Tennis League last evening. Tillie was forced to the limit by Les Lennox in the feature match of the tournament when the Quinte Tennis Club took over the lead in the spot by a narrow margin by taking three of the four matches in the tourney. The West sides only took top counting in the ladies' doubles, as the ladies netsters swept through to win in the other three matches. However, the West Sides still have a chance to redeem themselves as the two unplayed sets of men's double in the series will be played Saturday.

Four clubs entered the City "Six Pin" Industrial Softball loop last night, Corbins, C.N.R., Bakelite and the Belleville Orfuns banded together at the Y.M.C.A. and formed Bermuda Mosquito as President. The organization of this league, which is solely for the purpose of providing recreation for those wishing a little exercise, is due chiefly to the work of Frank Fulwell. A set of rules and a playing schedule, which will be released in the near future, will find the league opening next Monday night with all four clubs swinging into action. One of the league rules says no Senior City League player may form any part of a Junior battery, which rule, of course, will permit Senior City Leaguers to don the loop at all times.

DID YOU KNOW the Cleveland Rams' franchise of the National Professional Football League, was sold yesterday for $160,000.00? . . . Dutch Clarke will remain as coach, however. . . . Benny Leonard, former lightweight champion of the world, will referee the Cauliflower Berger bout at Toronto Monday night. . . . Five teams of four doubles from the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club competed at Campbellford yesterday and won two points. . . . Hughie Brennan, former Napanee hockeyist, is now the rewriting for the Lakeshore seniors in the North Shore Senior Hockey League. . . . Stan Spratt, also of Napanee, is pitching for Cooper Cliff, while Monty Grey and "Nugget" Bennets are behind the bat for Provo Mines, the latter team beating Copper Cliff 3-0 yesterday. . . . AT THE BELLE

Today the Belle Theatre heralds a unique film called "Flight From Destiny" The intriguing story deals with an age-old question that probes deeply into the human mind. The film features an impressive list of screen favorites in the starring roles—Geraldine Fitzgerald, Thomas Mitchell, Jeffrey Lynn and James Stephenson.

A professor of philosophy, played by Thomas Mitchell, is told by his physician, the role played by James Stephenson, that he has only six months to live. He wonders what he can do in the remaining time to make his life mean something to the people he loves, and rid the world of someone who constitutes a menace. Such a person is Ketti, played by Miss Fitz, who is an art gallery owner who hires a young artist, played by Jeffrey Lynn, to paint copies of old masterpieces which she passes off as the real thing. He wants to call off the whole business but she refuses and threatens to expose him to the law if he attempts it. His trouble becomes greater still for his sweetheart, his wife, played by Geraldine Fitzgerald, is the real Simon Templar's a treasured old friend, for his advice.

When the professor learns of the trouble he goes to the woman and tells her that he knows she is involved in this life and that if she doesn't allow him to help he will break away he will kill her.

A Gay Comedy Romance

A gay, rollicking comedy nevertheless has a very perilous theme Warner Bros. The Great Mr. Nobody", the eldest lizard feature. The film stars Eddie Albert and the lovely newcomer to the screen, Joan Leslie.

Eddie plays the role of an idealistic guy in a practical world, whose life ambition is to take a trip on a boat with his friend "Skipper" Martin, played by Alan Hale. For obvious reasons Eddie is nick-named "Dreamy." He is very much in love with Mary Clover—Joan Leslie's role—and is trying to save up for their future. But everything goes wrong with him. Everything he doesn't get his boat. He acquires a heavy debt and to top it all he becomes negligent at the bank and his boss, John Wade, played by John Litel, fires him.

His bravely attempts to rescue Wade his life falters in the river, even though he can't swim. As a result, Wade gives him a promotion.

A special added attraction on the same program is March of Time's "Men of Fear P.B.I." which tells Edgar Hoover's G-Men in action is against saboteurs and espionage in defence industries.

THREE BREAK-INS REPORTED TO POLICE

Three break-ins were reported to Belleville during the past 24 hours, Saturday and Sunday, entailed an unknown.

While patrolling the east Wednesday evening, P.C. Gordon heard a window in a rear door leading into Hayworth's Restaurant being broken. Mr. Jack McVeigh, manager of the restaurant, notified and subsequent investigations proved that brick had been thrown through the window, but no entrance to a private home.

Shortly after midnight last night Mrs. J. Harker, 101 West Bridge St., telephoned police to say she was of the opinion burglars were attempting to enter her home through the cellar entrance. Constables Arnott and Evans hastened to the scene to find the cellar door had been forced open, but no suspicious characters were found in the house nor in the vicinity as the officers scoured the area well.

Early Thursday morning, Tony Morrell, manager of the Belleville Fruit Warehouse on Bridge St., told police, that some person had broken the seal off a box car loaded with oranges and which had been spotted on the company siding. The box car door had been forced open, but it is believed only a few cases were taken, which is believed to be the work of Juveniles.

AT THE McCARTHY

"They Dare Not Love"

Martha Scott, glowing star of "Our Town" "Cheers for Miss Bishop" and "The Howards of Virginia," makes her Toronto appearance on the screen in the powerful and fine drama "They Dare Not Love" now showing at the McCarthy Theatre with George Brent co-starred. You'll really cherish this picture of romance after you've seen this superbly told story of today, set against a background of daring drama, astounding action and startling suspense.

The young refugees, exiled from a continent in flames, Brent and Miss Scott appear to brilliant advantage in this breath-taking new story of a romance which would not be crushed by terror, which could not be destroyed by hate or divided by oceans. Tragic never-to-be-forgotten lovers, their lives blighted by the ruthless arm of terror, their hearts welded in the flame destroying their bodies as the co-stars have never before been seen in so rapturous and so splendid a story. "They Dare Not Love" reaches a poignant, heart-stirring conclusions, imbued with a dignity and a meaning so alarming that it is certain to win thrills and tears and pounding hearts.

In addition to the principals, "They Dare Not Love" possesses an important cast of supporting players, with Paul Lucas notably a young American who wants to marry Brent, titled Austrian refugees, and doesn't mind admitting it. Others in the cast are Edgar Barrier, Egon Brecher and Erwin Kaiser.

James Whale, the man who made "Show Boat," "Journey's End" and other film classics directed "They Dare Not Love" with a tenderness and an understanding which makes it one of the "must see" pictures of the year.

A. C. Rutherford, First Premier of Alberta, Dies

Edmonton, June 12 —(CP)— Alberta's first premier, Alexander Cameron Rutherford, 82-year-old lawyer and champion of educational improvement for the youth of the province that was carved out of the North West Territories in 1905, died here last night.

One of the West's leading citizens from the day he came west in 1880 from Ontario, he became known as the Father of the University of Alberta and in later years received honorary degrees from the universities of McGill, Toronto, McMaster and Alberta in recognition of his pioneer achievements.

Born at Osgoode, Carleton County, Ont., and graduate of McGill University with a B. A. degree, Mr. Rutherford, as a young lawyer, became Deputy Speaker of the North West Territorial Assembly, Premier of Alberta from 1906 until 1910 and Provincial Treasurer and Minister of Education of the first provincial administration. After his term as Liberal Premier ended in 1910 he continued as a member of the Legislature until the 1912 elections.

Bennett to Select His Own Title

New York, June 12 (CP)—The British Library of Information, discussing the naming of Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, former Canadian Prime Minister, to a Viscountcy in the King's Birthday honors, said last night it was customary as a matter of courtesy to address Mr. immediately as Viscount, or Lord, even though he has not yet officially assumed his title.

What that title will be depends on Lord Bennett. He may choose to be known as Lord Bennett of Calgary or of any other place he may indicate, or he may follow the example of other Canadians named to the peerage and choose a completely different name.

In due course Mr. Bennett selects his title and then follows the traditional ceremony in which he takes his seat in the House of Lords.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Strawberry Blonde"

"The Strawberry Blonde" is in town, and everybody who wants to treat themselves to some fun better hie themselves down to the Capitol Theatre tonight. If you can imagine hard-bitten James Cagney as a rather timid correspondent school dentist, with pretty Olivia deHavilland and buxom Rita Hayworth vying for his favor with no holds barred, you'll have some idea of the goings-on which make the Capitol's new picture ops of the year's comedy highlights.

It all happens way back at the turn of the century when folks were still being shocked over girls who rode bicycles and smoked cigarettes, when men wore their straw bowlers straight and their trousers pegged, and when Rand Brazil (Cagney) was the tune everybody was whistling. Against this nostalgic background, Warner Bros. have set a story that is packed to the brim with romance, fun and merriment. Director Raoul Walsh has paced the love story for comedy, yet in capturing at the same time a realistic picture of that era.

Cagney and Miss deHavilland carry the starring roles of the dentist and his demure but purposeful wife, with the spotlight on truly finished players. Cagney's role is a complete turnabout from anything he has hitherto done on the screen and he displays a comedy flair that is a revelation. Miss Olivia de Havilland, whose fine acting ability was so well displayed in "Gone With the Wind", "My Love Came Back" and "Santa Fe Trail", is also the kind of girl who immediately to sing "Are There Any More Realties Like Your" "The Strawberry Blonde" title role is played by Rita Hayworth, a slow-eyed beauty and curvaceous charmer who is definitely going places in Hollywood. Also featured is George Tobias, the versatile player whose recent roles represent a veritable league of nations, Alan Hale and Jack Carson.

The ebullient, whimsical, wry-humored script-writing combination of Julius and Philip Epstein have written the brightest of scripts, basing it on a play by James Hagen,

POLICE COURT

Pleads Guilty To Hitting a Dog And Failing to Stop

Herbert Millard, Belleville, was convicted of hitting a dog upon a highway with his motor car and failing to stop at the scene, thus leaving the abandoned animal in distress, when he appeared in Police Court held here before Magistrate F. J. Butler K.C., today. Millard pleaded guilty and was fined $5.00 and $13.75 costs.

Motorcycle Patrolman J. H. Hatch, who preferred the charge, stated that Millard's motor car had struck the dog, the property of Arthur L. Cole now of Toronto, near Jones Creek some time ago and the dog had died as the result of being struck.

"I thought my car had straddled the animal", pleaded Millard after entering a plea of guilty.

"What about restitution for Mr. Cole?" asked Crown Attorney B. Ponton K.C., after prosecuting the matter.

"That is a civil matter between the parties concerned", held His Worship.

Failed to Get 1941 Permit.

J. Earl McEwen, Trenton, failed to answer to his name when he was charged with failing to produce his 1941 driver's permit. Motorcycle Patrolman H. R. McKellar testified that he had stopped McEwen near the Cemetery, west of Belleville, and the accused could only produce a 1940 driver's license. A fine of $5.00 and costs was levied with a 30-day jail sentence being suspended in the event of default thereof.

Fined for Speeding and O.S.D.

Edwin Kay, Toronto, paid five dollars and costs after being convicted of speeding in a restricted area, Motorcycle Patrolman J. H. Hatch stating the accused man was driving too fast along the restricted area between the city limits and the O.S.D., Wesley Hanna, Ottawa, paid $8.50 in all for careless driving.

At T. A. R. Henderson of the R.C.A.F., could not be located on charges of careless driving and driving without a permit, the court granted another weeks extension for service.

"You're liable to find this man out in Vancouver by now", wryly suggested Mr. Donnan.

LEAFLET RAID STAGED BY NAZIS

Deal With Battle of Atlantic Quoting From Roosevelt's Address

London, June 12 (CP)—Nazi planes dropped leaflets as well as bombs over England during the night. One of the enemy bombers was shot down in flames.

One observer said that thousands of the propaganda leaflets fell on one part of Eastern England "like a snowstorm."

The Press Association said the leaflets "deal with the battle of the Atlantic, quoting facts given by President Roosevelt and figures on the British tonnage sunk."

The Press Association added that the propaganda sheets claimed Britain's avenue of supply had been cut and that Britain was facing a forced starvation.

The bombs inflicted substantial damage and some casualties in a number of areas, the Air Ministry said. The Nazis were reported over London, the Midlands, the northwest and the north of England, in the heaviest attacks of recent months.

"In one district it was feared a large number of casualties may have been caused," a communique said. "However, however, casualties are not reported to have been heavy."

London had its first night alarm since June 2. Anti-aircraft, guns spoke away early yesterday and dawn but no bombs were reported to have fallen on the city.

The R.A.F. smashed at Calias despite an intense anti-aircraft barrage. Two waves of bombers blasted the Calais waterfront.

Tuesday, June 12 —(AP)— Damage to industries and railways at Cologne, Duisburg and Bochum, in western and northern Germany, was acknowledged today by the German High Command after a night of Royal Air Force raiding.

The communique, however, claimed that the damage, apart from "severe destruction" of apartment houses, was not great and credited night fighters and anti-aircraft batteries with shooting down 10 R.A.F. planes.

"The British Air Ministry said night planes were losing.

The German communique gave no figures on casualties, but said there were dead among wounded in the attacked places.

Reverting its own offensive operations, the High Command claimed that objectives vital to Britain's war effort in southern and central England as port facilities on the Scottish east coast were attacked yesterday and last night.

RECTAL SORENESS AND PILE TORTURE QUICKLY RELIEVED

If you are troubled with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not delay treatment that may run the risk of letting this condition become chronic. Any itching or soreness or painful passage of stool is nature's warning that proper treatment should be secured at once.

For this purpose get a package of Hem-Roid from any druggist and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally is a small, easy to take tablet, will quickly relieve the itching and soreness and aid in healing the sore tender spots. Hem-Roid is pleasant to take, is highly recommended and it seems the height of folly for any one to suffer the painful and chronic pile condition when such a fine, reliable aid may be had at such a small cost.

If you buy Hem-Roid and are not entirely pleased with the results, your druggist will gladly return your money.

Louis Concentrates On Offensive Against Conn

By SID FEDER
(Associated Press Sport Writer

Greenwood Lake, N.Y., June 12 (AP)—It is a matter for argument whether Joe Louis has more poundage for Billy Conn's "smart cracks" or his "powder puff punches."

The "cracks" have steamed the bomber up so much he is all out to end next Wednesday night's Polo Grounds tussle with the first punch, if he can. His sparring partners are all banged up from catching what he promises to deal off the arm to Billy.

The Conn clouting power apparently has Joe little worried. He has changed his work from a stylish, skill-stressing defence to a cut-loose-and-blow-the-man-down idea. It is clear in the champ's mind he has chances of getting hit in order to drop a bomb or two himself in his fight, because it is burned up at Billy Boy and feels he has nothing to fear from his clever foe.

He'll tell you he respects Conn as a hitter, that Billy packs a wallop and hurt you if it keeps hittin' you "nuff." Then he adds that you don't necessarily get hit. That is the way he is going to fight and that is the way on acountia that Conn, he talks too much."

Alcohol Injections for Tic Doloreux —Trifacial Neuralgia

I speak from time to time about migraine—and about backache—because it is such a common ailment. Many patients simply go to bed, take some pain-killing drug and wait for the attack to run its course, which may be one or two days or almost a week. This has been found but fortunately relief is obtained by use of ergotamine tartrate or the breathing in of 100 per cent oxygen.

Another even more painful condition is trifacial neuralgia—the disease—known as tic-douloureux. It lasts for hours and days sometimes then suddenly disappears. The pain is on one side of face and is almost unbearable.

The treatment in former years was surgery and in some cases the only surgery necessary to rid the patient of this terrible pain.

Fortunately, it was found that the injections of alcohol into the main root or nerve trunk supplying the whole side of face would stop the pain for months in some cases, years in others, and apparently permanent relief is obtained in some patients.

The effectiveness of this alcohol injection is known to Dr. Percy Harris, London, in Brain, a British Medical Journal, 1939, for the brain and its disturbances.

Dr. Harris has treated within thirty years, 3,500 cases of neuralgia from this ailment (1,656 in private hospital patients, and 1,844 others). He has notes on only 377 of the hospital patients, and of the 1,433 patients, 943 were women and 490 were men. The ages in majority of cases were from 50 to 70 years.

The cause of tic douloreux, in the opinion of Dr. Harris, is infected teeth, infected gums, tuscess and infection of the sinuses. Letters written to the patients who could be reached revealed that the majority of those who could be reached been free of pain for from three to thirty-three years. It is estimated that there was still numbness on the face and head, but the intensital loss of taste occured on the side affected. In some cases complete loss of taste on the affected side occurred. A few reported that a deep like pain remained, but in a new type of pain appeared.

I believe the above figures should help sufferers to be willing to undergo this simple method of treatment instead of taking powerful pain-killing drugs.

Since the injection of alcohol method was first used over thirty years ago, the serious results of removal of the nerve bundle is rarely performed.

KEHN CHALKS UP SEVENTH VICTORY WITH 3-HITTERS

Montreal Hurler Making it Tough for International League Hitters

BEARS LEAD CUT

(By the Associated Press)

Chet Kehn, 19-year-old rookie right-hander, is making things hot for a few of the veterans of the Montreal Royal's mound corps and—what's more to the point—for plenty of opposing batsmen in the International Baseball League.

Kehn chalked up his seventh victory of the campaign in spectacular fashion last night, blanking the leading Newark Bears 1-0 on three hits, for his fourth straight win. He has lost two games.

The victory marked his first starting role since May 30th, although he has come through with relief victories since then.

The triumph cut Newark's lead over Rochester to two games and enabled them to continue .008 per centage points ahead of third-place Baltimore which whipped a 6-1 umpiring of Toronto Leafs. Jimmy Pelagi, who has been four straight as a relief pitcher, made good on the first start he's had for the Chiefs, spacing seven hits. Steele Sparrow and Johnny Rutherford led the 11-hit attack on Toronto's Ken Raves, each getting three for four.

Jersey City took the odd game in the three-game series with Buffalo Bisons, winning 3-2 behind the five-hit pitching of veteran Bill Harris.

CHAPTER THIRTEEN

"BROOKS, I have to ask you a question and I want the truth, no pleasant lies. Are you terribly in earnest that she did not know her video and just a little..."

"If I answer the question at all, you may be quite sure that it will be with the truth," Brooks assured her with a certain hint of grimness, as the interview seemed to have then reached a climax.

"Then...Brooks, why did you marry me?" asked Natalie.

There was the faintest tremble in silence; almost it seemed to her a hesitation, an unwillingness in his manner. His eyes rested upon his plate, upon the fork that he was absently shoving about there.

"Why?" he asked then, and smiled that same half-tender, half-sad smile that had so fatuated him of birth to it. "Why she loved me, I suppose you are lovely, and so desirable, and..."

She managed a thin smile, "My dear! You're not going to pretend it was love—just after going to such pains to convince me there is no such thing?"

Brooks' face slightened a little and his eyes chilled.

"Oh, no. I wasn't going to pretend that it was love—though of course I'm very fond of you, and I admire you because you are really lovely and very sweet, and pretty good company—"

"Shall we just say that it was because the fishermen have always been good businessmen and I inherited rather a lot of their money?" she suggested. Her voice was so cold, so controlled, that each separate word seemed to fall into a pit of silence between them, like small lumps of ice.

For a long moment they sat perfectly still across from each other; as though the small, crowded table were a gulf that was widening between them; a gulf across which their hands and lips and eyes could no longer reach.

Brooks said after a moment that seemed to them both an eternity, "Well, yes, suppose we just say that I married you because you are lovely—and go very rich."

Natalie nodded, white to the lips. She stood up, her lovely chin tilted a little, and said crisply, "In that case you'll be glad to know that before leaving New York I had my attorneys establish a trust for you. The income will be, I think, quite ample pocket money. A million dollars, I think it was."

Brooks bowed politely. "How very generous of you, my dear. I am enormously grateful, of course."

She turned toward the door blindly. But before she reached it, Brooks said coolly, "Since we are having a session of truth talks, suppose you tell me why you married me? ME! That, I imagine, is the thing that puzzles our friends."

Natalie stood very still, her hands clenched upon the door knob, while she fought for some faint shreds of composure. It would be unbearably humiliating if she were to break down now; to turn, as she ached to do, and fling herself into his arms and beg for his love, for his caresses—for his lies! She had asked for the truth, and he'd given it to her, straight and hard and between the eyes. She must stand up to it. Anything else would be unbearable.

After a moment she had herself well controlled. She turn and looked at him coly—though the look in her eyes was sick with pain.

"Why did you marry me?" she repeated. "Well, perhaps I was tired of being a spinster girl. Perhaps I wanted a more formal establishment than I considered proper for an unmarried girl. Besides, you dance divinely and—and, you are a very decorative sort of person. Nice to know one has a permanent partner who can always be counted on to be amusing and intelligent, as well as devastatingly good looking."

He took that with his teeth set hard; a little ridge of muscle leaping along his jaw; and he took it without flinching and without protesting. But Natalie knew she couldn't endure the scene any longer without breaking. So she swung open the door and said coldly, "Now, if you don't mind, I'm going to call you to you. Driving, I'm rather tired."

Of course, dear. I hope I shall always be the obliging, agreeable husband for whom you fell such a large price was justified. Any time I fail to give satisfaction, I'm sure to tell me, and I'll try to remedy my shortcomings with scrupulous care."

Natalie let that fancy the door behind him and had did down on the floor, where she remained for what may have been a long, long time or only a moment; she never quite knew.

Then at last her mind cleared a little and she remembered to be grateful for the complete lack of self-control. She pulled herself together and stood very still for a long moment, her hands over her white face, pressing it hard, hard breath.

Then out of it, my good girl," she told herself, with a hard-fought calmness and soft her faint and weak. "You've been mussily sure for a long time that Brooks your bank account that he loved. And now that you've had it abandoned and brought the truth out into the open, what are you going to do about it? Quick, put your chin and take it! Or run shrieking into a dress court and have all your bosom enemies and your bitterest friends laughing up their sleeves at you!"

She walked over to the bedside table, selected a cigaret with a hand that did not shake too much, and lit it. She curled herself up against the pillows, the thought of sleep farther away from her than it had ever been in all her life.

She had found a measure of calm in facing facts, in refusing to run away from them any longer. She had a choice to make; the easy, cowardly way of walking out on her marriage and facing the amusement and malicious gossip of her so-called friends; or the more difficult way of facing the sober, not-too-pretty truth and trying to salvage something from her marriage. That would be the harder, the more painful way; because she adored Brooks and to live with him, knowing that he had married her simply as a means of achieving luxury and ease, would be bitter and painful. But she realized that to give Brooks up, never to see him again, would be even more bitter and much more painful.

She was a little ashamed of the barely acknowledged hope lodged deep in her breast, that if Brooks came to know her as she really was, and as he must come to know her in the intimacy of marriage, he might learn to love her. Her heart gave a little start at that hope at that thought, but she pushed it back deep down into the innermost recesses of her heart. She dared not give the light of hope let it grow strong and eager and throbbing. For if nothing came of it... She shivered and set her teeth hard, and suddenly her hands were clenched together and she was saying scarcely above her breath, "Please, God—" But it had been so long since she had desperately wanted something her wealth could not buy, she had almost forgotten to pray.

CHAPTER FOURTEEN

WHEN BROOKS awoke and called his wife's room to find that she was ready for breakfast, there was no response to his second birthday lightly at her door. There was no response to knocking from within, so he decided that it was much too early for her to be awake and wasn't quite ten. He went, told him—and he went on down to the dining room in search of breakfast.

He was halfway through the meal when he saw her come in. Slim and radiantly lovely in her honey-blege tweeds, her fur coat carelessly over her arm, her eyes bright and eager. She looked for him in the dining room, saw him, and came swiftly toward him. Brooks, rising to greet her, was a little dazzled by her radiance.

The dining room, save for themselves, was deserted. A waiter hurried to take her order and vanished. Natalie leaned on the table toward Brooks, very gay and animated and lovely.

"I've been to the hospital," she told him. "Johnny had a reasonably comfortable night and his chances are a little better. Coralie is coming along nicely, too. She was awfully pleased with the trousseau I took her."

Brooks grinned, a curious look in his eyes.

"I can readily imagine—the loot of Fifty-seventh street and Madison avenue's richest shops," he said lightly.

She hesitated for a moment. Obviously there was something she wanted to say and wasn't quite sure just how to say it. Brooks waited a little chill settling suddenly about his heart.

"Brooks — about last night—" she said suddenly. Her color burned her face and she could not quite meet his eyes.

"Yes—about last night. You, of course, want a divorce."

She looked up at him swiftly. "Is that what you want, Brooks?" she asked.

"If HIS see here, Natalie, I want whatever you want. You must know that. Your happiness, your comfort, your security—"

"Then—we won't be having a divorce," said Natalie quietly. "At least, not for a while. It seems to me that—even though we don't love each other—we ought to be able to salvage something out of being together. We are good friends, good comrades. We enjoy being together—so am I taking too much for granted?"

"Don't be an idiot. You know you've always been my favorite girl friend," said Brooks almost harshly.

"It's just that, being moderns, we don't believe in love," said Natalie with a lightness whose effort was so well done that he completely missed it. "But we can have a lot of fun being married. If we are careful not to ask too much—"

Brooks grinned unmirthfully. "That's a thought," he agreed politely.

CALL CONFERENCE IF ALL PROVINCES MAKE REQUEST

Prime Minister King Says Provinces Should Not Wait to be Asked Views

UNANIMITY NECESSARY

Ottawa, June 13 (CP)—If all the provinces request the calling of a dominion-provincial conference Prime Minister Mackenzie King said the House of Commons today, he will call it at once.

Mr. King said the provinces should not wait to be asked their views but should write to him at once if they desire a conference as suggested by Premier Hepburn of Ontario and to outline the agenda they would like to have before such a conference.

The question was raised by Conservative House Leader Hanson who suggested the Prime Minister reconsider his stand on Premier Hepburn's suggestion and call a dominion-Provincial Conference on his own volition.

Mr. Hanson said he believed the dominion government could call and conduct the without loss of dignity in spite of the breakdown of the dominion - provincial conference called last January.

Mr. King said he believed Mr. Hanson would agree "that I was never one to stand on dignity when I have much use for those who do."

He said the suggestion for a plebiscite was contained in the Hepburn memorandum.

Unanimity Necessary

It had been suggested in some newspapers that he had taken an arbitrary stand and was unwilling to call the conference, Mr. King continued. "If the provinces unite on a request for a conference that conference will be called," he declared.

"But without such assurance of unanimous desire I am afraid it would be open to the same chastisement and criticism that was offered at the last conference."

If it could be hoped that Canada would "give to the nation an exhibition of national unity" at a Dominion-Provincial conference, "I would be the first to call a conference immediately," said Mr. King.

HOUSE DECIDES ON ADJOURNMENT

Will Adjourn Until Nov. 3 When it Finishes Present Business

Ottawa, June 13. — (CP)—The House of Commons today decided to adjourn until Nov. 3 when it finishes present business.

A motion to this effect sponsored by Prime Minister Mackenzie King, was adopted.

The motion leaves the government free to call parliament earlier if the public interest requires it.

When the motion came up for discussion Conservative House Leader Hanson said he agreed but want to know "what is the public interest "public interest" with a view to calling the house back.

He said he did not think parliament should be called "to deal with the bill on the St. Lawrence Waterway agreement.

Mr. Hanson said he doubted if the agreement would pass the United States Congress before recess in the summer.

If it went through earlier it might be desirable to have parliament meet to deal with it. If so he would consult with Mr. Manion.

C.C.F. Leader Approves

M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. leader, also approved the motion but said he hoped there would be no objection to meeting earlier to deal with the Waterway agreement.

"I think courtesy to our neighbor to the south demands that we should not needlessly delay consideration of this important matter," said Mr. Coldwell.

T. L. Church, (Con. Toronto-Broadview) asked if Mr. King proposed to continue his policy of "appeasement" or if he would make a statement to the House indicating a policy on relations with the Vichy government and on the attitude of Sire about the use of Irish bases by Great Britain.

Mr. King said he had never been an "appeaser" but wished to be a conciliator.

The government had to consider the interests of the allied nations as a whole and to raise certain discussions in the Canadian Parliament would not contribute to those interests.

Text of Churchill's Speech at Conference

London, June 12.— (AP)— The text of Prime Minister Churchill's speech at the conference of representatives of the British Empire and its Allies follows:—

In the 22nd month of the war against Nazidom we meet here in this old Palace of St. James's itself not unscarred by the fire of the enemy, in order to proclaim the high purposes and resolves of the lawful, constitutional governments of Europe whose countries have been overrun, and we meet here also to cheer the hopes of free men and free peoples throughout the world.

Here before us on the table lie the title deed of ten nations and states whose soil has corn invaded and polluted and whose men, women and children lie prostrate or writhing under the Hitler yoke.

Swords Drawn in Cause

But here also, duly authorized by the parliaments and democracy over Britain, are gathered the servants of the ancient British monarchy and sacred Dominions representing the British Dominions beyond the Seas, of Canada, Australia, New Zealand and South Africa, of the Empire of India, of Burma and of our colonies in every quarter of the globe.

They have drawn their swords in this cause. They will never let them fall till it is gone or victory is won.

Here we meet while from across the Atlantic Ocean the hammers and ladies of the United States signal in a rising hum their message of encouragement and their promise, of swift and ever-growing aid.

Horrors, Crimes Wrought by Hitler

What tragedies, what horrors, what crimes has Hitler and all that filthier stands for, brought upon Europe and the world. The ruins of Warsaw, of Rotterdam, of Belgrade, and monuments and cities long recall to future generations the outrage of unopposed air bombardment, which calculated, scientific cruelty to helpless populations.

Here in London and throughout the cities of our island, and in Ireland, there may also be seen the marks of devastation. They are being repaid and presently they will be more than repaid.

But far worse than these visible injuries is the misery of the conquered people. We see them bound, terrorized, exploited. Their manhood is broken. Their men is forced to work under conditions undistinguishable from those of actual slavery. Their goods and chattels are pillaged or filched for worthless money.

Their homes, their daily life are pried into and spied upon by the all-pervading system of secret police, whose function, having reduced the Germans themselves to abject submission, is to search the streets and byways of a dozen lands.

Their intellectuals are affronted, persecuted or oppressed in the name of a fanatic paganism devised to perpetuate the worship and zeal of the brute forces of unabominable creature. Their traditions, their culture, their laws, their institutions, based on civil practical alike, suppressed by force or corrupted by the subtle, coldly-planned intrigue.

Prisons of the continent no longer suffice. The concentration camps are overcrowded. Every dark German volleys crack. Czechs, Poles, Dutchmen, Norwegians, Yugoslavs and Greeks, Frenchmen, Belgians, Luxembourgers make the grim sacrifice for faith and country.

A vile race of quislings—to use a new word which will carry the scorn of mankind down the centuries—is hired to fawn upon the conquerors, to collaborate in the designs and to enforce his rule upon their fellow countrymen while Germany's military armaments, while the plight of once glorious European states such are the atrocities against which we are arms.

Tattered Lackey Must Misunderstand

Your Excellencies, my Lords and gentlemen, it is upon this foundation that Hitler, with his tattered lackey Mussolini, by his side (and Admiral Darlan frikking by his side pretends to build out of hatred, appetite and racial assertion a new order for Europe. Never did so mocking a fantasy cross the mind of mortal man. We cannot tell what the issues of this battle will be, but as it spreads remorseless through ever-widening fields.

It will not be by German hands that the structure of Europe will be built or unite of the European family achieved. In every country in which German arms and Nazi police have broken, there has sprung up from the soil a hatred of the German name and contempt for the Nazi creed which the passage of hundreds of years will not efface from human memory.

We know it will be hard. We expect it will be long. We cannot tell what or measure its splendor or its tribulations. But one thing is certain, one thing is sure, one thing stands out stark and undeniable, massive and unassailable, like the rock of Gibraltar.

Stain of Hitler's Infected Fingers Is to be Purged Away

We cannot yet see how deliverance will come or when it will come, but nothing is more certain than that every stain of Hitler's footsteps, every stain of his infected, corroding fingers will be sponged and purged and, if need be, blasted from the surface of the earth.

We are here, Your Excellencies, to affirm and fortify our union in that ceaseless and unwavering effort which must be made if the captive people are to be set free. A year ago His Majesty's Government was left alone to face the storm, and to many of our friends and allies it must have appeared that our days too were numbered, and that Britain and its institutions would sink forever beneath the waves.

But I may with some pride remind Your Excellencies that even in that dark hour when our army was unequipped and almost weaponless, when scarcely a gun or a tank remained in Britain, when almost the last stores and ammunition had been lost in France, never for one moment did the British people dream of making peace with the conqueror and never for a moment did they despair of the common cause.

United Stand Until Victory

Our will to fight on was proclaimed at that very time to all men, not only to ourselves, our determination not to make peace until every one of the ravaged and enslaved countries was liberated, but when Nazi domination was broken and destroyed.

See how far we have travelled since those breathless days of June a year ago. Our solid stubborn strength has stood an awful test and we are masters of our own air and now reach out in ever-growing retribution upon the enemy. The Royal Navy holds the seas. The United States power, diminished, is harbor. The German navy is largely destroyed or sunk.

British Spirit Unquenched

Murderous raids upon our ports by night and by day have but served by ceaseless to quench the spirit of the British people. Our industry and our life, or check the immense expansion of our war industry. Food and arms from across the oceans are coming safely in. Full provision to replace all sunken tonnage is being made here and still more by our friends in the United States. We are becoming an armed community. Our Air Forces are being perfected in equipment and training. Hitler's power and trample this way and that through tortured Europe. He may break into Africa or into Asia. He may break in this island fortress that he will have to reckon in the end.

We shall strive to resist by land and sea. We shall be on his track wherever he goes. Our air power will continue to teach the German homeland that war is not all loot and triumph. We shall aid and stir the people of every conquered country to resistance and revolt.

We shall break up and derange every effort which Hitler makes to systematize and consolidate his subjugations. He will find no peace, no rest, no halting place. Our power, and, if driven to desperate hazards, he attempts an invasion of the British Isles, as well he may, we shall not flinch from the struggle. Trusting with the help of God, on which we must all feel unveiling, to make that conclusive is the plight of once glorious European states such are the atrocities against which we are in arms.

COUNTY COUNCIL SETS TAX RATE AT 11.6 MILLS FOR '42

Rate is an Increase of One-Half Mill Over That of 1941

LENGTHY DISCUSSION

In spite of more or less strenuous arguments for a reduction in the same tax rate as a year ago, a readjusted Estimates Committee report which called for a rate of 11.6 mills was adopted by the Hastings County Council today. The rate struck in the original report presented to council yesterday and which was tabled for further discussion, was 11¾ mills, an increase of ½ mill over the 1941 rate.

The motion for adoption was made by Hastings Centre Councillor Chairman Jas. H. Sprackett following a spirited discussion. The yeas voted in a majority but the nays did not signify their attitude.

Questions Increases

Councillor Harry Reeve, of J. L. Churcher, Dungannon, told the Intelligencer that he was not enamoured with the slight reduction but was of the opinion the rate struck should be the same as last year. "We must be consistent in the administration of public business," he said, "and especially at the present time when we are facing increased revenues and expenses and thus keep within limited bounds."

Not In Agreement

The Dominion Government is having a hard time to finance the war, he said, predicting that soon there would be no limit to taxation. and he built in the assertions he be made if Canada is to give 100 per cent co-operation to help win the war. "Every penny will be needed, it is not proper that any municipality raise is taxation. I am not in agreement with even this reduced increase. Let us remember we are spending the people's money and should see to it that it be kept within bounds. I am not satisfied at an already overburdened taxpayer."

Newcastle Reeve Lee criticized the sharp reduction of the Patriotic Fund millage from one mill to one-quarter mills. "If this had remained at the same," he said, "I would have concurred in the rate increase. with this cut, I am not in favor of it."

Estimates Compared

Reeve W. G. Weal, Stirling, compared estimates and costs of a year ago with the estimates as presented in the current report. He explained that last year the council had levied for and set aside for general purposes one mill on the assessment, or $18,382,800. "Of that amount," he pointed out, "only $10,000 has been spent, leaving a balance of $8,000. This on conjunction with the 1-6 mill levied this year, should meet ordinary expenditures."

Referring to the increase in estimates of last year, Reeve Weal, Stirling reeve reminded council that in the January session it voted an appropriation for roads expenses, passing a by-law that called for 2 1-2 mills for roads purposes. "And that our bands are tied," he said. "It would be a fine thing now to tell the Department of Highways that we now, do not require money."

Reeve W. Linn, Marmora, told the body that local municipalities had already reduced their tax rates during the past few years. "The trouble is," he said, "that a lot of people want things that they don't really need. Back in the old days you'd be back in he old days before the government took over the Old Age Pensions and Mothers' Allowances."

Spending More on Roads

"You can't raise wages and expect to keep the rate down," Reeve John Bell told the council.

Hastings County Road for the past several years has always spent $75,000 on its roads and bridges system. Chairman of Roads Roscoe Robson stated. "This year," he said, "the Department has granted the total estimated expenditure of $81,000. We have already gone and one-half months of this year and will have figured on this expenditure. If this council wishes to make a two-mill rate for roads purposes it will have control of the approved two and one-half mills, then my committee will be able to let more than proposed jobs go. I would like to see the rate kept down, but the roads kept up."

At this point the argument diverted to discussion of village and rural subsidies. Reeve Weal and Warden Davis reminded the council of the motion standing for adoption of the Belleville Committee's report and it was immediately placed before council for debate.

The increase from 11¾ mills on the county assessment last year to 11.6 mills this year calls for a county expenditure of $213,183.48 as against $207,183.48 in 1941.

Members of County Federation of Agriculture will approach the Council for funds to carry on the work of the newly formed organization. A. L. Burke, secretary of the Belleville Agricultural Society, outlined the activities of the Belleville Fair last year and proposed plans for the current year. He will appear to Council for an increased grant this year.

Letters From the Troops

Following is an interesting letter received by Mrs. J. R. Royle, 213 Coleman Street from her son, Private Bert Royle, now in England with his regiment:—

Dear Mother, Dad and all—

I am writing you this letter while on my leave and will answer your letter, letter which I have received in camp. I should have written before but I'll be busy get-ting ready that I forgot about it till after I had left. I told you in my last letter where I was going on my leave so I will go on and tell you a little of what this place is like.

First of all the place I am staying at is very nice. The people are the very best and of course are relatives of the Hodge family. They are such a nice friendly couple and nothing is too good for me so you can see really I am being spoilt in a way. Never again will I say the English folk are a standoffish crowd and I have reversed my opinions of them altogether.

Now for a little of the history which is very beautiful with hills all around the city. You can walk to the top of these hills and look down into the valley and see the city laid out below you. Of course being a very ancient place it has very narrow streets which run in and out between the building as it seems. The buildings are mostly ancient and old-fashioned and very typical of Old England. Of all places in England it has never yet been bombed and this is I believe due to the hills over shadowing the city and also no smoke from factories of which there are none.

Place that I have found of greatest most is of course, first of all the Cathedral which even at home you hear about. This place I believe one of the most ancient places in England dated back as far as the year of 1079 so you can see how old it is. There are many things of interest inside of the Cathedral and is the longest church in England I believe. You walk along the aisle on the side and the windows are covered with pictures of every colour and are all in remembrance of some one with a tablet underneath telling who it is. Even the floors have inscriptions on the blocks said to be tombs underneath them of kings, saints and many other people. Then as you walk on you pass a small chapel on your left which is open at all times during the day. In this chapel you look at the window in front of you and see pictures of the King and Queen very beautifully painted and of course all done by hand. Then as you continue on along the left side you see different carved statues of saints and some pictures of great fame. Then to return a little way back until you return to the other side you stop in the middle looking toward the back of the church and see far back the high alter with many statues in the background. Then you continue on across to the other side and on toward the back part. To get there you go up steps worn down by years of use and on through a gate into the back part. Here are many more stones and inscriptions on the walls and floors. At the very back is a statue I remember well which is that of Joan of Arc. Beside this is a little room which is a very holy place with painting on the ceiling of the Christian Angels. This little place is called the Chapel of the Guardian Angels. We intend to return to the Cathedral and go up to the tower and also see the crypt and will then be able to tell you more in my next letter. I have a little book of this place and will send it on to you as soon as possible.

The other place of interest is the West Gate which in the old days was used as a prison and torture chamber. In this place I saw many relics dating way back to ancient times. Here are found suits of mail and heavy armour and many things in the line of old guns and torture with different things even the thumb screws used in handing a mummy up enclosed in steel.

Well I will tell you of the city and of the places that are interesting to send on to you so I will not tell you much more for now until I write again. I could go on and on but I'm afraid I'm a bad I don't want to keep these good people up too late.

I am also taking a few snaps on my own which I will send on some time and I hope one of you will take good care of them for me after seeing them.

Now to get on with other things such as the warmer weather which is the best you could wish for, bright and sunny and skies clear air. Never could I have picked a better time for my leave.

Now am glad to get away from camp for seven days with nothing to worry about and I have been really enjoying it.

Here we hear the siren go often but no bombs but a place on down near the coast gets it pretty heavy. London according to the radio got it heavy last night and how sorry I feel for those brave people suffering as they do. May God give us the power to pay him back double for his murdering of innocent people. I hope to be able to do my part when the chance comes but don't you worry over me for God will protect His people and me.

Jerry can never hope to win out of this for God will help us to punish him in time to come.

Now another how is every one at home and be sure to give them my best regards and tell them all I think of them all often.

I hope when I return to camp to have more mail from home and as you know by now we have lost some mail lately.

I have not as yet got my trades' pay but am still hoping it will come through soon. Neither have I heard anymore about the stripes and am not worrying whether I get them or not.

Now mother I will have to close this letter or rather a book until I write again so will say good night for now with loads of love and kisses until later, from your Loving son, Bert.

Little Benny's Note Book

After supper ma was pushing crooked things straight and straight things crooked.

Benny, have you finished your work? O for land sakes, he's got his nose stuck in that truck again, she said.

Meaning my Kollosal Komics Magazine, and pop said, if the stuff was really funny I wouldn't object to it, but how can a kid pore over that mass of kidnapping, murder, double crossing and general villainy and still have a sneaking notion that he's looking at the funny paper? By golliss in our days the comics were actually funny, he said, and ma said, in those days the heroes really lived up to their name and good understood. Now days the generals rule and not the great exception. Ma now used to laugh at the antics of the Weisenheimer Kids every Sunday, she said.

Sloppy Solly was my favorite, pop said. He was the hobo for my money, he was a card, that Sloppy Solly, pop said, and I said, Why, pop, what do you mean, go on.

Everything under the sun, there wasn't anything Sloppy Solly wasn't mixed up in, pop said. His favorite stunt was to accidently barge into some high toned classy joint and start everything up. In 5 minutes the place would be a mess, with soot from the chimney all over the table cloths and the punch bowl upside down on the butler's head; he said, and in the end I must say I always preferred the Weisenheimer Kids. My, the tricks they used to play on their old grandfather of theirs. The old gentleman never knew whether he'd wake up with eggs hatching out in his whiskers, or what, she said.

Well gosh, ma, I mean holey smokes, pop, that sounds even more unrefined than Kollosal Komics, I said, and pop said, You cant get the flavor by the sound of them, they had to be seen to be appriciated, I said, They were funny, that's the big point.

Would you think it was funny if I put eggs in pop's whiskers, if he had any? I said, and ma said, O, start your homework.

Wich I did feeling against it.

Few Weeks On Syntona Made Big Difference In This Lady

MRS. MARGUERITE WARD

Suffered 5 Years with Acid, Upset Stomach, Gastritis, Constipation, Backache and Headaches. Was Nervous, Rundown and Losing Weight. Tells How Syntona Helped Her.

"Everybody remarks about the improvement in my health since I've been taking Syntona and I think it is just grand to feel so well again after years of suffering," said Mrs. Marguerite Ward, 442 King St., London, Ontario, in a recent interview.

"In the past five years I suffered terribly with stomach trouble. I had constant nervous headaches and constipation. I would have spells of dizziness that I thought would end my breath; scalding, sour liquids would rise in my throat and I got so nervous I felt sick and nauseated. I had no appetite and could not digest food. I went on a special diet, but it made me feel nothing terribly worse until I could hardly eat food at all. I was losing weight and I had become terribly thin. My nerves were all upset and I could not sleep at night.

"When I first decided to try Syntona I was almost afraid to take it because my stomach was so upset, but I'm glad I did for after the first bottle I felt a little better. After the second bottle, it didn't give me any trouble and I soon found I was eating heartily. After a total of seven bottles I feel that I am entirely well and I said, and pop said, You cant get the flavor by the sound of them, they had to be seen to be appriciated, I said, They were funny, that's the big point.

Would you think it was funny if I put eggs in pop's whiskers, if he had any? I said, and ma said, O, start your homework.

Auckland, New Zealand, June 12 (CP)—Of 16,500 New Zealand troops who fought in Greece and Crete, 11,200 have been removed safely to Egypt, leaving 5,350 unaccounted for, Acting Premier Walter Nash announced today before Parliament went into secret session.

KISS YOUR TIRED FEELING GOODBYE!

Pepless Many Suffer Low Blood Count—Don't Let Them Get You!

The baffling thing about low blood count is that you can wish about as much as ever ever did—even look healthy and strong, yet feel "all in" and "no pep" at the same time. Why?

Low blood count means you haven't got enough red blood corpuscles in your blood job to carry life-giving oxygen from your lungs to your tissues and organs. Your blood is pale and watery! Your skin looks pale as a rare and make the power to turn the wheels. Then you haven't plenty of oxygen to supply the energy in your body and give you that "pep" feeling.

Get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They are world-noted for the help they give to increase the red blood corpuscles in the body surrounds. Then with your blood count up, you feel like a new person. Get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills today at your druggist for Dr. Williams Pink Pills today.

GERMANY'S RUHR VALLEY BLASTED BY R. A. F.

MOTHER AND 3 CHILDREN BATTERED TO DEATH

Thousands of Tons Of High Explosives Poured into Area

Wave After Wave Of British Aircraft Drops Bombs After Targets Hit by Incendiaries

IMMENSE BOMBS USED

By DOUGLAS AMARON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, June 13 (CP Cable).—Waves of Royal Air Force bombers swept over Germany's Ruhr Valley during the night in one of the bomber command's heaviest attacks of the war, blasting the industrial area with thousands of tons of high explosives and incendiaries.

It was the fifteen hundred ever made on the Ruhr, where within a radius of 50 to 60 miles three-quarters of Germany's whole output of coal is mined and 80 per cent of her iron and steel industry is situated.

The district is linked by a network of canals, railways and roads and is closely set with industrial towns, many of which doubtless felt the weight of the R.A.F. attack. The Air Ministry communique dealt with the night's work but not mentioning any town specifically.

Attack Began After Midnight

An amplification of the official statement said the attack began soon after midnight with aircraft out "in great force."

"Wave after wave of our aircraft made this sweep of the Ruhr, often coming down through thick clouds and dropping flares to light the ground below. Several aircraft bombed from so low that the crew distinctly felt the concussion of their heavier bombs and many were able to see fragments of masonry blown into the air.

"Buildings were sharply silhouetted against the walls of fire. Warehouses could be seen completely gutted. Public areas also were lit in flames.

Records of Explosions

"At one vital railway yard the bursting of a bomb was followed by a succession of explosions in line, one after another, over a period of 10 minutes, as though a series of ammunition had been hit."

A typical experience of the night was described by a rear gunner.

He made four runs over our target before dropping bombs, he said. "Meanwhile we saw a terrific explosion and knew another aircraft already had begun the attack.

"It must have been an immense bomb. It was more than the effect you get when you throw a rock into a pool—everything splashed up all around, from a radius of two or three hundreds of feet high."

A methodical attack over another target was made by many aircraft, flying one after the other and dropped in a continuous rain.

"There were never fewer than three in the air at once, and usually more," an observer said.

German fighters were about, and there were many inconclusive engagements. Rear gunners got a fighter—the moon at his tail—came straight at a wireless set and a rear gunner held his fire until the enemy was close. Then he gave a long burst at point blank range and spurted from the fighter, which immediately went down.

Six planes of the bomber command were lost.

Expert Executioners For Murder Inc. Die in the Chair

Ossining, N.Y., June 13 —(AP)— Harry (Pittsburgh Phil) Strauss, 31, and Martin (Bugsy) Goldstein, 36, expert executioners for Brooklyn's Murder, Inc., died last night in the sizzling electric chair.

Goldstein and Strauss, in their hoodlum heyday, executed underworld death sentences at a fraction of the cost then considered adequate, trial and execution cost the state.

The strangling of Irving Feinstein, bookmaker-informer, for which they were electrocuted, was a routine, bargain basement job costing no more than the oil with which they saturated him before cremating the body on a Roxbury lot. Several similar slayings were ground from the police books with this final accounting of Goldstein and Strauss.

Defence Minister Says War Will Be Long and Hard

Ottawa, June 13—(CP)—Col. J. L. Ralston, Minister of National Defence, predicts "this war is going to be a long one and a hard one."

Col. Ralston spoke last night at a dinner in honor of visiting American newspaper men and many were on a glimpse of Canada at war. At the same time he gave the ranking army and air officers.

Col. Ralston warned that because the war is going to be a long one Hitler does not intend to "wait months, weeks and days are precious."

Canada has its difficulties in national defence, the Minister said, many arise from inactivity. There have not been many casualties in the war, he added, "but I do believe that we are in this war as we were in the last when 60,000 died and 170,000 thirsty of getting at the enemy is not best measure of the war we take."

Air Vice-Marshal R. W. Stedman presided as chairman of the gathering. He expressed appreciation for the American assistance and said Canada is getting from the United States one type of plane —he added he did not care to specify which type—that American experts say is the best in the world.

Construction on 4,450 Miles Of Oil Pipeline Begins in U. S.

New York, June 13 (AP)—Plans for the construction of a 4,450-mile pipeline in history were disclosed today by the Petroleum Coordinator for War, the United States Government's banker to the threat of an East Coast petroleum shortage this coming Winter.

Work already has begun on portions of about 4,460 miles of pipelines which, they said, Interior Secretary Harold Ickes, Industry Co-Ordinator, has authorized construction.

The lines would carry a steady flow of oil and gasoline to the East Coast from Texas, Louisiana and Illinois in quantity to offset the loss of transportation facilities caused by the scarcity of oil tankers to British use.

They can be completed, it was said, in less than six months, provided steel for the pipe is supplied on a defense priority basis and the transportation system can move the steel.

"And we haven't any worry on that score," one of all most comments said.

Work is to begin Saturday on a 260-mile line which, running from Portland, Me., to the Imperial Oil Company refineries at Montreal, will remove from the east coast 100,000 of crude oil transportation by ocean tankers around the tip of the United States and Canada by way of the St. Lawrence River.

The pipe is expected to be fin-

U.S. WILL LODGE VIGOROUS PROTEST ON SHIP SINKING

Cite Evidence the Robin Moor Deliberately Sunk by Nazi Sub

PLAINLY MARKED

(By Lloyd Lehrbas)

Washington, June 13.— (AP)— The United States sent to lodge a vigorous protest with Germany on the sinking of the Robin Moor, it was learned authoritatively today, citing evidence of survivors that the American vessel was torpedoed deliberately by a Nazi U-boat.

The State Department, now informed quarters predicted, will also make representations soon made for the loss of American life and property—life in previous cases—and that assurances be given against repetition of the incident.

There was keen interest in Berlin, while, in what President Roosevelt called both war and peace zones when he holds his regular press conference today, the ship sinking was first reported, Mr. Roosevelt asked the nation to suspend judgment until the facts were known, but yesterday the White House said there seemed to be "no longer any reason" for that.

Nazi Air Raiders Kill 5,394 Persons In Britain in May

London, June 13 —(CP)— Nazi air raiders killed 5,394 persons in Great Britain during May and seriously injured 5,695, Home Security announced today.

Seventy-three hundred persons were listed as missing and believed dead.

The announcement said the dead included 2,313 men, 1,964 women, 731 children under 16 years of age and 136 unclassified.

The injured included 2,930 men, 1,835 women and 416 children.

The figures were lower than those for April when 6,089 persons were reported killed and 6,926 injured.

From last June's heavy raids against the British Isles began, through May 41,150 civilians have been killed and 51,509 injured, the latest figures indicate. Deaths in air raids in London, because some of those originally listed as missing may be found.

The peak monthly casualties was last September when 6,954 persons were killed and 10,851 injured. That was during September that the British made all-out daylight attacks and were smashed time and again by the German Air Force in what is now known as "The Battle of Britain."

Situation for Britain Improves Steadily Says Canadian Premier

Canadian Forces Overseas May be Used Wherever Services May Count for Most, Mr. King Tells House of Commons — Tells of Encouragement for British Cause

Ottawa, June 13 —(CP)— The fact that, during the past month Britain looked upon as the great barrier against German success, no vital British position" had been lost since Franco fell a Year ago was a source of encouragement to Prime Minister Mackenzie King said in a war statement in the House of Commons today. He would have no illusions in saying, Mr. King added, "that a true conception of the situation during it is a long way to strengthen morale."

Reverses were bound to come but he said Canadians should not lose hope when they do come.

"We shall only be helping the enemy if we unduly exalted temporary successes or unduly overcast by temporary failure," he declared.

In the air the balance was gradually being adjusted.

Formidable Effective British Raids

British bombing raids on German industry were becoming increasingly effective.

The Nazi propaganda agencies were no longer able to conceal their effect from the German people.

Hitler in his recent speech was forced to promise better weapons for next year although the German people had all along been led to believe the war would end this year.

"These are the prophecies of promises by which the Führer has sought to maintain the confidence of free men," said Mr. King.

Situation Improved

The stream of munitions of war from the United States to British forces is increasing volume. Everywhere in sky warfare the Canadian, airmen of the Empire was improving for Britain from day to day.

On the sea the curve of losses had gone down in recent weeks.

The attack of the Bismarck, followed, as it was, by relentless pursuit and swift retribution" in the sinking of the Nazi ship, showed the British Navy's mettle as ever.

Taking into account destruction of enemy shipping, the balance of destruction was not so heavily lifted in favor of Germany and Italy.

From the shipyard of freedom" the "true continent is rapidly becoming not only the arsenal of democracy but the shipyard of freedom of the seas," said Mr. King.

ACTION IN SYRIA BASED ON FACTS SAYS BRITISH GOV'T

Vichy Gov't. Tells Britain it Will Avoid Action Which Might Spread or Aggravate Conflict

NOTES EXCHANGED

London, June 13 (CP)—The Vichy government has informed British that it will avoid "any action which might aggravate or spread the conflict," in Syria and Lebanon, the British Foreign Office said today. June 8 asserted, however, that the Vichy regime has "failed to prevent dated territories "risks producing the gravest consequences for Europe as a whole, with all means at its disposal."

The British government, expressing its "profound concern" at the advances, replied that its action in Iraq had been taken "in the belief that "His Majesty's government can not be expected to enter into agreement with Marshal Petain's government on the basis of the new orientation of the word 'collaboration'."

Vichy reports said a second and stronger note had been sent Britain reiterating Vichy's insistence that the German troops were limited.

BRITISH INCREASE PRESSURE AGAINST SYRIAN CAPITAL

Abandon Sparring Tactics Used at Beginning of Campaign—Hammer the Damascus Defence

VICHY OFFICER AIDS

London, June 13—(CP)—Rebuffed in a gesture, British and Free French forces in Lebanon and Syria were authoritatively reported today to be closing in on Beirut and broadening the base for pressure on Damascus.

A high source in London declared that forces advancing along the Mediterranean shore had pushed north of Sidon to a point within 25 miles of Beirut, Lebanese capital, while Free French forces had taken two villages east of Kissoue, facing the Beirut-Damascus road.

A report from Damascus said the British Command-in-Chief was defended when Allied forces cross the Syrian frontier.

Damascus, it appears, will be treated as a city, rather than a capital, such as Paris was declared a city open to the Germans when the Nazis were rolling on the French capital.

Temporarily Delayed

The Middle East command at Cairo said the Allies had been temporarily delayed in certain sectors by resistance of Vichy troops," but "had by yesterday overcome the principal points of resistance on their penetration."

The Cairo communique said they understood in Cairo that the Allies had gradually surrounded Damascus and that parleys between the commander-in-chief and the advancing bloodshed had delayed entry into the capital of Syria's ancient Damascus was also approached.

The flanking operation led by a Vichy officer who fled Syria four weeks ago to join the free French forces.

At the head of a troop of picturesque Circassian Cavalry, which followed him from Syria, Col. Philbert Collet was reported to have attacked a semi-desert area south-west of Damascus to strike from the rear.

British artillery and mechanized forces, meanwhile, were said to be hammering at the main defences north of the ancient Syrian capital, where the Vichy troops are occupying strong positions in strength.

Dispatches from the front tellina of these operations indicated that Allies had abandoned the sparring tactics they adopted at the start of the campaign that ushered a revolting bloodshed.

Increased pressure in be Damascus sector apparently was accompanied by the appearance of the Allied drive on the Lebanon capital of Beirut, to the West.

British patrols moved last night Allied troops had reached the Port of Sidon, 25 miles south of Beirut, with the support of naval forces off the coast. The push is continuing.

Husband Charged With Murder and Remanded a Week

Richard H. Dennis Found in Kitchen Unconscious With Both Wrists Slashed

BASEBALL BAT USED

Toronto, June 13 (CP)—A mother and her three children were beaten to death in their mid-town home early today and the father of the family, Richard Henry Dennis, was found in the kitchen of the home unconscious with both wrists slashed.

Police said the mother and the three children had been battered to death with a baseball bat.

The dead:—Mrs. Odessa Dennis; Ronald, 12; Marjorie, 8, and James Dennis, 7.

The father, an unemployed cripple, was taken to hospital in a critical condition. Doctors said he would recover.

Dennis, 41, was taken from the hospital to Don Jail and charged with the murder of his wife.

He appeared before a justice of the peace and was remanded.

Back Door Smashed In

The bodies were discovered by Mr. Robinson, a lieutenant in the Toronto fire department, when he smashed down the back door of the house on Birch Avenue, Rosedale. Fires nearby and had been advised by the Dennis family that "gas fumes were coming from the house."

Police reported that a woman living next to the Dennis family told them she had heard quarrelling between Mr. and Mrs. Dennis in the past few days.

The woman was reported to have heard the Dennis radio being turned on full blast about seven o'clock this morning. An hour later she smelled gas and advised Robinson who told her to call the police while he investigated.

Robinson found Dennis lying in a pool of blood in the kitchen floor and gas pouring from the stove.

Scene Dwelt In "Shadow"

Robinson described the upstairs of the house where the bodies of Mrs. Dennis and the children were found as a "shambles." Police said their bodies, battered and bruised with the baseball bat, had been scattered in the rooms.

Shirley and Mr. Dennis were taken to the Toronto General Hospital where he was rushed to the Hospital for Sick Children, but died there only a short time.

Detectives described Dennis by the feet from the Kitchen to the back door of the house. Detectives hurriedly interred first aid there before removing him to the Psychiatric Hospital where he was placed under guard.

Welfare Department records showed that Mr. and Mrs. Dennis were born in England and came to Canada still lived there. Dennis suffered a stroke five years ago and had been unable to work since then. His wife was supported by Mrs. Dennis.

Mrs. Dennis had had several accidents; underwent two operations; suffered extensive burns on one arm, while cooking; lost some valuables when her apartment was entered and robbed.

FINANCE MINISTER DISAPPROVES OF ALBERTA'S ACTION

Fails to Pay Full Contractual Interest on Its Bonds Is Charge of Minister

'STATUS OF DEFAULT'

Ottawa, June 13 (CP)—Finance Minister Ilsley Thursday expressed "the strongest disapproval" of Alberta's failure to pay full contractual interest on its bonds, speaking in the House of Commons of Finance Department estimates.

But the Minister also denied the claim of Conservative House Leader Hanson that the Federal Government, by actions, was approving and condoning Alberta's treatment of bondholders.

The discussion arose over the $45,000,000 supplementary estimate to cover compensation to be paid the provinces—which accept the Federal Government's proposals that they abandon the income tax field.

The Minister said the Government did not propose to compensate Alberta for the full amount of its debt service cost as if the province were paying full rates of interest contracted for in provincial bonds.

He declared the Alberta Government's action had been declared "illegal and unconstitutional by the highest courts in the land," and the financial status of Alberta was "a status of default".

In making its proposals to the provinces, the Minister said, the position the Federal Government was in was going back to months of the governments concerned, Mr. Ilsley said.

No Assurance Money Passed On

There was no assurance that if an extra $1,750,000 were paid Alberta it would be passed along to the bondholders. Such aspects of the situation could be discussed later if necessary, Mr. Ilsley said.

Mr. Ilsley said it was likely Alberta would accept the first of two options offered the provinces for getting out of their tax fields. This was a grant equal to the province's revenue from income and corporation taxes. The other option is a grant equal to the province's payments on its debts.

"The annual payments to the provinces are based on the sum to be each actually received from taxes in 1939 or the cash actually paid out in interest," said Mr. Ilsley.

The formula is not based on taxes which should have been collected or the interest which should have been paid.

"This does not mean that the debt does not mean that the debt," said the Minister. "Or that this Government will not demonstrate the matter if the situation changes.

GERMANY'S RUHR VALLEY BLASTED BY R. A. F.

MOTHER AND 3 CHILDREN BATTERED TO DEATH

Thousands of Tons Of High Explosives Poured into Area

Wave After Wave Of British Aircraft Drops Bombs After Targets Hit by Incendiaries

IMMENSE BOMBS USED

By DOUGLAS AMARON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, June 13 (CP Cable)—Waves of Royal Air Force bombers swept over Germany's Ruhr Valley during the night in one of the bomber command's heaviest attacks of the war, blasting the industrial area with thousands of tons of high explosives and incendiaries.

It was the fiercest raid ever made on the Ruhr, where within a radius of 30 miles Germany has most of the country's whole output of coal, is mined and 80 per cent of her iron and steel industry is situated.

The district is linked by a network of canals, including Canada and is closely set with industrial towns, many of which specialize for the weight of the R.A.F. attack. The Air Ministry communique dealt with the attack as a whole and not mentioning any town specifically.

Attack Began Late Tonight

An amplification of the official statement said the attack began soon after midnight with aircraft on "in great force."

"Wave after wave of our aircraft made this sweep of the Ruhr, often coming down low to release their load and dropping flares to light the ground. Many fires started and bombed from so low that the crew indirectly felt the concussion of their heavier bombs and many were able to see fragments of masonry blown into the air.

"Buildings were sharply silhouetted against the welds of fire. Warehouses could be seen completely gutted. Whole areas could be seen in flames.

Secrecy of Explosives

"At one vital railway yard the bursting of a bomb was followed by a succession of explosions in line, one after another, over a period of 10 minutes, as though a train of ammunition had been hit."

A typical evening of the night was described by a rear gunner.

"We made four runs over our target before dropping our load," he said. "Meanwhile we saw a terrific explosion and knew another aircraft already had begun the attack.

"It must have been an immense bomb. It was more like the effect you get when you throw a rock into a pool—everything splashed up all around. There was a column a hundreds of feet high."

A midnight moon over another target was made by many aircraft, flares which they had dropped in a continuous rain.

"There were never fewer than three in the air at once, and sometimes more," an observer said.

German night fighters were about, and there were many inconclusive engagements. Everything a fighter—the moon at his tail—came straight at a bomber's nose and the gunner held his fire until the enemy was close. Then he gave a long burst of fire and flame shot spurted from the fighter, which immediately broke away.

Six planes of the bomber command were lost.

Construction on 4,450 Miles Of Oil Pipeline Begins in U. S.

New York, June 13 (AP)—Plans for the greatest pipeline construction in history were disclosed today by industrialists as well as by the United States Government's leaders who were to the threat of an East Coast petroleum shortage this coming Winter.

Work already has begun on portions of about 4,450 miles of pipelines which, they said, Interior Secretary Harold Ickes, Industry Co-Ordinator, has approved for construction.

The lines would carry a steady flow of oil and gasoline to the East Coast from Texas, Louisiana and Illinois in quantity to offset the loss of transportation facilities caused by the transfer of U.S. tankers to British use.

They can be completed, it was said, in less than six months, provided steel for the pipes can be supplied on a defense priority basis and God Government grants right of way.

"We've haven't any worry on the steel score," one oil man commented.

Work is to begin Saturday on a 250-mile line which, running from Portage La Mc, to the Imperial Oil Company refineries at Montreal, will reverse the need for 2,000 miles of crude oil transportation by ocean tanker around the tip of the United States and Canada by way of the St. Lawrence River.

The pipe is expected to be finished by January 1. It is a twelve-inch pipe, with a maximum capacity of 300,000 barrels of crude oil a day.

Already built, except for connections of a few hundred yards across railroads rights-of-way, is the 500-mile southeastern pipe line which will carry petroleum products from Port St. Joe, Fla., to the industrial area in Charlottesville, Tenn. It is expected to go into operation within a few weeks.

Construction is also under on the Plantation line, which will carry petroleum products from Baton Rouge, La., to Greensboro, N.C. and Linden, Va., and to Norfolk.

It was admitted that there might be a shortage of fuel oil for domestic supply before freezing weather arrives, except in those heavily engaged that rationing of some type this Winter is probability.

There is plenty of crude and gasoline, as is demonstrated by the continuous flow of petroleum products lubricating oil and automobile gasoline to Japan from California.

These shipments, estimated at around 1,000,000 barrels a month, are carried mainly in Japanese tankers, although at least until recently three United States tankers were engaged.

Oil men say these shipments are made with the approval of the State Department, believing that it is better than to engage in controversy.

The lads admitted the charge and were released on probation for a period of six months upon the payment of the costs which amounted to $6.00 in each case.

"They were in an automobile on Bleecker Street and they tried to pick-up a young lady who did not desire their company," revealed Chief Kidd as he enlightened the court as to why the pair had been charged.

Two Made Wards

Car Badly Damaged When Horse Rears Striking the Hood

Maybe old dobbin was just jealous of the modern rival—the horseless carriage, that at any rate an automobile was badly damaged on the Canniffton Road last evening when a horse driven by Lewis Primeau, 2nd of Sidney, became frightened, reared into the air and jumped onto the hood of a motor car, driven by Donald Lafrance, 200 Albert Street. The horse's head crashed through the windshield of the vehicle, but the animal only received minor cuts.

Mr. Lafrance had halted his motor car at the C.N.R. Canniffton Road crossing awaiting an approaching train to pass when the horse and cart driven by Mr. Primeau was upon the crossing when the railway set was caution signal went into operation. It is believed the horse became frightened upon seeing the wig wag and reared into the air, coming down with both front hoofs striking the hood of the stationary vehicle. The side and front lights of the vehicle were damaged as well as the windshield. Provincial Police officers investigated and Mr. Primeau made an amicable settlement.

VICTORY LOAN
HASTINGS COUNTY
"OVER THE TOP" TO VICTORY"
1919 1941
$2,959,000
$1,361,350 Thursday, June 13

Picton and District

Picton, June 13.— (Special) —Up until Wednesday night, sales of Victory Bonds in Prince Edward County had reached a total of $347,950.00. This amount was recorded with ceremony on the thermometer in front of Victory Loan headquarters.

The team totals are as follows, with the figures in brackets indicating the objective for that district: Picton, $940,800, ($320,000); Hillier and Wellington, $73,800 ($180,000); Hallowell and Bloomfield $42,250 ($100,000); Ameliasburg, $30,000 ($150,000); North and South Marysburg and Hillier, $52,950 ($150,000); Sophiasburg, $79,850 ($170,000). A total of $947,950 sales in the salesmen's quotas of $665,000.

Picton has exceeded its objective as has Sophiasburg on the latter being aided by a $60,000 purchase by F. E. Wills, so that the small buyers have far to go before they do their part expected of them.

The official quota in Prince Edward Co., is for $667,000. Of this, half a million must be secured by the canvassers up to now; $482,000 has been sold, leaving $70,000 to be raised before the quota is reached. In the Special Names division the quota is for $60,000 and this has been exceeded $125,000 being secured from these larger purchasers.

To be recognized as reaching the county quota, the canvassers must in both the salesmen and special names groups must be exceeded.

It will be noted that the quota for canvassers is higher than the official quota, but this is because the government desires more than the $500,000 that the county may get is the county's share of this figure and the other or the amount it is hoped to raise.

During the first week Athol, North Marysburg and Scotch Marysburg team led in the number of sales, 104, with Mr. Hamilton as high performer with 43 sales. Other whether the U-boat commander knew the vessel was American, "It is a heathenish thing to sink an unarmed merchant ship."

JURY ADDS RIDER

Barrie, Ont., June 13—(CP)—A coroner's jury investigating the death of Pte. Robert Reardon, 21, of London, Ont., June 6, recommended last night that authorities should govern the speed of all power boats in the head of Kempenfelt Bay and that greater supervision be exercised in renting of canoes.

Reardon was in a canoe which capsized in the swell caused by a passing motorboat. Evidence showed that Reardon never had been in a canoe before and could not swim.

Sinking of U.S. Ship Brings Demands For Stern Diplomatic Representations To Nazis and More Naval Protection

Washington, June 13 (AP)—Demands for stern diplomatic representations to Germany were coupled today with calls for naval protection of United States commerce as a serious congress studied the official report of the torpedoing and sinking of the American steamship man Robin Moor in the South Atlantic last May.

Although friends and foes of the administration's foreign policy took a grave view of the incident, there was no apparent disposition to consider in the light of the war with Europe. Many said so in as many words.

Several legislators spoke of the necessity of arming merchant ships, specifying what they had in mind, and others counselled delay until a Nazi explanation had been received.

Senator Claude Pepper (Dem., Florida), was one who argued that the United States Navy be used all the way across the Atlantic, if necessary, to safeguard American shipping.

Germany must have sunk the South Moor deliberately," he told reporters. "Hitler apparently is carrying out his threat to sink anything in sone he has prescribed."

Representative Ed Izac (Dem., California), a member of naval affairs, also regarded the sinking as intentional.

"If a submarine was operating on the Equator at that point it was undoubtedly under an instruction can ship," he said. "This may just be the beginning of a succession of events like those which occurred in the First World War and resulted in ultimate defeat for Germany. In my opinion it will have the same result."

Ought to Convey

On the other hand, Representative James Mott (Rep.-Oregon) asserted:—

"I don't think the Germans want to create an incident. They are inclined to double she sunk this boat. It just doesn't add up."

Chairman Sol Bloom (D., Kentucky) of the House Military Committee thought we ought to convey with battle fleets and let them shoot on sight."

Somewhat similar sentiments were voiced by Representative Eric Kefauver (Dem.-Tennessee), who said:—"I think this thoroughly demonstrates we have got to have our gloves off in dealing with the Nazis."

Senator James Mead (Dem.-New York) called for an intensification of naval patrols and other means to prevent a recurrence of the incident.

Can't Give Up Freedom

"We can't give up our freedom of the seas, nor can we allow combatants to bring the Western Hemisphere," he said.

"Nazism was the comment of Representative Melvin Maas (Rep.-Minnesota), "but I don't think there is any reason to go to war over it."

Maas said the Panay and not only failed to rescue survivors but machine-gunned them as they swam and we didn't get to war."

Representative Hook, an isolationist, voiced hope the affair would not become a cause for war.

"We are not prepared for war and the American people do not want war," he said.

Senator George Norris (Ind.-Nebraska) said that regardless

'UNTIL VICTORY IS WON'

In a scene, freighted with a wealth of feeling born of trial and experience, representatives of Britain, the Dominions and the Allies pledged yesterday their firm assurance to mankind that the sword they have drawn will never be sheathed until Hitlerism and aggression are slain and vowed their unbreakable resolve to render mutual aid to the utmost and to free the oppressed peoples.

This memorable scene bore all the marks of war. It was held in the midst of memorials of British civilization and the marks of the aggressors' hands laid on masterpieces of British culture and life. It was held in Britain, the resolute, which is the hope of continued defence and struggle against aggression of the German and Italian adversaries. In that noble company among whom was numbered the great Prime Minister Winston Churchill, were men in uniform, like knights of old, in solemn ceremonial, mingling with those in civilian dress. Here was a large part of Europe represented in a noble vow to rid the earth of the monster of aggression. Here were also agonies represented whose sacred cries groans with the weight of the Hun today. Yet from that soil shall be lifted the Nazi-Fascist curse and these nations shall be free.

Rarely has Mr. Churchill spoken more effectively. His sympathy with the oppressed peoples was expressed in words of profoundest emotion. He spoke of the "calculated scientific cruelty" practised by Hitler's followers on helpless populations. He pictured the grim "stalking of the streets and byways of a dozen lands" by Hitler's secret political police.

Faiths affronted or oppressed, traditions, cultures, laws, institutions undermined, concentration camps swelling throughout Germany and conquered Europe, "a vile race of quislings hired to fawn on the conquerors and collaborate in his designs to enforce rule on their own countrymen while grovelling low themselves"—these are the signs of "the plight of once glorious Europe and such are the atrocities against which we are in arms," he declared.

Mr. Churchill is a master in lashing scoundrels with his wit. He pictured Hitler staining countries with his infected corrosive fingers, the tattered lackey Mussolini, at his tail and Admiral Darlan frisking at his side.

Then the Prime Minister draws a picture of this Europe as the foundation on which Hitler says he will build a new order, "Never did a mocking a fantasy obsess the mortal mind of man."

In words which sink deep into the soul, the Premier declared:

"Nothing is more certain than that every tribe of Hitlerism, every stain of his infected, corroding fingers, will be sponged and purged, and if need be, blasted from the surface of the earth."

Well might he say as he spoke of the time since last June when everything looked dark:

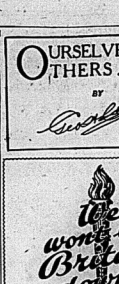
"Our solid stubborn strength has stood an awful test. We are masters of our own air and now reach out in ever-growing retribution upon the enemy. The Royal Navy holds the seas. The Italian fleet cowers, diminished, in harbor. The German navy is largely crippled or sunk."

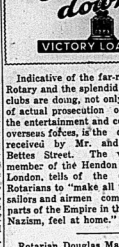
Again he repeated the resolution that Britain will not flinch from the supreme trial if the Germans should attempt invasion. There was praise of the United States in the cooperation with aid and of Britain's growing strength.

"There shall be no peace for Hitler, no rest, no halting place, no parley. With the help of God Britain shall continue steadfast, till duty is done," Mr. Churchill said.

The close of his address was impressive:

"This then, my lords and gentlemen, is the message which we send forth today to all states and nations, bound or free, to all the men in all the lands who care for freedom's cause. To our Allies and well wishers in Europe, to our American friends and helpers drawing ever closer in their might and resolve, to all we say, keep up your hearts. All will come right. Out of the depths of sorrow and sacrifice will be born again the glory of mankind."





Indicative of the far-reaching effects of Rotary and the splendid work the British clubs are doing, not only in the assistance of actual prosecution of the war, but in the entertainment and comfort of Britain's overseas forces, is the contents of a letter received by Mr. and Mrs. Dracup, 36 Bettes Street. The writer who is a member of the Hendon Rotary Club near London, tells of the efforts of British Rotarians to "make all the brave soldiers, sailors and airmen coming to us from all parts of the Empire in this struggle against Nazism, feel at home."

Rotarian Douglas Martin, Hendon, who writes the letter, tells of meeting the Dracup boy, Harold, a soldier now in England with the Canadian forces, in London and taking him as a guest to the Hendon Rotary Club luncheon. "We did our best to make him happy," he writes. "He had quite a passable lunch and we proposed his health and that of his friend, a Canadian soldier from Regina."

"After lunch," the letter went on, "I invited them both to come out for the afternoon. We went for a long drive around the countryside and I showed them the general developments which had taken place and the re-housing schemes which we had planned since the last war to replace the slums. I told him, for instance, that there were in England over 13 million houses, that is one house for every 3½ persons. No less than four millions of these have been built since the last war."

Mr. Martin relates how he took Dracup and his friend to a tea, then to a local movie. Then he took them to his home where they met his sister, brother and sister. "We had a general chin-wag," he writes, "during which we had no difficulty in settling the world's problems and putting everything right for the future."

"I may say your son is marvellously well," he continues, "He didn't seem to have much to say for himself, but I felt he was enjoying himself nevertheless."

"I have told him to make my home his own. In Britishers we intend to do this small thing for the son of a Canadian, for recently the Toronto Rotary Club invited the sons and daughters of our Rotarians in England to come to Canada until after the war. My brother took a couple of his for his two small daughters and they are in Canada in comfort for the duration."

"I expect you are anxious about your son, and I hope he will be spared to wear the 'Laurels of Victory' and bring them home safe to you."

Such is the fine spirit of this service organization. In Canada with other service associations, Rotary is doing a splendid work and that the spirit is international is evidenced in the above letter. In England the Rotary branches are still carrying on their work despite the fact that bombs are raining down, and every effort is being exerted to the country's cause. Rotarians in Canada and the Continent should well be proud of their British brothers, whose heroism, typical of their fellow countrymen, is being carried on in their service club work despite the terrific handicaps under which they are working.

IF MANKIND THE WORLD HAD MADE

If mankind the world had made,
Grass had never grown a blade.

Bloom of peach and apple tree
None of us should ever see.

And I doubt that we had heard
Song of any singing bird.

Man no circling ox and gear
Lets his wit and skill appear,

But he could not shape and mold
Daisy blossom and marigold.

THE WORLD HAD MADE

From a higher power divine
Comes wisteria's design.

Only the Creator's skill
Could have formed a daffodil.

Man, though gifted with a soul,
Could not plan the oriole

Or conceive one living thing
That makes glorious the spring.

Bleak and bare the world had stayed
If it had by man been made.

Want Full Explanation

At the State Department, it was said, the preliminary report how the Robin Moor was sunk by the submarine without ample eye-witness testimony for such a momentous step on the Nazi government for a full explanation.

The report was made by Walter J. Lindhuem, U.S. consul at Capetown, Union of South Africa, who examined the accounts of the 11 known survivors, including one passenger, after they reached the South American port aboard the Brazilian rescue ship Osorio.

It was an economical recital, but packed with drama.

Used Torpedo and Shells

It told how the passengers marked American merchantman was stopped by the submarine in the South Atlantic May 21, how identity and registry papers of passengers were given 30 minutes to abandon ship.

It describes how she was torpedoed and sunk.

Then it gave a final picture—the Nazi U-boat lingering about and shells into the sinking ship, and afterwards destroying floating wreckage with gunfire. The ship sank within 32 minutes.

The submarine, survivors said, had a laughing cow painted on the conning tower for insignia, and also the name "Lorrick" or "Corrick" in fair enough but shockpoor English.

Interviewed Sub Commander

A lifeboat in charge of the First Mate rowed a mile and a half to the waiting U-boat. There the Mate personally appraised the commander of the Hun craft of the ship's name and destination. He spent 10 minutes below deck in the commander's cabin, and when he reappeared the "abandon ship" command was given. Then came the end.

Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles was asked whether this episode on the high seas would constitute a "serious incident" in the eyes of the government.

He declined any official comment pending receipt of full information and a careful study of all facts related to the war's first loss of an American ship since hostilities began in action. The detailed depositions of the survivors are on their way here from Brazil.

Carried No Arms

Welles emphasized, in a statement that the Robin Moor was a neutral ship, and that she carried African ports outside combat areas, and that no arms, nor any record of cargo—ranging from steel rails to brassieres—but no arms, ammunition or other material of a military character.

The vessel was sunk midway between Africa and South America and nearest point of land, Trinidad, in open lifeboats, hundreds of miles from land.

There were four lifeboats. Three remain missing after 22 days at sea, despite a search around the lengthy Brazilian coastline. The missing boats carried 26 crew members and passengers, including three married couples and a child.

Of the rescued, the one non-crew member was F. C. Eccles, a British subject.

BRITISH INCREASE

The main Allied force attacking Damascus has covered approximately 50 miles since it crossed the Transjordan frontier and Northern Syria, Act Sunday.

This column apparently encountered little resistance in its initial drive, but reports reaching London last night told of fierce fighting between Australians and Senegalese pots at bay on one point after artillery bombardments.

More Across Desert

Istanbul (AP)—Allied armored cars were reported moving southward today across the Syrian desert from Palmyra, apparently in an attempt to encircle Vichy forces fighting in the south.

The British and Free French forces were said to be using an excellent road and meeting only occasional resistance. If the forces reaches Palmyra it will be in position to push on toward Damascus or Homs.

Capture of Deir-es-zor by an Allied column advancing up the Euphrates River from Iraq was reported by Turkish sources yesterday. The town, important as an air base, is 80 miles from the Iraq frontier and approximately 130 miles northeast of Palmyra.

Palmyra, also the site of an air base, is 85 miles due east of Homs and 135 miles northeast of Damascus.

National Lottery Suggested to Help Pay for the War

W. C. Mikel Lays Proposal Before County Council for Support

Why not raise millions of people to draw from, a Canadian government lottery would be the source of huge sums of money for which Canada could help pay her war expenses without going into debt, W. C. Mikel, K.C. told Hastings County Council session when he addressed that body with a view to securing its support for the scheme.

Not only would a lottery result in huge revenue for the government, Mr. Mikel said, but it would be a means of controlling "bootleg gambling" now being conducted in Canada. It would have the same effect as the thin liquor control had on the bootlegger.

Organized gambling is permitted in Canada; he said, "so why not a lottery. Why should the state take chaks on a gamble?"

Tickets, he suggested, could be sold in banks and post-offices of the country, and winners would be selected from the first one hundred tickets drawn. The scheme would not in any way affect the sale of war saving stamps or government bonds.

There is no law on the Canadian statute books against lotteries, he said, adding. Personal bets can be made without breaking the law.

Council stated it would take the matter under consideration.

The reeves of Marmora, Frankford, Madoc and other villages in the county showed that they were opportunists when they immediately applied for a similar grant after Reeve Dr. G. H. Bell, Bancroft, requested a grant of $225, or $75 each for the years 1939-40 and 41 to cover the cost of administration of Justice in his community. The reeves there claimed that the local community hall erected at a cost of $17,000 had not been paid for as yet and wished a grant to cover the cost of expenses. The grant had been given prior to 1939, he said, but no payments had been made since.

Reeve George West, Madoc, informed Reeve Bell that a similar grant stating that such costs were borne by his council and if one village got the grant, all should be treated alike.

Reeve D'Arcy Ketcheson, Frankford, supported Reeve West's claim, while Reeve William Linn, expressed his opinion in a terse statement which "What is good for the goose is good for the gander. I think all villages should get the grant."

The majority of the afternoon session was taken up with the discussion of a lengthy list of indigent hospitalization accounts. Later several bylaws passed their first reading.

TIPPING A BIG BUSINESS

Tipping is a big business in the United States.

Last year the patrons of American restaurants and other eating places tipped to the tune of $300,000,000.

Total tips in the United States would run up to several times that amount every year.

A curious story is often told to account for the origin of "tip" in the sense of a small sum of money given for personal service either rendered or expected.

According to this story, "tip" was derived from the initial letters of the phrase, "To Insure Promptness," in the following manner:

It was formerly customary to have boxes in English inns and businesses for the receipt of coins for the benefit of the waiters. These boxes bore the legend "To Insure Prompt Service" was printed on the boxes to remind guests that a coin deposited inside would bring excellent results in the way of prompt service.

Sometimes the phrases on these boxes were abbreviated to "I.P.S." and "T.I.P.S." and from this circumstance, according to the story "tip" and "tips" came into use.

But the quotations given in the Oxford dictionary show the also

Gunboat Ladybird Fired Against Screeching Stukas Till Last Dry Gun Had Slipped Under Water

By LARRY ALLEN
Associated Press Staff Writer.

Alexandria, Egypt, June 13 (AP) —Britain's famous gunboat Ladybird, 630 tons, and the monitor Terror, whose 15-inch guns helped shatter Italy's above defences in Libya, have been sunk by German dive bombers, it was reported today.

The 3,000-ton Terror was caught at dusk recently off the Libyan coast and made the target for 500-pound bombs. Her big and small guns put up a terrific barrage causing the Germans to miss. But near miss crumpled the monitor amidships.

The Lady bird went down in Tobruk harbor, Libya, "burning like hell" and firing against the screech Stukas until her last dry gun slipped under the water, it was said.

The Ladybird, famous as part of Britain's Yangtze River patrol, was fired on Dec. 12, 1937, by Japanese shore batteries—the same day the United States gunboat Panay was sunk in the Yangtze by Japanese airmen.

Hit Aft by First Bomb

The little warship was hit aft by the first bomb in the Tobruk attack which occurred May 31 and started her downward plunge with her pom-pom and six-inch guns blasting at her attackers.

Six out of a total of 42 German bombers attacking Tobruk shipping droned out of the glaring sun about 3 p.m. to dump their bombs at the gunboat.

Besides the hit aft, another bomb in the boiler room and near misses shook the Ladybird like a hound shaking a rabbit. Severely wounded men kept befuddling shells up to the gunners who continued to fire until ordered to abandon ship.

The date of the attack on the Terror was not disclosed, but it presumably was some days ago.

The Terror's gunners forced their attackers off before the monitor finally was abandoned.

British warships picked up all the Terror's officers and men, save one man was injured seriously. The hulk of the monitor was still afloat nine hours after the German attack and so a British cruiser shelled her to the bottom.

Came From Malta

The terror had come to Alexandria from Malta where for months her guns had aided in driving off Italian raiders. Previously she had been a base ship at Singapore.

She and the Ladybird took part in the final shelling of Bardia, Libya, early in January when the fleet was co-operating in the triumphal offensive of British and Imperial land forces into Libya.

The Monitor normally carried 315 men and two 15-inch, high-angle elevation guns, eight 140-inch pieces, two three-inch anti-aircraft guns and ten smaller weapons. The Ladybird's normal complement was 54 to 66 men. She mounted two six-inch guns, one three-inch anti-aircraft gun and ten smaller pieces.

Capt. John Blackburn was brought the Ladybird from China, but summer called the conduct of his officers and men "one of the most magnificent displays of courage and devotion to duty I have ever seen."

With all guns except the forward armament under water and with flames sweeping about them and eating toward the magazine, he said, the sailors asked:

"Carry on, Sir, please!"

Stockings as Beauty Assets

Lovely Gene Tierney believes a straight stocking seam is important to the smart appearance.

By HELEN FOLLETT

WHAT about your stockings, members of this beauty class? There's something on that subject about which one can do some profitable thinking. They should do more than cover your pretty legs: they should be flattering, contribute to the sum total of good looks.

If you are among the many who do not wear foundation garments, then you take pains to get a good supporter that clings well to your body, that doesn't pull or sag and that with harness up your socks in fine shape. The plumpish ankle will select one with elastic up on the sides as the ordinary belt will force a fold of flesh up over the rim, and that will interfere with the smooth appearance of the bodice. Or course, every heavyweight stocking should wear a foundation garment; quivering flesh is not attractive.

Hosiery of a fairly dark shade seem is straight.

is a boom to the girl whose fatted calves make her heartsick and self-conscious. She chases slenderize. She of the skinny pins had better stick to light tones: If she will use a jumping rope she can fill out her meagre shanks, wear stockings of any color she wishes.

Stockings should be fairly long, at least half an inch longer than the foot. Short ones press the loss together as do narrow shoes, causing ingrowing nail.

Far be it from us to bawl out the sisters, but observation leads us to conclude that some of the shortcomings in dress do well by their sockses. They are streaked and crinkled and the result is that the legs look mottled. Before hanging them up, flatten them in shape. Stockings, for rights, be ironed on the wrong side, as the iron puts on a shine.

It is so easy, when putting on stockings, to see that the back seam is straight.

June Weddings

BOSWICK—LAMBERT

The Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception, Kingston, was the scene of a pretty early summer wedding at nine o'clock, Monday morning, June 9, when Rev Father Plunkett united in marriage, Mary Angela Lambert, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. B. Lambert and Richard George Boswick, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Boswick, all of Kingston. Mr. James Nourry played the wedding music and during the ceremony, Mr. Lambert, a tenor of Belleville, sang delightfully "O Salutaris".

The bride, who was given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. Orlla Lambert, was an attractive figure in a floor length gown of white sharkskin, fashioned with long fitted sleeves and a full length veil, caught with a wreath of orange blossoms. She carried a cascade bouquet of white lilies and wore the groom's gift, a gold locket.

The bride was attended by Miss Mary Lambert, sister of the bride and Miss Huffman of Belleville. Miss Boswick's gown was a floor length model of blue sheer and Miss Huffman's was a floor length model of pink sheer. They both wore matching caps and carried bouquets of pink. Best man was Mr. Leo Huffman of Belleville, and the ushers were Mr. George Lambert and Mr. George Moulton of Kingston.

The groom's gifts to the bridesmaids were gold lockets and to the best man and usher, cuff links.

Following the ceremony a wedding breakfast and reception was held at the Roy York, Mrs. Lambert, mother of the bride, receiving in a gown of orchid aspace with white accessories and a corsage of yellow roses: while Mrs. Boswick, mother of the groom, wore blue crepe with white accessories and a corsage of white carnations.

Later the bride and groom left on a short wedding trip and upon their return will reside in Kingston.

For travelling the bride chose a smart ensemble of blue sheer, with contrasting accessories. The out-of-town guests included: Mr. and Mrs. J. Thos. Thresp, Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Lambert, Rochester, N.Y.; Mr. and Mrs. V. Huffman, Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Huffman, Mr. and Mrs. H. Barrett, Miss Marie Huffman, Mr. and Mrs. R. Huffman and Mr. Leo Huffman, all of Belleville.

GINDINGER—HUFFMAN

An interesting wedding was solemnized in Thomasburg United Church parsonage, Wednesday, June 11, Rev. A. S. Doggett officiating when Orma Euphemia, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Huffman, Harlowe, became the bride of Steward William Gindinger of Adrian, Michigan.

The bride wore a dress of blue with white accessories. She was attended by her sister, Mrs. M. Gindinger, who wore a dusty rose crepe. Mr. LeRoy Hammil of Adrian, acted as groomsman.

Mr. and Mrs. Gindinger left for Harlowe and other points and will finally take up residence in Adrian, Michigan.

Fashion Flashes

WE STILL GLITTER with sequins at night. One of the prettiest of the recent models is a dance frock in white moussine de soie, the full skirt marked by a trailing ivy vine down the front and a matching vine on the train. The vine is in brown print, the leaves in dark green sequins.

Confidence Inspiring is the knowledge that one's wardrobe includes at least one smart black frock. Black silk crepe is used for an interesting version with middle front and plunging neckline. The skirt is in four finely pleated tiers, each tier edged in white silk pricked in violet and green. At back of the neckline is a small standing double collar of the print.

It's swell to have a fur coat or cape for summer evenings. Or give you hip-length cape is in white fox dyed in a delicate rose shade and lined with rose chiffon.

Still on top of the smartest heads is the flower-trimmed turban. A white model is crocheted pale blue yarn has a cluster of purple velvet pansies massed through its centre drapery.

A natural for the girl who often goes to the track or to friends' stables horses is the tie silk suit in blue with a tiny print of jockeys and horses in red, yellow, green and white. Tiny jockey cap buttons

Albert College Students Urged To Volunteer for National Service by Dr. R. C. Wallace

Annual Convocation Held in Memorial Hall of the College

PRIZES AWARDED

A ringing challenge for the young people of Canada to offer themselves into the battle-need now, and some branch of the armed forces to fight for the preservation of freedom and decency which is threatened by the evil forces of totalitarianism, was delivered by Robert C. Wallace, Principal of Queen's University, at his address to the students of Albert College at the annual convocation in Albert College Memorial Hall on Thursday afternoon.

Stately Memorial Hall was filled almost to capacity with admiring parents and friends of the student body, as the convocation proceedings headed by the graduating class, and including the faculty of Albert College School, the faculty and the Board of Governors proceeded slowly up the centre aisle.

Fitting Tribute Paid

In his principal's report for the past year, Dr. Bert Howard paid fitting tribute to the Board of Directors and to the Women's Guild whose efforts in continued service "had been very excellent." He also complimented the faculty and paid glowing tribute to the student body whom he lauded upon their conduct and upon their studies. In referencing to the patriotic activity of the faculty and student body, Dr. Howard stated that 75 per cent of the personnel of the college were actively engaged in war work of some nature; the former secretary of the college had paid the supreme sacrifice in the defence of liberty, and the faculty and students were 100 per cent in contributing monetarily toward the war effort.

In a ringing valedictorian address Miss Helen Hartwell, the graduating class, stated that it was with mingled feelings of joy and sorrow that students awaited the day of convocation. "Feelings of joy, because we have reached the goal toward which our studies were aimed, and of sorrow because of the impending separation from dearly loved students and teachers," she said.

Days Not Forgotten

The days spent within the walls of dearly beloved Albert College would not be forgotten, promised Miss Harmon, as she stated that "although the features of graduation might soon slip our memory that which we have learned will be with us always."

"The books which we have spent in study have brought us our reward," concluded Miss Harmon as she referred to the duty of youth to history. "Our responsibility now is to go out and finish the job—God grant that we may be permitted to do so."

Principal Wallace held that a close relationship existed between Albert College and Queen's University in that many students come to Queen's from Albert following their first or second year of college training, there to complete their studies.

Referring to the work of a college, what they are doing and what the work means, the speaker stated that the whole purpose of a college education is to develop the ability of the student to the utmost so as to enable him to be of the best service in life during the years to come.

Many Ways to Develop

There were many ways in which this development might take place, continued Principal Wallace, but he stated the object in view was to develop a richer and warmer personality than that with which the student had entered college. "It is with emotional feeling rather than the intellectual that we live with other people in the world, so the enrichment of the emotional qualities in the student is a much-to-be-desired feature of college training."

The one pertinent question of the world today is, "Is it really worthwhile to build character and intellectuality through our educational system when the forces of evil seem to foreshadow the destruction of everything honorable and decent?" stated Principal Wallace. "We must meet force with force, conviction and defeat it with the tools which evil is using—tools of destruction which the world's best brains are being called upon to develop. There is no other way," he said.

Chance to Assist Country

"It is many years since the young people of Canada have been called upon to serve as they are now called upon today—called upon to assist in every way possible and to join the forces of the armed service." It should be the resolve of every young person in Canada to give all they can and in every way possible to assist in national service," was Principal Wallace's urge.

"Honor and decency were eternal, stated Principal Wallace, but he warned people must not forget that at times in the past honor and decency have been overcome and the world plunged into darkness. "It is in order to preserve these things that we are fighting today but triumph we shall," he assured. The realization of the seriousness of the situation which has been forced upon the democracies by dictatorial powers has not been present until only recently, was Principal Wallace's contention. "Wealth, rank and power mean nothing; but the preservation of honor and decency looms above all else," he asserted. "Britain now realizes that this is true and has stripped herself bare, while we in Canada have only made a start part way."

"Go out and play your part for your ideals and for freedom. It is to you that we look, it is to you that the throne looks, it is to you God Speed," he concluded.

Diplomas Awarded

Included on the convocation program was the report of diplomas and certificates awarded in the Conservatory of Music Department, given by S. M. Anglin, B.A., and the distribution of diplomas and certificates to students who had already completed their studies at Albert College. Owing to the fact that the Department of Education this year requested that the Easter term for students write exams, and which in many cases were not complete, the number of diplomas presented was fewer than in other years.

The rendition of an appropriate college song by members of the student body was greatly appreciated by attending parents and friends, as was a solo, "How Lovely Are Thy Dwellings," by Miss Helen Glover. "A Song For Albert," written by Harold Kilney and sung by the combined voices of the student body and congregation paid fitting tribute to stately Albert while the presentation of a long-commencement service set by the graduating class to be used in the college chapel, exemplified the love held by the students for "Alma Mater." OFFICER DEMANDS 'HOUSE CLEANING' IN NAT. DEFENCE

Maj. Alan Cockerman, Member for South York, Complains of Slowness of Equipment Reaching the Troops

RALSTON REPLIES

By FRANK FLAHERTY
Canadian Press Staff Writer.

Ottawa, June 13 (CP)—Ushered in by a declaration of impatience with military training methods from a serving officer, a general debate on National Defence matters continues in the House of Commons today.

Last night Maj. Alan Cockeram (Con. York South), wearing the uniform of the Irish regiment of Canada of which is second in command, asked Defence Minister Ralston for some "house-cleaning" at National Defence headquarters and complained of slowness in the supply of equipment and in the training progress of troops in Canada.

Col. Ralston replied that he could supply equipment only as fast as Canadian industry could produce it and defended the training system as approved by British army authorities.

"We must walk before we can run," said the Minister. "The training being done is basic training which must be given before the higher training in large formations is given."

The Minister said he had made many changes at defence headquarters and would make more rather than have "square pegs in round holes." He said the present Chief of the General Staff, MAJ.-Gen. H. D. G. Crerar, was recommended for the post by Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, commander of the Canadian Corps overseas and himself a former Chief of the General Staff. He expressed complete confidence in Gen. Crerar and other officers at headquarters.

House Sits Till Midnight

The debate took place on defence estimates as the House sat to midnight for the second night in succession in an effort to conclude the business this week. During the long sitting the House approved estimates of the departments of Finance, Trade and Commerce, Secretary of State and National Revenue.

Labor Department estimates were considered for a time but not completed. These gave Angus MacInnis (CC.F., Vancouver East) a chance to protest as a telegram sent the government by the Canadian Manufacturers Association urging action to deal with the labor situation.

Labor Minister McLarty said it was not his conception of the duties of the Labor Department to deal with supervise activity or to enforce the law.

"We are there to provide fair wages and to conciliate disputes, but it is not and never can be the function of the Labor Department to act as a police force", he said.

The House adopted Prime Minister Mackenzie King's motion to adjourn when present business is completed until November 3, subject to an earlier call if the public interest requires it. Mr. King said it was not likely the St. Lawrence Waterways agreement would pass the United States Congress until well on in the summer but if it passed earlier it might be desirable to recall parliament to deal with it.

Conservative House Leader Hanson left Ottawa for his home at Fredericton, lending weight to belief the house might complete its business today.

The Second Exchange

The Cockeram-Ralston exchange was the second of the session, few weeks ago Maj. Cockeram voiced a protest against a letter sent him by the minister about a speech the officer made at a political meeting. The minister said in the letter that the speech contained "many grossly misleading" which, under King's regulations and orders, an officer was not entitled to make public.

Maj. Cockeram said the training received by his unit since its mobilization in the 4th Division did not compare with the training given troops in 1914 and 1915. He said the division's artillery had been sent to the armored division and as yet there was no divisional commanders or headquarters staff.

"I suppose the government has not yet decided to whom it will give that political plum," he said, "but there isn't any question we are entitled to know who is going to command us on active service."

Maj. Cockeram said he had never heard of Maj.-Gen. H. D. G. Crerar, Chief of the General Staff until he was appointed, except that he was Commandant of the Royal Military College.

"I had hoped he would put pep into the department," he said. But he would "take to think of the 3rd Division being put into Crete with the training it has had today."

Maj. Cockeram said the 4th Division had no combined training with other units and possibly the third was in the same position.

Wants Some Statements

"Surely after 12 months of war we could have had combined training," he said. "We have had nothing to fit us for active service."

He said there should be some statement from the Government as to the ultimate use that was to be made of the 4th Division, and every round hope it was not to be broken up like the 5th Division in the First Great War.

Maj. Cockeram said it would take six months to equip the armored division with tanks. There was no up-to-date equipment for the artillery. He wondered why the department had not improved equipment.

Maj. Cockeram spoke of the military trade schools and said men sent to them were returned to their units and nobody knew what to do with them.

He spoke of east coast defences and said they were using 18-pounders from the last war and French 75's.

"Too many men had been demobilized since the war started, Maj. Cockeram said. Many of them could have been used in headquarters work.

There was no job in headquarters that could not be filled by a veteran of the First Great War, he contended, yet there were men there in senior jobs who had no previous active service.

He said the present recruiting campaign would be much more successful if the campaign had been organized along the lines of the Victory Loan Campaign, and criticized a paragraph in instructions to recruiting speakers urging them to stress that the fight was for Canada rather than for the Empire.

Should be Disciplined

"We believe we are fighting for the British Empire and I think whoever was responsible for that (paragraph) should be disciplined", he said.

Mr. Ralston said Canada's overseas commitments for this year were the 3rd division, the Army Tank Brigade and the armored division. These formations had first call on equipment.

Training was being carried on under the "training centre" system which was the only one that could give results. Instead of organizing a unit and starting it out with officers and men all inexperienced the personnel was trained first at centres.

There was still a shortage of equipment but the situation was improving. He assured Maj. Cockeram the Irish regimen would get its 18-pdrs guns before it was called on to face on operative situation.

The "training centre" system adopted in Canada was admired by British and United States observers, Col. Ralston said. Men were sent to England for courses as instructors and British officers had been brought out to assist.

Of demobilization because of unfitness, Col. Ralston said there had been 14,000 men discharged so far and he was not pleased with it. Steps had been taken to correct that and now it was charged the medical examination was too severe.

Gibraltar Strengthened Against Attack

Symbolic of inviolable strength through centuries, the historic fortress of Gibraltar is being further strengthened to combat any attempt by the Axis powers to wrest the guardian of the Mediterranean from British hands. At TOP one of Gibraltar's big guns points a frowning muzzle from its emplacement cut into the Rock's solid walls. BELOW British and Empire soldiers swing picks and handle drills as new defences are hewed and old defences strengthened. Former hard-rock miners from Canada now with military units overseas were reported sent to Gibraltar to utilize their skill in these operations.

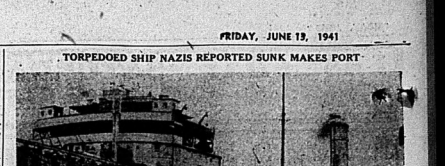
TORPEDOED SHIP NAZIS REPORTED SUNK MAKES PORT



German propaganda said this freighter had been sunk in the Atlantic, by Nazi submarines. This picture gives the lie to Herr Goebbels and at the same time bears out Admiralty statements that her vitals and suffering the ragged records of sinkings as put out by Berlin are often incorrect since many torpedoed ships are not lost, but by some means save their cargoes. After taking a torpedo in gash shown on the waterline, the vessel was able to continue to port, her buoyancy maintained by airtight refrigerator compartments built into the ships. The ship is the San Felix and she is pictured in an Allied port.

Letter To the Editor

The Ontario Intelligencer,
Belleville, Ont.,
Mr. Editor:

Many citizens have been looking to our City Council for leadership in putting over Victory Loan. The papers stated that we did not have sufficient means in our Relief Fund to subscribe. We know that our city has a good credit standing and could borrow the money should subscribe at least fifty thousand dollars to the fund and set aside sufficient money each year to cover the loan.

We sincerely hope our City Council will take immediate action to get the ball in the shape and the demand is urgent. Such leadership would have the support of all citizens.

Yours respectfully,
FRED E. DEACON

Little Benny's Note Book

I was around at the firehouse talking to Mr. Riley the hookenlader driver and engineer looking for saving people, and he said, "There's something about a woman that seems to make all the difference. I suppose maybe it's the way they have a little mark of appreciation, and maybe it's only human. Did I ever tell you about the medal I got for saving little Bobby Brisker's life?

No sir, G. I said. Did you save little Bobby's life? I says. Mr. Riley said, Well, not a big fire. In fact it was only a bonfire, but little Bobby Brisker was edging kind of close to it so I yanked him back by the tail of his little yellow blouse and his father gave me a medal. It was not enough for Mr. Brisker to do, because he was the president of the Brisker Meddle Foundry, but just a name that meddle was a real bond between me and little Bobby. He exchanged Christmas cards regularly after that, and he still invites me to his birthday parties where I always tell his little guests the story of how I won the Brisker meddle. Sometimes I almost wish I'd won it for the life of reason of the whole Parchesi family, he said, G, when was that? I said, and Mr. Riley said, Why, that was the house burnt up. They were all on the roof, the entire 12 of them, and one of them would jump down into the net we were holding for them, so 13 times I fought my way through that blazing furnace of a house, and 13 times I jumped back out with one of them in my arms. Well no, 12 times, because that's how one jump with the twin babies. Anyway, I didn't get any medal for it, so it never seemed to have any importance and I rarely even think of it and I really don't know how I ever came to tell you the story in the first place.

RUSSIAN-GERMAN RELATIONS TO BE SUBJECT OF TALKS

Sir Stafford Cripps, British Ambassador to Russia, Now in London

EDITORIAL COMMENT

London, June 13 (CP)—Informed quarters said today discussions between Sir Stafford Cripps, British Ambassador to Russia, and government leaders here are "primarily concerned with Russian-German relations."

Sir Stafford reached London by air from the Soviet capital Wednesday for what was described as a trip by way of Britain with policy of having her envoys report periodically and to establish contact with the home government.

The informants today refused to say whether a meeting of the War Cabinet, scheduled in the afternoon Times stating that Sir Stafford would not return to Moscow as the Soviet Commissar for Foreign Affairs."

The Times noted that the Foreign Office's interest in what the newspaper called "rumors of a threatening point in German-Russian relations" which has been current all over Europe in the last few days.

Playing Dangerous Game

Germany and Russia, the newspaper asserted, are playing "a dangerous game" with "skill and unusual daring" with both desiring to avoid war but "each prepared to risk it" to extort and the other to refuse as a price without "disturbing their relations."

"It is a sort of situation in which guns sometimes go off without either side having really intended it," it said.

Speculation in London centred on the nature of Sir Stafford's German demands on Russia.

One interpretation is that the reported German threat fits the British diplomatic offensive seeking Russian collaboration with the Allies. It was reasoned that powerful licence given to Cripps might well push Russia toward Britain and away from Germany.

Then Britain might keep Sir Stafford in London, it was speculated, until the crucial moment, when he would return to Russia bearing British offers of friendship.

'Never Envisioned Plane as Engine Of War'—O. Wright

Chighisaki, June 13 (AP)—Orville Wright, who with his late brother Wilbur, gave modern flight to the world, said today he never envisioned sadness—upon the uses to which the airplane has been put.

The Dayton, O., man, who in December, 1903, from the sands of Kitty Hawk, N.C., now is within two months of his 70th birthday, arrived on tenmarch.

"Just to think," he mused, "Wilbur and I flew behind a little thing of four cylinders that developed all of 12 horsepower—and 44."

As he spoke, Wright fingered the cylinder heads of a 1,700 horsepower engine, many times weighing more than a ton—the first produced at the Wright Aeronautical Corporation's Lockland plant, dedication of which he saw yesterday at a guest of honor.

"In a sense, I guess we didn't know what we were doing when we built our first plane," he went on. "We never envisioned that it would be a terrible engine of war, certainly, in the sense that we have someone who will abuse anything."

North Bay First Ontario City To Reach Objective

Toronto, June 13—(CP)— The city of North Bay is the first Ontario city to go over the top in the Victory Loan Campaign, officials announced today. Subscriptions from North Bay have reached a total of $703,000, of the $700,000 total of $700,000 set as a per-objective, a report of 100.43 of the amount asked from North Bay.

Officials of persons on the "special names" list are responsible for sending the figure over the top. North Bay is listed as a district of the Nipissing area for the purposes of the campaign.

Forty American flying cadets greeted them and here Lieutenant W. O. Mavis presents a R.A.F. flag to William Harrison and Jimmy Stone of Arcadia, while 99 American U.S. cadets are wearing flying togs and the British boys, not in uniform, wear sun helmets.

PART OF EDITION HITLER'S PAPER IS CONFISCATED

Issue Contains Article by Goebbels, Who Claims Means Parallel to Overcoming Obstacle of Water Defences

NO NAZI COMMENT

Berlin, June 13.—(AP)—Part of an edition of Hitler's newspaper, the Voelkischer Beobachter, containing an article by Propaganda Minister Goebbels which said Britain would fall into error if she thought water was an insurmountable obstacle, was ordered confiscated today.

Goebbels said Britain has a traditional attitude toward military matters and is slow to adjust herself to technical developments, the German army, on the other hand, takes nothing for granted, experiments constantly, seeks out new problems in the light of technical advances, he wrote.

Comment Refused by Nazis

Nazi spokesmen would make no comment on reasons for the confiscation.

Goebbels' article said Britons constantly demonstrate in manoeuvres their invasion of Scandinavia.

"English troops attempt these attacks, always with the same words, 'and, of course, are successful in the limited back suite the sea. The show goes off as the British imagine it should, and not as a proper German manoeuvre would be."

Goebbels recalled that the French manoeuvred before the Germans crossed the Meuse to conclusion it was invulnerable.

Goebbels Says Water Not Insurmountable

He said Britons would fall into the error of the French if they thought water was an insurmountable obstacle.

"Certainly there are ways and means of overcoming such obstacles," Goebbels wrote. . . . Every technical task is in relative and every objective is a games by the means suited to the particular problem. . . .

"If today Crete events are hotly debated in the world, they are merely substitute the world Englland for Crete to understand what is meant.

"If two months ago someone has told Germany that she would be attacked at the beginning of June he probably would have laughed. But today Crete is in our hands and if anyone now were to tell him what might happen within the next few months he probably would laugh again".

R. C. A. F. Issues 49th Casualty List

Ottawa, June 13 (CP)—Royal Canadian Air Force headquarters today announced casualties of 11 airmen in Canada and overseas in the 49th casualty list of the war. Today's list brought the total number of dead and missing reported by the R.C.A.F. since the outbreak of war to 1,111.

Three of the men were killed in flying accidents or air operations overseas, while the other members casualty died from injuries received in Canada and one died from natural causes.

The list also contained the names of five men seriously ill in Canada.

Eastern England Main Targets for German Raiders

London, June 13 —(CP)— Nazi raiders dropped bombs on parts of eastern England overnight, the Air Ministry said today. One enemy plane was shot down.

The report indicated the Nazis caused no casualties but it was announced that in one town in East Anglia there were a small number of casualties, the extent of which were fatal."

In a desultory battle 20,000 feet above the southeast Straight coast this afternoon, a group of British fighters turned back a formation of Messerschmitts.

Several minutes of duel of cannon fire were heard and, after one long burst, an unidentified plane dived into a loud scream and appeared to have run into the sea.

Last night, a Blenheim aircraft of the Coastal Command was attacked by three Me-110's flames off the vicinity of a British convoy. The enemy aircraft were engaged by guns of the ships in convoy and by the Blenheim. One Nazi plane received a direct hit and when last seen was on the fire and losing height. The other two German planes fled. The Blenheim suffered no damage.

Roosevelt Coming To Canada Soon Says Mr. King

Ottawa, June 13—(CP)—Prime Minister Mackenzie King said today he had just received a letter from President Roosevelt in which the latter said he was hoping to make his first visit to Canada shortly.

No definite date has been set, the Prime Minister told Ian Ameron, Toronto Liberal member who visited Ontario to get an idea of Canada's war effort. He said the visit would be a private one for the visitors.

Asked if he considered conscription necessary to the war effort in Canada, he replied that "Canada will get all the men needed voluntarily." The glory of Canada's war effort is that it has been carried voluntarily, Mr. King added.

Mr. Ameron reported on an interview given the newspaper women by Premier Hepburn of Ontario on the matter this week when Mr. Hepburn described the conscription issue as merely something he feared for Crete to understand what is meant.

"If two months ago someone has told Germany that she would be attacked at the beginning of June he probably would have laughed. But today Crete is in our hands and if anyone now were to tell him what might happen within the next few months he probably would laugh again".

Officers Escape While Sentry Sang Snatches of Opera

With the British Army in the Western Desert, June 11 (Delayed) (CP)—Two British officers who escaped from a prison camp while the Italian sentry sang snatches of opera succeeded today in making their way through the Axis and British lines to enter the fortifications of Tobruk fortress.

The two captains had arrived together in India. They met again in the Desert, Libya, camp—about 100 miles airline northwest of Tobruk—and soon hatched a plan to get away.

One officer related:

"There was considerable confusion in the prison camp. While British of the prisoners were being photographed by the Italians we crawled through the wire. We pinched some bully-beef and a lot of Italian water bottles and hid them in a wrecked building. We hid from dusk until 11.30 p.m., and then began our journey. We slipped out through the wire. Not a soul spotted us." Then for 22 days they made their way over the desert to Tobruk.

TWO ARE KILLED AS CAR CRASHES INTO HEAVY TRUCK

Mr. and Mrs. F. T. Card of Hamilton Victims of Accident

TWO INJURED

Hamilton, June 13—(CP) — Two persons were killed and two injured this afternoon when an automobile crashed into the side of a heavy trailer on the Brantford Highway a few hundred yards east Duff's Corners shortly after two o'clock.

The dead have been tentatively identified as Fred T. and Mrs. Card, (52 Newton Avenue), Hamilton.

The injured are Donald Smith, 14 (Hamilton), Mrs. Woodfield and Douglas Hassen, (34 Edgar Street), Chatham.

Mr. and Mrs. Card were proceeding toward Hamilton on No. 2 highway and were nearing a curve at Duff's Corners when they began to pass a heavy transport trailer, driven by Hassen. Their automobile was partially touched the rear of the trailer, was hurled around and smashed by the force of the impact. An automobile following the car driven by Card piled into the wreckage. This car was in charge of Smith.

Smith was rushed to the office of Dr. A. L. Speers, Ancaster, for treatment.

The Card automobile was reduced to a mass of twisted metal and wood wreckage. The trailer bore little evidence of the force of the collision and the third vehicle was also damaged.

WOMAN RESCUED 7 CARS SAVED

Soldiers of First Midland Regiment Pull Out Girl From Fire at Kingston While Woman Found Safe in Street

Kingston, Ont., June 13 —(CP)— An unidentified woman was saved and seven automobiles were driven to safety early today by members of the 1st Midland Regiment during a fire which destroyed the garages and sheds at the rear of a Montreal Street property.

The soldiers said that when they pulled one of the cars from a blazing garage they found the woman in the front seat. It was unknown what she was doing in the machine.

The soldiers laid a line of hose from their barracks here and helped firemen in the battle. A smoke was so heavy that one of the men got on a gas mask to fight the blaze. Damage was kept below $1,500.

Conrad Nagle Stars In Victory Loan Radio Drama, Tonight

Living history goes on the air tonight, when the Victory Loan broadcast presents a stirring drama "So Ends Our Night," starring Conrad Nagle, the famous film star, on the C.B.C. and will be carried over the C.B.C. network and affiliated stations from the Victory Loan.

"So Ends Our Night," is from the movie of the same name. It is the powerful story of refugees from Germany during the days immediately before the declaration of war. Hero and heroine, they had no home, no legitimate means of livelihood, and the country wanted them. How could they survive? Only by one means—the sacrifice this week when Mr. Hepburn described the sacrifice this week when Mr. Hepburn described the sacrifice this week when Mr. Hepburn described as the greatest enemy to the North American continent.

Smillie, the Prime Minister said he had no comment still but. How burn. He added: "But Canada is not a single strike in industry today."

Prime Minister King's War Statement in Commons

Ottawa, June 13.— (CP)—Text of Prime Minister Mackenzie King's war statement in the House of Commons today follows:

Whether it is better to fight and lose, or not to fight at all, is one of the oldest questions facing military strategists entrenched with an enemy of superior strength. Reverses there are bound to be, but they must not lose heart when they come.

Events we recall that up till a year ago, Britain placed her main reliance on the French forces in Syria and North Africa and on the French fleet in the Mediterranean for the protection of the common Allied interests in the whole Mediterranean Basin, and then reflect that a year has passed since the collapse of France and no vital British position has yet been lost, that we can count, not for self satisfaction certainly, but, at least, for thankfulness.

In an attempt to capture the changing phases of a world-wide war, it is necessary, in the first place, if relieved by sunshine, must not be darkened by shadow. There may be an encircling gloom—tomorrow there will be shafts of light.

I can but reiterate what I have repeatedly declared to the people of Canada. We shall not deceive the enemy nor deceive ourselves if we are unduly elated by temporary success, or if we are unduly downcast by temporary failure.

Long Struggle

No thoughtful man can ever have believed, that the war would be over in a few months, or won by a short, sharp effort. The very beginning it was obvious that the voluntary forces of the free world were so mighty that a long, grim struggle was inevitable. It was to be spread over the nation by nation, from ocean to ocean, from continent to continent.

The weak, the unprotected, and the peaceful would have obliged to fall by the wayside. The final victory would be the reward only of those who could withstand the strong.

Today, in what may be the hitherto most critical hour of the struggle, stale discipline flights self sacrifice, and unconquerable hope forged and hammered by a state of war, are the weapons which free men over tempered by the fires of liberty.

In this last chapter a few indubitable facts stand out in bold relief.

Where War Will be Won

The war will be won or lost not in Africa or in Asia or in the islands of the Pacific, but in the air, the shores and in the skies of Britain, Germany and the countries of the Mediterranean is but an outpost in the city of liberty. The battlements are in the Atlantic and the English Channel.

Germany knows only if Britain falls.

Let me for a moment seek to balance our advantages and our disadvantages on the air, on the land and at sea.

In the air, the balance of machine power is now definitely established. Increasing numbers of Nazi bombers are now destroyed each night; British raids on German objectives have been more and more effective, but no longer can the 4/- day silence of the usually overloquacious German ministry, hide their results from the world.

In his Reichstag speech on May 4th Hitler spoke of promise still better weapons next year.

Prophecies of Hitler Put to Confusion

This statement was the first indication given to the German people that the war would not, as hitherto declared by Hitler, be finished this year. Thus are the prophecies of Hitler put to confusion by free men.

The stream of machines continues to flow. If any further evidence were needed of the growth of the British air strength it is to be found in the aggressive activity of the Royal Air Force in the North Sea and in the Mediterranean. The fact that there is no slackening in the pace of this steady expensive activity that every day pursues its revenges against those who scatter indiscriminate murder and destruction upon unarmed civilians, is also a fact. Everywhere in sky warfare a situation not yet reached nevertheless is being built up day by day.

On the sea the curve of loss has recently shown a decline. The shipping losses for May were comparable with those which obtained in April. The attack of the Bismarck upon H.M.S. Hood was followed by relentless pursuit and swift retribution. The realities of British sea power remain.

Enemy Shipping Losses

The catalogue of the heavy losses sustained by enemy shipping proves that, if regard is paid to the comparative available resources, tonnage, targets and striking power, the balance of the effective destruction is going three as heavily against upon the side of Germany and Italy.

Taken together with land operations, there is nothing which can justify the belief that the strength of Mr. Churchill made in his speech on November 10th over fifty months ago, to eliminate the occupation of the Channel Islands by Germany, after nearly two years of war, no enemy has yet set foot on British soil.

As Mr. Churchill said:

Britain in Middle East

"If anybody had said in June last, we should today hold every yard of the territories for which we fought in Abyssinia, Iraq, the Middle East, that we should have driven the Italian Empire, that Egypt, Palestine and Syria would be successfully defended—anyone who said that would have been thought a foolish optimist. Yet that is the position at the moment."

These facts are the salient, they are the outstanding facts of the situation.

Canada's Effort Gains Momentum

As far as Canada is concerned, our own war effort in men and munitions, is increasing in volume and in momentum. We are sending more and more Canadian troops, more Canadian sailors and more Canadian airmen to the battle fronts of the defenders of Britain.

Ever since last we have had an army corps of two divisions and the Canadian Corps, under the command Gen. McNaughton has insisted out, they are helping to garrison the one vital citadel, the retention of which decides the war. The heartbeats of all to the present situation is the attitude of the United States. The declaration of President Roosevelt are not only full of promise but of deep significance. The announcement by the United States Navy Department that United States warships would be sent to Iceland to protect the defence required their presence, the speeches of Mr. Stimson (Untied States Secretary for War) and Mr. Knox (United States Navy Secretary) and the message of the President to the Congress of the bill authorizing the transfer to the defence of United States waters—all these are of momentous importance. Public opinion, and the decisive point of President Roosevelt's message, his impatient on May 27, when he made it plain that the United States considered it was not only desirable but necessary to ensure the delivery of munitions to Britain.

Mr. Roosevelt did not minimize the submarine peril in the waters of the Atlantic. His statement that the United States would not accept the present combined ship-building capacity of Britain and the United States as a thoroughly realistic facing of the facts.

Canada could not rapidly becoming not only the arsenal of democracy but the principal base of operation of the sea. Canada has mobilized all her resources, industrial men, materials and suitable locations. Plans for the extension of Canadian construction have begun the race against destruction, begun the race against destruction. Canada now helps to relieve the tremendous pressure which is being put upon Britain navy. Every new American warship, every new Canadian warship, helps the British navy to relieve and to destroy and to convoy merchant ships is a guarantee of more, munitions, munitions and food.

Canadian Troops Overseas

We have made known to all the world that our forces overseas are ready to go, and that we are equally ready to have them go wherever their services may count for most. We are despatching to Britain two additional divisions, one a third infantry division, the other an armoured division. Also a tank brigade and many reinforcements. All will have been despatched in the course of the present year. What is again altogether true that our forces we are retaining in Canada. Except for a relatively few key men all honorable members are aware, are being trained with all speed on the coastal waters of Britain. They are now taking an increasingly full part in the defence of the Atlantic coast and in the duties of convoy on the great passage way of the Atlantic so vital not only to the present of Britain but also to the future of Canada and of the United States of America.

Canadian Airmen Overseas

Canadian airmen in Canada, Canadian airmen all are aware, have from the beginning been in the front rank in the Battle of Britain. In the Royal Canadian Air Force we have had 2,000 men.

Every day that number is increased by graduates from the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan. The training plan this year will double the number of its establishments. In Canada the training schools of Manning depots and 20 recruiting centres are operating in full pressure. Since this source is flowing to Britain an ever increasing number of air crews, observers and gunners. They have proceeded to Britain and they will continue to cross in ever increasing numbers.

Radio Technicians

We have recently sent from Canada to Britain 1,000 radio technicians whose help has been invaluable in the air defence and in the cleansing of the midnight air. More will be needed.

We are making machines for Britain. We are making them for our own. Canadian motor transport vehicles, machine guns, anti-tank guns, mine-sweepers as well as shells, explosives and chemicals are being sent in ever increasing tonnage across the Atlantic. We are sending and will continue to send to Britain the foods which ships can be found to carry to her ports in safety from there. We recognize the tremendous debt which the British Empire and its peoples are bearing. That burden, as well, we are continuing to share with the United Kingdom.

Without complaint our people are bearing the increasing burden of their history. In addition they are loaning to Britain $1,000,000,000 of investment. I know that with loyal willingness they will bear the burden of taxation which necessity cannot be won.

There remains, as one of our surest shields and shield, the intangible things of the human spirit. The spirit of the British people, their hardship that all may continue to live in freedom, their heritage that is a part of Canadian character. We of Canada have a deep admiration for human brotherhood; a hatred of tyranny and oppression of every race. Ours in the unshaken and unshakable purpose to re-establish peace in the world, to secure with the blackened ruins of civilization, a peace which shall be lasting and founded in social and international justice, a peace based in human liberty.

All these intangible things are the very fibre and fabric of the national character of the people of Britain and Canadian peoples. Tried by many onslaughts, tested by many fires, they have emerged from the crucible of war purified. Their character remain unbroken and unbreakable, unconquered and unconquerable. Against their walls, the tides of evil and the waves of battle will beat in vain.

THE WAR TODAY

By-DON GILBERT
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

The period of suspended judgment on the sinking of the Robin Moor by a German submarine has expired with release of well authenticated details of the torpedoing. And the shock-effect of the first reports are and public men has been for the United States merchantmen sailing the Atlantic and Caribbean.

The sinking, 700 miles from land and with 24 Americans aboard, has aroused the excitement, but thought about by similar German acts of the past. Yet, in the past, there has been less public clamor. But there has been evidence of slumbering the steadily growing demand for effective measures to protect the United States Government's policy of maritime freedom has been reinforced.

Torpedoing Occurred

The torpedoing occurred in the Atlantic of South America, that stretch of the Atlantic reaching from South America to Equatorial Africa. German and Italian submarines have been active there intercepting British convoys sailing for the Middle and Far East via the Cape of Good Hope, a heavy toll of shipping already has been taken, and the Axis powers have the added satisfied by German seizure of the Azores, Cape Verde Islands, and Dakar, all of which hold dominating positions on the trade routes between the North and South Atlantic.

What President Said

But the greater the German activities in the South Atlantic, the greater chances of United States intervention. That is the significance of President Roosevelt's declaration that the waters that lie immediately off our own hemisphere are vitally affecting its South Atlantic. They are the waters that are protected by the actual attack against the integrity and independence of Brazil and her neighboring republics."

$8,500 Paid Out Of County Council Patriotic Fund

Various patriotic organizations have been paid $8,500 by Hastings County, exclusive of the Red Cross, according to the 1940 report, through the medium of the newly formed Patriotic Committee, Chairman Geo. West, Madoc, revealed to County Council when the report was presented today.

Eight thousand dollars of this amount was paid to the Canadian War Services Fund for benefits to the R.C.A.S.C., R.C.A.M.C., Canadian Legion, I.O.D.E. and the Knights of Columbus.

The remaining $500 was given to the Navy League of Canada, and was the first grant to be paid this organization.

Statistics for 1941, passed a year ago, provided one mill on the county assessment, amounting to $18,360, to be set aside for patriotic purposes. A Patriotic Committee was appointed and is composed of Chairman Wm. Warden Reed of Tweed, Clerk Denyes and Treasurer J. W. Haggerty.

A balance of nearly $10,000 remains in the fund, and this, according to the by-law, $5,360, provided in this year's estimate, will boost the total to $15,000. This amount, the committee felt, is sufficient, unless a national emergency arises.

German Pocket Battleship Hit By Plane Torpedo

London, June 13 (CP)—The Air Ministry announced a German pocket battleship was hit by a torpedo from a British plane off the Norwegian coast last night.

The remaining two are the Admiral Scheer and the Lutzow, formerly the Deutschland.

The Air Ministry communique said that "dense clouds of white smoke arose from the battleship" but it did not identify by name and declared that later the ship was seen proceeding in a northerly point of Norway.

Earlier in the world, the battleship and escorting destroyers were reported to have left the Skagerrak at greatly reduced speed."

Cavalcade of Floats Viewed by Thousands

Thousands of Belleville citizens lined city streets and waited patiently for more than two and one hours to witness the largest community parade ever staged in this city of this province when the Provincial Victory Loan Parade was held on June 11 through the streets of Belleville early Friday afternoon headed by the R.C.A.F. Band of Trenton and the Toronto Manning Pool depot.

The parade, which was a reminder of the need of investment in the current Victory Loan Campaign, was a cavalcade proved a colorful spectacle, the floats forcibly bringing home the fact that Canada needs Canadians' cash. Made up of 40 trucks, decorated with flags and bunting, motorcycles, six other army units, including two mobile kitchens, and aimed units followed by a local contingent and a number of civic units to supplement the parade through Belleville streets. The cavalcade moved through various cities throughout Ontario and came to Belleville from Trenton via Highway No. 2 and following the local route of parade, Dundas street, Front, Bridge through and Lindsay.

Sponsored by Ontario Fruit Growers

The long line of floats, all of which are sponsored by well-known Ontario firms, arrived at the waiting entrance to the city at high noon and after a short delay were taken in conveyances to the Y.M.C.A. where a hot lunch was served and then conveyed by the local Victory Loan Campaign committee. Augmenting the floats and vehicles in parade, the Cavalcade, which boasted a 1½ mile length, paraded twice on Bleecker Avenue to Station Bonds.

Here was the parade proceeded over the upper bridge and left the city via Dundas street. The floats included in the local parade was a float entered by the Bank of Canada and one in Canada, Unit 201, Belleville, and one sponsored by the Associated Motors and Motor cars and members of the Ontario Motorcycle Patrol all added to the colorful procession.

Workers Disappointed

Despite the fact that workers were called upon to wait well over two hours before the parade got under sides when the colourful cavalcade finally appeared, it was only 15 minutes early at the noon hour to see the procession at the head of the parade, but the workers were disappointed and had to return to their jobs without the witnessing this descriptive spectacle. School children, as well as the rest of the procession, refused to return to school on June 12 but will be held over until Tuesday next.

The procession was lead by a patriotically-decorated motor car driven by Mayor Wm. Thompson, M.D. Arnott, M.P.P., and officials of the Belleville Victory Loan Committee. The cavalcade was seen and admired by thousands as it proceeded through and throughout the streets of Belleville in every residential area. Buy Victory Bonds.

Trading in Butter and Eggs Improves

Toronto—A stronger tone yesterday developed on the Toronto egg and produce market with egg receipts insufficient to cover requirements; butter trading improved.

Prices to shipper on graded eggs advanced 1 cent to 1 cent a dozen as small current supplies were not enough to satisfy continued good demand. Only the undergraded made headway in the retail division as the quality pullet "B" and "C" grades firming 1 cent a dozen.

Buyers returned to the butter market to take on supplies for immediate and future requirements and with offerings clearing better, the tendency was for higher prices. No. 1 grade Ontario creamery solids, however, remained at the previous level of 30 cents a pound.

Cheese Board

What is possibly the greatest number of cheese ever offered on the Belleville Cheese Board was sold at the regular board meeting on Thursday evening when a total of 5,296 boxes were offered for sale. The increase over the normal amount offered, however, was due to the fact that at the previous board meeting no cheese had been boarded and was manufactured after May 30th.

The Government's decision to increase the price of cheese manufactured during May, June and July with the enemy took action or permitted action effective during His Majesty's government's conduct of the war or engaged to assist the enemy's war effort, His Majesty's government would naturally hold themselves free to take such action wherever he might be found.

They have no desire that hostilities should be extended and should consequently suggest that it would be in the interest of both countries if Marshal Petain's government saw their way to instruct their forces in Syria to offer no opposition to measures which the Allied forces may take in order to prevent the enemy from using Syria as a base of operations against them.

SITUATION

From the schools of the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan, under the R.C.A.F., a constant flow of pilots, observers and gunners went to join the fighting air forces overseas.

Mr. King said 1,000 radio technicians had been sent to Britain and were invaluable "in the defence of the country on which we would follow."

Machines for war were being sent from Canada in growing volume and "we will continue to send all the free which able to carry it can be found."

Trains and Loans

Canadians were enjoying the heaviest taxes in their history and were raising their savings to the government, Mr. Ilsley said.

He was confident they would give whatever was necessary to maintain the financial resources of the government—Canada's first line of defence.

There remained also the strength of Britain's armed forces ready to endure any hardship for freedom.

There was an unshakeable purpose to establish and defend freedom more securely founded on social and international justice than before.

The strength of British and Canadian character was unbroken and unbreakable and against these sides of strength would beat in vain, Mr. King said.

Strengthen Morale of Poorly

Acting Opposition leader Grote Stirling said the Prime Minister's address would strengthen, if that were necessary, the morale of the people.

The way to victory was through the effort and sacrifice of the people, he said.

C.C.F. House Leader Coldwell and New Democracy Leader Blackmore also spoke in approval.

ACTION IN SYRIA

through the British Embassy in Madrid.

The Vichy government that all German personnel and equipment, except for certain wounded and some damaged planes, had been removed from Syria.

The Foreign Office news department said the full text of a communication which it said had been delivered to Gen. Samuel Hoare, British Ambassador in Madrid, June 8:

Text of Note

"On instructions from his government, the French ambassador has the honor to communicate to His Majesty's ambassador, the following text of a note handed this morning by the Minister of Information for Foreign Affairs," to the United States ambassador at Vichy:

"The French government has just learned that a British aeroplane from the French high commissariat at Beirut, Syria, on a reconnaissance flight, was forced to land in Palestine territory. The aeroplane was met by British armored cars and infantry have come into contact with the post.

"Fighting is in progress.

"The Ministry of Foreign Affairs has the honor to request that the United States Embassy's attention to the fact that any British attack, which nothing in the present situation in Syria can explain, risks provoking the gravest consequences, as the Embassy already is aware the French government is determined to defend its territory and possessions wherever they may be attacked and with all means at its disposal.

"Every measure is being taken accordingly to this effect in Syria. Aware of the danger of the present situation, the French government will, for its part, avoid pending further information taking any action which might aggravate or spread the conflict.

"If the trouble is, in fact, extended, the French government will find itself obliged to assure by necessary measures the defense of territories under French sovereignty."

The Vichy note memorandum which Sir Samuel was directed to hand to the French ambassador at Madrid in reply said:

"His Majesty's government in the United Kingdom have had the honor to receive the communication which the United States embassy has handed to His Majesty's Ambassador at Vichy.

"His Majesty's government will not enter into a discussion or argument with Marshal Petain's government on the subject of the bombing of the word 'collaboration' has been abused in recent months and more especially since it has not been clearly defined in the communication under reference.

Based on Facts

"His Majesty's Government have based their action in Syria on the facts of the case as known to them and not on theoretical considerations, and this has been made clear in their public statement on the subject issued on June 8th.

"His Majesty's Government would recall that it has been the principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs stated in the House of Commons on May 22 that if the Vichy government in pursuance of their declared policy of collaboration with the enemy took action or permitted action detrimental to His Majesty's government's conduct of the war or engaged to assist the enemy's war effort, His Majesty's government would naturally hold themselves free to take such action wherever he might be found.

"Responsibility for the consequences of assistance which French authorities in Syria were instructed to render to enemies of His Majesty's government rests therefore with Marshal Petain's government.

No Territorial Designs

"His Majesty's governments are happy to note that Marshal Petain's government will avoid taking any action likely to aggravate or spread the conflict. They have no desire that hostilities should be extended and should consequently suggest that it would be in the interest of both countries if Marshal Petain's government saw their way to instruct their forces in Syria to offer no opposition to measures which the Allied forces may take in order to prevent the enemy from using Syria as a base of operations against them.

"His Majesty's governments take this opportunity to repeat that they have no territorial designs in Syria or anywhere else in the overseas possessions and it is their intention that Syria be won to the store he independence and greatness of France".

Tribune Says Sinking Of Robin Moor "Act Of Piracy and Murder"

New York, June 13 (CP) — The New York Tribune today commenting upon the torpedoing of the United States freighter Robin Moor, said editorially today:

"The Robin Moor was sunk without warning. It was a flagrant act of piracy and murder."

"No concept of international law could justify it," it added. "It cannot be forced upon civilized mankind even by a nation which pretends to regularize the atrocity by formal declaration of war."

"If this country, awake to the deepest implications of its own national security, acts to clear the sea lanes on which it depends, it will regard them an outrage of this sort precisely as it would any more piratical action—if any more were needed —for whatever flag it comes across."

The Times declared: "Hitler inferred in his Reichstag speech that the United States, like Britain, would be overborne."

The Daily News, outspoken in its opposition to United States entry into the war, remarked:

"Hitler said he remembers the other war in any detail, the Robin Moor case gives that a point. It passed this way without leaving a step by step, we seem to be repeating. If only we had learned from history into war April 6."

ON THE RECORD

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

Copperheads and Copperheads

New York, June 13.—There are anti-labor forces in the country who are willingly risking the war effort because they think that the country is sick of labor and that the fear of Communist inspired is certain. But the opposition to labor cannot be long driven as by the American need forces is one to rejoice the heart, is not a contribution to American morale, and is a wonderful contribution to Hitler's ideological propaganda. He will certainly make the most of it.

These Communist-inspired strikes are political, not economic. True, some workers follow the Communist leaders because of promises to obtain for them economic gains. But the leaders, and at least part of their followers, are not after a definite desire and intention to sabotage the defense effort.

For instance, one of the chief bones of contention in the C.I.O., between the adherents of Philip Murray and the supporters of the Communist-led group at the American Peace Mobilization, which is a Communist front, is the latter's opposing the President's policy. Actually, adherence to this organization is regarded in the unions as a declaration of support of the position is affected by the Communist Party line, and all the Leftwing unions of the C.I.O. have endorsed it.

Now, the Communist line regarding the American policy is no secret. It is that the President is "dragging this country into the war"; that this is "a capitalist imperialist war"; that "the United States is in no danger"; that "the state of national emergency is only a means of suppressing American freedom," and that "the country needs new leadership."

On these lines, the workers are hearing from Communist leaders exactly the same line of talk that they are hearing from Senator Wheeler and Mr. Lindbergh.

Now, it is quite conceivable that if Senator Wheeler and Mr. Lindbergh could succeed in creating enough nation-wide hook-ups and from Washington, New York, Boston and Rotterdam and Boulogne also were to broadcast the sinking of every aircraft attacked docks at Dundee and Belfast, Hitler would be in a position to say to his workers that the country is sick of war, that the American people are not ready to fight, that they are split by class and that the country needs new leadership.

Nor has he satisfactorily explained to his followers that the country needs a change in leadership. Such explanations as the Chicago Baltimore Sun said that the reference applied to the leadership of the international labor movement has been following in recent months a policy of increasing hostility to the United States in the President, whose leadership and firmness of the war as a direct menace to this country, and whose policies are those to which the British fall have been made as clear as anything can be.

Furthermore, there is no question but that the bulk of the labor movement in this country is behind Mr. Lindbergh—the whole kit and kaboodle of them.

Now, let us compare the way in which the Communists and the Communist workers who try to sabotage the defense effort, and the way it treats the largely middle class pro-Hitler forces try to sabotage the defense effort.

The Republican Herald has telegraphed to the local trade boards and instructed them to "reconsider the classification of all registrants for the draft who have ceased to be gainfully employed which they were deferred." That is the way to deal with those who sabotage of the defense effort will be dealt with in America.

As a citizen of the United States I do not like to see the Communist Party it is that when Mr. Lindbergh and Senator Wheeler of the United States Army, went out to speak to the American people, they were hooted and was rebuked by the President, the resigned from the army and the President, accepted his resignation, and conferred him to continue his agitation.

The President called him a "Copperhead" and the term is deeply hated none, and immediately numbers of the Democrats began wearing badges with the inscription "I Am a Copperhead."

But, you see, there are Copperheads on both sides of the fence. The Communists in the big industries and in the politics are pro-Hitler. The Copperheads in the trade unions are pro-Stalin.

And it would be very bad for this country if the great majority of the people, who are workers, and who are Americans first and pro-Stalin, should get the idea that the Communists are being persecuted and released from civic discipline, and if you are pro-Stalin you are apt to get shot or

The attack was the heaviest carried out in a single night in this industrial area and a great blow to the Nazi war machine, said the Air Ministry's communique.

Bomber Command was attacking the smoky Ruhr, places of the coastal Command attacked docks at Brest, France, and another, Belgium, and also targets in Northern France, the communique added.

One plane failed to return.

The Air Ministry also admitted that the R.A.F. flew over Western Germany last night and another last night and dropped bombs at various points.

During Wednesday night and early Thursday, Duisberg and Dusseldorf were bombed heavily by British bombers.

Strikes at Axis Convoy

In daylight yesterday Blenheim bombers with fighter escort swept across the English Channel several times and struck hard at the convoy along the Nazi-occupied French coast, and continental objectives.

Watchers on the cliffs of England witnessed the convoy attack during which a 1,400-ton ship received a direct hit and was left a sinking condition. An enemy trawler was sunk and two more British planes returned safely.

Raiding Germany's Ruhr, 100 machines streaked across the Channel in waves and pounded at the French coast. Docks at Rotterdam and Boulogne also were attacked. The Germans said aircraft attacked docks at Ijmuiden in the Netherlands and at Le Panne, Belgium.

Victory Loan Rally Held at Tweed

Tweed (Special) — A largely attended and enthusiastic meeting in connection with the Victory Loan campaign was held at Tweed Memorial Park on Wednesday evening with Dr. W. A. Paul, local chairman in charge. A parade formed at the new bridge composed of the 562nd Battalion of the R. C. A. M. C. Regiment under the command of Major Newell Broad, the local veterans and children from the Separate and Consolidated Schools and marched to the park.

An interesting program had been arranged in which music by the Belleville Municipal Band under the direction of Bandmaster Ellis featured. Community singing was conducted by James Sealock of Belleville, who also contributed a vocal solo "The Laddies Who Fought and Won." Mr. Alex Corbett played the accompaniments for the program.

In welcoming the crowd Dr. Paul said that the present was the time their interest in the campaign. He regretted that there was not a more encouraging report of the local campaign in which to date only $27,000 of the quota of $130,000 had been subscribed. He felt confident that Tweed, Hungerford and Thurlow would measure up to the rest of the Dominion and reach their objective.

Pte. R. E. Welsh M.P.P. introduced the chief speaker, Dr. James Semple of Belleville, stating that the names of Tweed and Hungerford were familiar names in the Motherland. The time has come to put away fancy phrases and get down to cold actualities, he said. Joyed a picnic supper at the close of the interesting meeting.

Derringer, Despite Poor Hitting Support, Proves He's One of the Craftiest Hurlers in Business

Pitches Four-Hit Ball to Nurse One Run Secured by the Reds

GIANTS STOP CUBS

By JUDSON BAILEY

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

A lot of tears have been shed this season over the failure of big Paul Derringer to dominate in the National League pitching scene as he did in leading Cincinnati Reds to two pennants and a world championship.

The Duke, at 32, is a year older than last year, a little fatter and a little slower. However, he showed how tough he can be yesterday by pitching four-hit ball to beat Boston Braves 1-0. The Reds made only five singles themselves off young Art Johnson, a southpaw, but they managed to link two of them with a walk for a run in the first inning.

It was Paul's second straight victory, coming on top of his 3-2 triumph over the then league-leading Brooklyn Dodgers last Sunday, and helped take some of the disappointment out of the five times he himself had been beaten by one run this spring.

The day's only other National League game also was an all-tight pitching spectacle between Carl Hubbell and Bill Lee with New York Giants stopping Chicago Cubs 2-0. Lee allowed six hits to Hubbell's eight, but gave a run in the first inning on two singles, a walk and a fly, and the errors brought another in the fourth.

Giants Ahead by Little

Although the leaders were tied yesterday, a break in the percentages lifted the Giants into third place ahead of the Cubs, .519 to .500.

In the American League Boston Red Sox divided a doubleheader with the St. Louis Browns in odd affairs. The Sox scored four runs in the first inning of the first game and three were good enough for the next eight frames by the impressive relief trick of Jack Wilson. The Browns tallied five times in the latter half of the first inning and won 9-4.

The Red Sox were held to six hits in the second game while the Browns made seven, but Boston triumphed 2-0 on Ted Williams' two-run homer.

Philadelphia Athletics took a nip-and-tuck struggle from Detroit Tigers 5-3 on Al Brancato's three-run circuit clout in the ninth inning after Pat Mullin had hit with a mate aboard for Detroit in the seventh.

Red Sigh Old Time

What with John Duncan Rigney withdrawing his request for draft deferment, Joe Gonsalgo hitting his 12th homer of the season and running his hitting streak to 26 straight games, and Manager Jimmy Dykes of the gas filling station, the New York Yankees and Chicago White Sox had a high old time of it last night.

The Yankees finally won in the 19th, 3-2, on Dimaggio's four-base get. But Dykes announced in the ninth inning that Chicago knows that a spectator reached out and touched a ball hit by Red Ruffing and that cost Ted Lyons a home run. Hoag's fielding. The Ruffing hit went for two bases and brought in the tying Yankee run.

WRITER PREDICTS LOUIS TO KO CONN IN THREE ROUNDS

If Fight Goes Longer on Wednesday Night, Conn Will be Plain Lucky He States

BOMBER IS READY

By GAYLE TALBOT

(Associated Press Sport Writer)

New York, June 13—(AP)—Joe Louis will knock out Billy Conn in about three rounds next Wednesday at the Polo Grounds. If it goes longer than that, Billy will be just plain lucky.

This is said after a personal tour of inspection of the champion's training camp at Greenwood Lake just up the Hudson, where the Negro is getting ready to defend his championship.

Louis has been considerable talk about Louis being worn out by his strenuous spring campaign during which he has fought more often than usual.

There is nothing to it, folks. There is nothing Joe Louis lacks to make him a great fighter, yesterday I saw that he was a much better boxer than Billy Conn. Against four sparring partners, Lou Nova, Abe Simon, Tami Mauriello and Conn, he picked off their punches with his right glove, a flick at a time, and then tore them to shreds.

What makes it worse for Conn, a mere light-heavyweight trying to fight a big man, is that Joe is not feeling friendly about this match. Joe told the papers, and he has noted that Conn repeatedly has referred to him as a "dumb Negro" and an "old man."

If he has lost some of his punch, as Conn and his manager, Johnny Ray, seem to think, there is no indication of it.

"I never hit harder as ever," Joe said. "Least I feel as hard as ever. If they worried because I knocked the bejabbers out with one punch, what they want to do to me now? What I do with him before I got through? Look at him some time."

Commander Says Greenberg Making A Fine Soldier

With the Army in Tennessee, June 13—(AP)—A tall, slant-shouldered guy shuffled up to the cook shack, the line a line of 52 soldiers waiting for noon mess.

Another teen-age Army Recruits or Maine could have told you who he was—Henry Greenberg, the home-run clouter—by the way he towered over nobody, by the shuffling flat-footed walk, his prominently aged eyes, the doleful way he knitted his eyebrows.

Greenberg, late of the Detroit American League baseball team and the most publicized selectee taken into the United States army last month, is trying to throw off his fame and become just one of the boys here where 55,000 soldiers are undergoing the war games of the second army.

"I like the army fine, but a rifle is a lot different than a baseball bat," Hank grinned, shuffling unsteadily under the big mess kit, "I don't know whether I've gained any weight or not, but I'm working hard."

Greenberg is making a swell soldier," said Capt. Glenn Sides, commander of the Anti-Tank Company of the 2nd Infantry. "He started out as part of a water detail, getting water to fill the canteens. Now he uses a Garand shoulder rifle as part of the protection around our anti-tank platoon." He keeps pretty well he's put on the crew of a 37 MM. anti-tank gun battery, ammunition."

In this outfit, Greenberg is not bothered by the partially flat feet that almost kept him out of the army. He rides wherever he goes

ROYALS KNOCKED FROM 2ND PLACE BY JERSEY CITY

Montreal Shutout 5-0 While Red Wings Did Not Play

BISONS BEAT BEARS

(By The Associated Press)

Jersey City Giants, who win or lose games in bunches, have been getting some remarkable pitching lately and as a result have returned to the cellar position in the International Baseball League chase.

Rookie Ken Raffensberger put them three yesterday by tossing a three-hitter to shut out Montreal 5-0 for the Little Giants' fifth victory in their last six games.

It was Rube who ended the J's last losing string Sunday, when he turned back Newark Bears. Sidney Fischer's Sunday triumph the Giants find enough right at nine starts.

The Jersey victory shuffled the standings to the extent of knocking Montreal from second place, Rochester's champs, the Red Wings took over the runner-up spot without hitting a finger as the Montreal-at-Syracuse was postponed through threatening rain.

The idle Wings got a double benefit from Red Ruffing's 3-2 victory Bisons edged the league-leading Newark Bears 2-1. The Bruins' margin thus was cut to a game and a half.

A home run by Mike Rocco with two out in the ninth broke a tie which had existed since the third inning and gave Earl Cook a pitching verdict over Jerky Russ Christopher.

BOYS GET READY TO ATTEND CAMP

Work Party From "Y" Will Visit the Camp This Weekend

Preliminaries to the opening of the Belleville Boys' Camp at Moira Lake two weeks hence get underway over the week-end when a work party from the Y.M.C.A. will journey to the camp site at Moira Lake and commence the necessary arrangements in checking camp equipment and installing the latrines, J. E. Shortt, Camp Director, announced today.

Registrations for the Belleville Boys' Camp this year are the most encouraging in many years, so much so that the registration may have to be limited. Officials of the camp officials are confronted with a host of problems in handling leaders. Program leader Ed. Shortt was informed this week that Pte. Mars Stichton, of the R.C.A. stationed at Petawawa Military Camp had procured his extended furlough and that the two weeks' leave he would return to assist in the direction of the camp as a leader. Rod Cameron, who has a world of experience, gained at Taylor Statler's Camp Alwell in Algonquin Park, has agreed to join the Belleville Boys' camp staff and will help improve a decided asset to the leadership program. Clark Gardner, the canoeist and swimmer, Johnny Harman, Bert Gardner and "Bugs" Denman all qualified leaders will also be in charge, while Alec Gordon is directing the camp's music and dramatics.

A new feature will be introduced by Program Chairman Ed Shortt in the camp's activities this year which will be frequented rainy days or evenings. A varied program of camp sports, educational features and movie films features will be included on the program for the camp that opens on June 30th this year. Registrations are now being accepted at the "Y".

"I've got a couple of dogs called Once and Twice," said the dog man.

When people say to them, "come here, dogs—" I say, "You've got to call him Once and the other one Twice."

Of course, I call them both once even if I've called them twice. Before I called them Once and Twice I called them To and Fro, but I didn't like those names so I called them what they are now.

You see, I named both of them twice, even if I named only one of them twice.

I don't have to call Twice twice—and—

There are both men and gals' softball games scheduled for this evening.

Do you remember when Jimmy Braddock jumped from the relief rolls to the world heavyweight boxing championship when he earned a 10-round decision over Tommy Mac Baer at New York six years ago tonight. Braddock let the late Joe Louis, the present champion.

Dick Bartell, who has played in the major leagues and now is with the Giants, says Bob Feller, the No. 1 pitcher in the American League, isn't to be compared with Johnny Dean or Carl Hubbell, while the latter two were in their prime. Of course that's a personal opinion, but it must be remembered that the National League caters to high class pitching while the Junior Circuit features slugging which speaks mighty highly of Feller's mound work.

Lionel Conacher, chairman of the Ontario Athletic Commission recently told the Globe and Mail Ralph Allen that the late George Vezina would not have been able to compete successfully against baseball pitchers like Lefty Grove and the late Charlie Gardiner under his old stand'by style. Connie told them that Vezina and Gardiner were the best he ever saw, when asked if he thought that Vezina would have had a tough time nowadays, and that they would have had to watch three or four pucks instead of one as they had to watch one in the old days. When a forward goes in on Vezina Connie forgets that "The old cucumber" (Vezina to the newspaper spirits) was the Canadiens in the middle 20's when goaltending was a much modified manner. We saw Vezina the height of his colorful career as a netminder and still this certainly is a healthy opinion for he was the cream of all the goaltenders' crop, admitting that "Hap" Holmes would still have the benefit of playing and starring for the Leafs in the N.H.L.

Ralph "High-pockets" McCabe, Belleville's present gift to professional baseball, pitched and won his first game for Easton in the Eastern Shore League last week according to press clippings received by his father, Herb McCabe, district game warden. Twice Ralph has been used by the Yankee farm team as a relief hurler and came through with flying colors, which should make the Easton skipper to give the Canadian a start. The kid cannot disappoint and not only won, but blanked his opponents, the score being 2 to 0. Canadians are rapidly being recognized in organized baseball in the United States. Isn't it really too bad there's no baseball in Belleville where the community might procure an early education in a game that pays handsome profits, if you make the grade?

The Wanner brothers combination has been broken up for the second time this year when Lloyd Wanner was traded to the Reds leaving behind Brother Paul at Boston. The Bevlin shortstop signed from Pittsburgh in a straight trade earlier in the season and later signed brother Paul who was a free agent. The Reds have been endeavoring to obtain some outfield strength all season and at least are pinning their hopes on the 6 foot 4-inch Lloyd Wanner to provide the necessary punch.

Honeymoon Gold

By PEGGY DERN

CHAPTER FIFTEEN

"I thought that maybe if we just had a little while we could get away from being young Mr. and Mrs. Brooks Marshander," moved always had the world on a string and a mortgage on the house. If we could get away from all the fuss and feathers and just be two young people on a honeymoon — well, we might find out a lot of things about each other that would make for something faintly approaching happiness."

Natalie was having trouble putting her thoughts into words, the chief trouble being that she must be so desperately careful not to let him see that she was pleading for a chance to win his love—that love he didn't believe existed.

Suddenly she looked up at Brooks and asked unexpectedly, "Do you look forward with much excitement to honeymooning in the Caribbean, the way we planned it?"

"My dear, as I've said before, I want whatever you want—"

"Oh, for heaven's sake — the fifth thread of Natalie's self-control snapped suddenly—"stop sounding so much like a bored husband, and give me a straight and sincere answer."

Brooks colored with anger and resentment. But after a moment he said, his tone cold, controlled, though the veins in his throat and the ridge of muscle along his jaw indicated that her taunt had struck home. "Then, my dear, since it's the unvarnished truth you want—the honeymoon we've planned will bore me!"

She took that as she would have taken a physical blow for which she had asked and which she had expected; on the chin, without flinching, staring a little sharp breath, her hands clenched hard at her sides. Then she nodded, a trifle pale beneath her make - up, and said quietly, "That's what I wanted to know. I'll let the same way about it. So—suppose we trade honeymoons with Johnny and Coralie?"

"What on earth are you talking about?" Brooks demanded, bewildered and still angry.

"If neither leave our car and my fancy clothes here for Coralie and Johnny," she explained eagerly, breathless and radiant again beneath the excitement of the plan that had grown in her mind during the empty sleepless hours of the night, "let's take their car and their baggage and go to Halcyon Island for a month. Then we'll get well, they can have our car and our hotel reservations—"

"You mean you want to masquerade as Coralie, the waste of the overall factory? Marie Antoinette and the milkmaids, eh?"

Natalie lifted her chin proudly. "That's a nasty crack," she told him hotly, "but it is what I want to do and I think it would be fun! We'd get clear away from newspaper reporters and people spying on us, and we could get well, have a chance to get acquainted. The sort of life we've both lived, and the way we've known each other, has been—oh, all cluttered up with non-essentials. And you don't know, you might even like me—" She set her teeth hard, for she had said more along that line than she had meant to say.

Brooks studied her for a long moment and then he nodded.

"I have to admit it sounds a bit screwy, but if you think it would help—"

"I'll mustn't be like that, Brooks," Natalie put in incongruously, her voice shaken a little, a look in her eyes that he had never seen before—a look that if he had not known her so well he might have called a pleading look. "Not just because I think it would be fun—but because you think so, too."

She drew a long, hard breath. Her hand rested on the table until it was a small, hard fist, and she said, her voice still shaken, "Don't say, Brooks! Try not to be—not you or me, but UH! It's what WE think, not what you think, or I. If we don't share things, then how can we ever find any happiness together?"

Brooks put out his hand and laid it over that small closed fist. "Sorry, darling," he said quietly. "Of course you're right, and I DO think it would be fun—grand fun. A real lark. But what about Johnny and Coralie? Have you told them?"

"Oh, no — I wouldn't until I thought maybe you'd go over to the hospital with me. We'll have to make our plans with Coralie. Johnny is still unconscious, and the doctor says it will be several days before he can have visitors."

Brooks nodded and signaled to the waiter for the check. Outside in the crisp golden sunlight they drove to the hospital, the handsome imported roadster creating considerable attention as they went.

BROOKS AND Natalie found Coralie wrapped in a peach-colored down de chine bed-jacket, her golden hair brushed back from her face, which was bloodless and unaccustomed wisp of faint pink.

She greeted them eagerly and happily; but as she listened to Natalie's stammering explanation-proposition, her eyes grew wider until they were enormous against the most to swallow her small, pointed face.

"You want to trade places with Johnny and me? Gee, you must be mista!" she said frankly.

Brooks chuckled and Natalie's heart gave a leap. For it was the first genuine expression of mirth she had heard from him since they had been married.

"Frankly, Coralie, I'm a little inclined to agree with you," he admitted, gently, "She's determined —and a little bit nuts—but she's a nice guy at that. And she's on the level. It's not a gag."

"You mean she ain't just takin' me for a ride?" demanded Coralie, turning to Brooks in frank relief.

"Of course I'm not taking you for a ride, Coralie—what kind of talk is that!" answered Natalie vigorously, her hand warning toward this girl who had, somehow, managed to charm Brooks out of that cold, wary attitude. "We've decided it would be fun not to have people snooping around and newspaper reporters watching. So we thought you'd get a kick out of touring the Caribbean ports and going through the canal to California—"

"Sure—you bet we would," answered Coralie eagerly. "But you said something about trading your car for ours. I don't know as I could do that, until Johnny's able to talk. I don't know much about trading cars, and I know Johnny thinks his jalopy's pretty pretty. What kind of a car is yours?"

Her eyes widened and she gulped when Natalie mentioned the year and the make. Brooks frowned for a heart her and said significantly, "It cost eight thousand dollars, Coralie. You and Johnny ought to be able to get four or five thousand for it, cash—enough to start Johnny out into a nice little business of his own."

Coralie stared from one to the other, then she made a little helpless gesture of bewilderment. "I don't get it," she said almost fretfully. "It sounds screwy to me. Why should you two want to do anything so crazy?"

"Don't try to figure it out, Coralie. I'll get an attorney to draw up the necessary papers and see to it that everything is all ship shape and completely legal," answered Brooks.

"Okay, mister. I know you're both on the level—you're such swell people—well, it just sounds plenty crazy to me," said Coralie at last.

"But a lot of fun on both sides, don't you think?" laughed Natalie, bending over her husband impulsively and kissing Coralie's cheek.

Betsy slid her supple young body into the crisp white sports frock, settled it about her slim hips, ran a comb through her dark curls and went down the stairs to where Tom waited for her.

"I know it sounds wacky," she admitted frankly. "But I think I'm scared."

"Scared? What's there to be scared of?" demanded Tom, grinning.

"Meeting a lot of strange people and getting to it that they are cheerful and satisfied and comfortable," said Betsy. "It's not that I'm worried about the honeymooners. It's just that I'm scared maybe I won't get things my SIE would have wanted."

Tom nodded and there was a shadow on his lean face, now sunburned to the color of old leather.

"I know. I feel that way, too," he admitted. "Poor old fellow. What a rotten way to have to go — shot down by a common thief."

Betsy hesitated a moment. Then she said, almost hurriedly, as though afraid of what she was saying, "Tom, did you ever stop to think—maybe it wasn't just a common burglary? Maybe there was something more behind it."

"Do you mean he might have been murdered?" Tom's tone was gone soothing, "but who in the world would want to murder a man like Mr. Marshander? I don't believe he had an enemy in the world. No, it just had to be burglary. He must have fallen asleep in his chair, as Burton said he sometimes did, and the burglar awoke him when he forced his way in through that French door—remember it was open on the French door had been broken, and Mr. Marshander must have, facing it. The burglar was armed, of course—and shot him to prevent an outcry."

Betsy nodded, yielding, but not convinced.

"I know. That's the way the police figured it out and everybody's agreed," she said. "Only somehow I just can't feel that's how it happened. Maybe it's my woman's intuition, or something. But I feel there was more behind it than just a burglary."

They had come out of the house now and were in the patio. Tom looked down at the small pier and, startled, said, "Why, there's the boat now. Our guests are early."

Betsy shaded her eyes with her hand and shook her head.

"That's not our boat," she reminded him. "Besides, there's only one passenger."

The man had stepped out of the speedboat now and was coming up the path that led over the shoulder of the dune and up to his house. He was a tall man, with wide shoulders, good, grief, it's that Blake guy! I'm going to have him in my hair the rest of my life!"

"Funny he can't take a two-letter word meaning 'no' for an answer, eh, Tommy?" said Betsy, and grinned at him a little.

"Hello," said Blake, cheerfully, when they came within hearing of their voices. "I thought I'd like another chance to talk over before the newspapermen descend upon you. Not to change my mind, but the magnificent possibilities of this island on a bunch that won't be able to appreciate it."

"You may be right," said Tom politely, "But I'm afraid Mr. Marshan's will doesn't leave us any other way."

"I feel sure, Forman, that we can make adjustments if you'll only see it my way," pleaded Blake persuasively. "If you'll turn over to me the 51 per cent of stock in the Island Development company that you inherited from Mr. Marshan, I'll undertake to see to it that the terms of the will are complied with."

"I wouldn't think of it, Mr. Blake," answered Tom curtly.

Blake's face flushed with anger. Betsy shivered a little at the look in his eyes, though when he spoke after a moment his voice was calm. "I think you're making a mistake, Forman. I'm prepared to make you a neat offer for that stock—"

"It's not for sale," said Tom. "I intend to follow Mr. Marshander's will to the letter, as well as the spirit."

Blake was silent for a moment. Then he shrugged lightly and said, "Okay, Forman, if that's the way you want it, though I hope you won't live to regret it."

"If I am, I promise not to hold you responsible," Tom assured him. As he saw a boat making for the pier, he asked briskly, "And now if you will excuse us, my wife and I have some guests to meet."

DAMASCUS EXPECTED TO CAPITULATE TO ALLIES

NAZI BATTLESHIPS AT BREST AGAIN ATTACKED

French Troop Abandon Kissoue Making Road Clear

British and Free French Held up There for Several Days by French Resistance

IRAQ COLUMN ADVANCES

London, June 14—(CP)—Authoritative sources announced today that Vichy troops had abandoned the Syrian town of Kissoue and had fallen back to new positions only a few miles from Damascus.

Kissoue is ten miles south of Damascus, and British and Free French forces advancing on the Syrian capital fled been held up there for several days by French resistance.

In the central sector west of Kissoue, these sources said, the Allied forces overcame hold French troops, closely supported by the Royal Air Force, are in Sasa, 15 miles from transport north of Merdjayoun. Nearer the coast, the Allies encountered "some opposition" near Merdjayoun.

Earlier, informed Britons predicted that Damascus would fall to Allied forces within a matter of hours.

They were unable to confirm broadcast reports that new negotiations had been undertaken in an effort to effect capitulation of the city without further fighting.

Parley Instituted Says Report

Unconfirmed reports from Jerusalem today indicated the defenders intended to capitulate in an open city to spare its 300,000 residents the dangers of a siege. The British Broadcasting Corporation said last night that there was a report from Cairo that Major-General French and Vichy leaders in Damascus had instituted a parley for the city's surrender.

The Palestine Broadcasting system said last night that the Allied forces advancing Damascus had been subjected to heavy artillery fire from within the city's defences but that there had been no aerial bombardment.

Although official confirmation was lacking on the Vichy claim that Allied forces had been driven from the outskirts of Sidon, 25 miles south of Beirut, capital of Lebanon, military circles here said Mediterranean ports have come to a "temporary halt."

Canadian Sergeant Sent Aerial Torpedo Into Nazi Battleship

London, June 14 (CP Cable)—The navigator aboard the Beaufort aircraft which yesterday sent an aerial torpedo into a German pocket battleship off Norway, was Sergeant Alec A. Morris, 23, of Saskatchewan, it was learned today.

The warship, a sistership of the scuttled Admiral Graf Spee, was believed to have been badly damaged.

The long-range Beaufort swept low across the fjords of one of five screening Nazi destroyers to ram down the explosive sandships as the German squadron headed northward apparently on a raid-ing foray. A second torpedo quickly followed.

"Dense clouds of white smoke rose from the vessel," the Air Ministry said. Later the battleship was observed stationary and still later retiring southward at reduced speed, as if trying to reach a home port.

How Englishman Won His Medal

London, June 14.— (CP)—Here's how Harry Sweetland, 36, a garage proprietor, won his King George VI medal for bravery:

After picking up a bomb victim and starting toward an ambulance, a second bomb fell close by, slightly injuring the injured man, only telephone wires 30 feet above the street.

Their weight sagged the ambulance until Sweetland could drop to the street, continue to the ambulance, then escort the injured.

After that he collapsed.

NEW WEAPON INVENTED

London, June 14.—(CP)—A junior officer of a specialist corps was reported by customs telegraph today to have invented a "deadly and inhuman" weapon which "high officers" are hopeful "may prove the answer to the German Panzer (armored) division."

The weapon was described as "almost childishly simple" in operation. No hint was given as to its nature, there was no official comment on the report.

INCREASE PENETRATION

Cairo, June 14.—(CP)—Both the British and Free French forces in Syria "have substantially increased the depth of their penetration," the British Middle East High Command announced today.

German Officers in Internment Camps Refuse Swastikas on Uniforms

Somewhere in Ontario, June 14 (CP)—Lieut.-Colonel Hubert Stethem, director of Internment camps for Canada, told a group of visiting United States newspaper women last night that German officers, who generally have given the most trouble in their camps, refuse even to wear an internment outfit bearing the Nazi Swastika.

Soldiers he said, are allowed to keep their uniforms but officers must buy theirs. The authorities provide an internment outfit of blue denim with a red circle blown in the back, but officers don't want a red stripe down the pant leg.

Many officers have refused to wear the uniform. The Canadian authorities offered to mark the shirt with a white circle with a black Swastika but the officers still refused.

Col. Stethem said that they have to be constantly on guard to prevent escapes as clothing is one way of escape is the prisoner's favorite pastime. Tunnelling is a favorite way of trying to get out. There is a collection of home-made saws and files taken away from prisoners and two boats were discovered being built in prisoners under the floor in one camp.

Many Dollars Sent

"Many thousands of dollars" and large numbers of packages for prisoners are coming from German sympathisers and such organizations as the German-American Bund in the United States, Col. Stethem told the newspaperwomen. No individual prisoner is allowed to receive the money sent to him in cash. It is placed to his credit and he can charge against it and buy canteen tickets.

Exhibits picked up in camps were shown to the visitors to demonstrate how prisoners smuggle messages out and to show their knowledge of the North American geography. Col. Stethem said escaped prisoners who have been recaptured had possessed detailed maps of sections of Canada and the States of Maine, New York and Vermont.

Officers Quieting Down

Col. Stethem said officers have given the most trouble because of their "ingrained arrogant attitude". They are quieting down, though. There are few combat prisoners under the age of 20, he said, as many boys who are young and "more Nazi than the others."

The prisoners show no appreciation of kindness, for they still have their Nazi youth-training strong in their minds. Their attitude towards loyalty is: "This is war." That attitude is more noticeable among the younger men than the older ones. Virile religious feeling has shown in the camps.

BRITISH BOMBERS LASH RUHR VALLEY FOR THIRD TIME

Port of Brest, Where Nazi Battleships Are Berthed, Given Terrific Pounding

CALAIS ATTACKED

London, June 14 (CP)—Strong bomber units of the Royal Air Force streaked out to bombed berths in German battleship Scharnhorst and Gneisenau and a 10,000-ton Nazi cruiser with many high explosives last night, the Air Ministry said today and struck again at the Ruhr valley industries.

"Heavy bombs," it said, "were seen to burst in the (Brest) dock area and to straddle the berths of all three ships."

The cruiser was identified as a Nazi pocket battleship. Unofficial sources have expressed belief she is the Prinz Eugen, sister of the battleship Bismarck which was sunk in the Atlantic May 27.

Raid Indefatigable

"A heavy attack," the Air Ministry said, "was made on the industrial district of Scherrte and Bottrop (northwest of Essen) as well as the third successive night the R.A.F. has bombed the Ruhr."

Calais, fortified aircraft attacked and also shipping in the English Channel and bombed a British aerodrome.

In another phase of the far-flung aerial war, it was authoritatively announced, in London that an American-owned Portuguese steamer with United States-built Tomahawk fighter planes aboard had escaped interpretation" of the Near Eastern situation said British reports do not accept as Axis forces had been encountered in Syria and Lebanon and that the Vichy government "has repeatedly affirmed, over and over again, that our armies were ordered to resist the defence of the territories placed under French protection."

U.S. Accuses Vichy Gov't Of Being Induced to Do 'Nazi Fighting in Syria'

Washington, June 13 —(AP)— A fresh and stinging United States accusation that France had been induced "to do German fighting" in Syria raised the possibility today that the government soon might back up with action its warnings to Vichy against close collaboration with Berlin.

The first and most immediate likelihood, in the opinion of official authorities, was that the Vichy government might be refused further funds from the United States's $1,500,000,000 in French assets frozen in the United States.

Another possible course of action over which there has been much speculation is that the United States eventually might break off diplomatic relations with the Vichy regime, clearing the way for recognition of the Free French movement of Gen. Charles de Gaulle, leader of forces Allied with Britain.

The entire question of Washington-Vichy relations was given new emphasis last night by State Secretary Hull who said in a statement that "Germany seems to have prevailed on the Vichy government to do German fighting in the Near Syria area of the general German offensive."

Further Hull charged that "the original scheme of the Darlan-Laval group to deliver France politically, economically, militarily and militarily to Hitler seems now to have been brought out into the open in a series of public statements and especially those by Messrs. Laval (former vice-premier of France) and Darlan (present vice-premier)."

Vichy Ambassador Surprised.

A few hours later the Vichy ambassador, Gaston Henry-Haye, expressed to reporters his "surprised disappointment" at what he called "interpretation" of the Near Eastern situation. Hull's statement, he asserted no Axis forces had been encountered in Syria and Lebanon and that the Vichy government "has repeatedly affirmed, over and over again, that our armies were ordered to resist the defence of the territories placed under French protection."

A decision to cut the Vichy government off from the funds tied up in the United States it was said, would be a drastic warning against Vichy-Nazi collaboration which threatens American interests of the United States.

The flow of approximately 40,000,000 to 41,500,000 monthly now are being released to provide supplies for various French colonies and to pay diplomatic expenses in the Americas and Far East.

The Hull statement was the strongest United States declaration to date on the French situation.

The United States, it said, has "a fundamental interest in the people of France in preventing France and Germany from becoming "co-belligerents in his (Hitler's) desperate effort to conquer Great Britain and secure control of the high seas".

Next use of Syria, Hull declared, is "a right possessed by each of the general plan of Hitler's to invade Africa, Egypt, Palestine, Iraq and Africa."

Preferred No Objection

Vichy offered "no objection, much less resistance" when Germany recently wished to use Syrian bases to attack British forces in Iraq, the statement said, but instead Germany "to extend the theatre of hostilities to Syria" against Syria's wishes."

But when Allied forces entered, Hull declared, the Vichy government "considered it necessary to contest bitterly this British effort to prevent Syria from being used as a German base."

The Hull statement was forecast Saturday Monday when he carefully told Henry-Haye that Vichy military collaboration with Nazi forces in Syria would be regarded here as evidence of a change in Vichy's position in view of Vichy's earlier assurances that it would not permit Syrian bases.

President Roosevelt last month declared the least which could be expected of "a France which desires to remain free" is that Germany would be adherence to Marshal Petain's promise that the Vichy government would not go beyond the terms of her armistice pact.

BRITAIN'S HOME DEFENCES SHOOT DOWN 7 PLANES

Observers Regard Feat As Remarkable in View of Small Scale Of Raids

LITTLE RAID DAMAGE

London, June 14.— (CP)—British aim's home defences were credited today with shooting down at least seven Nazi planes over Britain in the night, a score observers regarded as remarkable in view of the small scale of the raids.

Those sources recalled that last fall, when as many as 500 Nazi planes soared over the British Isles in a single night, the Royal Air Force's favorable 1 to 3 ratio of losses was reversed.

Only last night the Labor Minister, Ernest Bevin, said in an address at Leicester that "the day is not far distant when you will be equally safe at night in your beds as you are in daytime".

The Air Ministry announced that night fighters shot down three of 10 night raiders.

Places of one raider were found scattered over an area of four miles. The bodies of the crew were some scraps of uniform.

An additional Nazi fighter was shot down over the English Channel that morning by an R.A.F. fighter patrol.

Matsuoka Assures Mussolini Japan Stands by Pact

Says Japan Will Not Remain Indifferent In Face of American Aggression

NOT TO BE BROKEN

Rome, June 14 (AP)—Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka has telegraphed Mussolini endorsing his declaration that Japan "would not remain indifferent in the face of American aggression against the Axis," it was announced today.

Matsuoka's message, delivered to the Italian ambassador at Tokyo, referred to Mussolini's speech of June 10 before the Chamber of Fasces and Guilds on the first anniversary of Italy's entry into the war.

"I share completely Il Duce's viewpoint insofar as Italian-Japanese relations are concerned and there can be no greater honor for me than to state that my thoughts have been understood and strengthened during my recent visit," Matsuoka's statement said.

"It is superfluous to add that the whole Japanese people, without any doubt, share my feeling, especially after they heard Il Duce's words at the end and read the text of his words published in the papers."

An additional Nazi fighter was shot down over the English Channel that morning by an R.A.F. fighter patrol.

School Closings Set for June 27

Over 3,000 children of Belleville's separate, public and secondary schools will put their text books away for the summer vacation on June 27th. Belleville public schools will release 2,100 youngsters at four o'clock that day, save for those magnificent few who have been recommended and will be writing entrance examinations the last week in June.

The same practice applies to St. Michael's Academy, where upwards of 400 pent-up youthfuls will be released to give vent to their feelings of freedom from school for over two full months.

At the Belleville Collegiate Institute and Vocational School the students in the higher grades have left their classrooms upon recommendation and many have procured war and farm work in conjunction with the appeal made by the Department of Education of the Province of Ontario. Within the next ten days, however, the remainder of the 350 pupil at the B.C.I. and V.S. will have completed their year's school work.

The peak registrations of the various schools in Belleville as provided by the Secretary of the Board of Education's Office reads as follows:

Belleville Collegiate, 855; Queen Alexandra, 469; King George, 373; Queen Mary, 385; Queen Victoria, 475; St. Michael's, 453.

The pupils at the Ontario School for the Deaf will return to their respective homes following the June 20th, while the students at Albert College leave their studies next week also.

VICTORY LOAN Highlights

One person in every twenty-six has purchased a bond in Hastings County. This may sound rather high but actually it is well below the average for the province. Ontario has now an average of one in ten.

In the last Victory Loan of 1919 one person in twelve purchased in Hastings County. There is only one week to go before the books are closed, so let's rally around the cause.

The 1941 Victory Loan, with its favorable price and maturity, is the highest type of investment procurable.

Belleville Boy Now Flying Officer In R. A. F., Relates His Experiences While Acting as Pilot of Bomber

FO. Arthur Clement Sargent Spends a Short Time at Home of Parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richad Sargent, Highland Avenue

PLENTY OF ACTION

High over the Bavarian Alps flew the grandson of Wellington bombers.

In perfect formation the British pilot headed for their objective, a Messerschmitt factory deep in the interior of Germany.

At twelve thousand feet they roared above the cloudy levels, young, eager, ready for the adventure that lay ahead of them.

But Nature's anti-aircraft defences were destined to take part in the raid. In the distance loomed black thunder-clouds, jagged lightning flashed and tipped through the sky as the planes soared high above the countryside.

At the controls of one of the bombers was a young Canadian Flying Officer, Arthur Clement Sargent, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Sargent of 4½ Highland Avenue, Belleville. In command of the latter flying ship he had a crew of five with him, assistant pilot, gunners, navigator and radio operator.

He was an awe-inspiring picture. Flying Officer Sargent, who recently graduated in Canada after being in England since Royal Air Force since 1939, said today. Seated in his home, glimpsing the glorious green colors of Canada for the first time in many months, the youthful veteran of a host of dangerous raids gave a brief story of some of his adventures.

"The lightning whirled around the propellers of my engines, like the St. Elmo's fire of old days," he said. "It leaped from one engine to the other and back again. Shells were bursting away from our base, and our target was yet far away."

Ice Forms on Wings

But the lightning was but the minor of the defences that was met with. Flying at the altitude, it was inevitable that ice would form. It formed in drop by drop on the wings, and had to be handle, and we were forced to drop a thousand feet at last. At that the fact that we had de-icing equipment probably saved us from crashing."

Flying Officer Sargent, has flown over Germany, enemy ports, the Dutch coast and other enemy territory, but when he knows his mettle was best, He took part in the first raid over Berlin, and was one Canadian who can look back with the satisfaction of seeing his shells explode on the objective and sticks of bombs drop from his plane as high up in the air. "It was a long journey," he said, "and with an anti-aircraft defence of enemy aircraft the calls it flak) until we reached the outskirts of the city. In that first raid there were no anti-aircraft defences in Berlin proper. The Germans did not believe we could fly that far."

Then the thrills of night-flying, he said, is to see an anti-aircraft battery's guns flash far below. "One knows that they are firing at him," he said, "but still has plenty of seconds in which to do something."

His was the distinction of having flown the German cruisers Gneisenau and Scharnhorst bottled up during dur-ing the Norwegian campaign. His squadron was one of the few which actually kept tabs on ships in a state of disrepair since they were transferred from the Kiel canal to the Scandinavian fiords. "It must have made the Nazis mad."

Much action last September During the crisis in September last year, Flying Officer Sargent was almost continually in the air. "The fighter boys did the trick over Britain's shores, but we had our part in the 'invasion' ports. We got no more than three hours' sleep each night and were in the air nearly all of the time," he said.

Under terrific tension and strain, the British pilot practically knew when they were sleeping, he said. "I recall one night, or morning, when I was flying all night and came in dog-tired. I flung myself on my bunk and was immediately asleep. I dreamed I was back at the controls, the ship was flying terrifically and it was all I could do to keep my balance. Some three hours later I related my dream to a fellow pilot who occupied the same sleeping quarters. He looked at me and grinned. 'Dream, nothing,' he laughed, 'look outside.' I did. There were raging bombholes. The rocking of my dream machine had been movements of the blast which narrowly missed it."

Over Rotterdam, Amsterdam, and other ports the young flyer has taken his bomber. "I guess they were lucky," he said, and as proof here is the fact that he has never brought down a Messerschmitt once when he was attacking from a raid, but as a rule the fighters fled as soon as they found us numerically superior."

"Modestly he refused to go into any detail of any of his exploits. He spoke of the almost perfect mechanisms behind the high skills for the detection of aircraft. Anti-aircraft fire was a problem of very great intricacy, he said, but only for the pilot. "It is something like driving a car. A fellow doesn't just read books and hear lectures, and then goes out to do what the other fellow does. He does it there when one is in action, some quick thinking has to be done and others is not time to recall what one has taught in textbooks."

Anti-aircraft fire is not nearly as dangerous as the short range defence, in his opinion. At a high altitude one has a good chance, but in the case of flights, travel bullets, searchlights go toward creating a situation that calls for the best of flying operations.

"And don't think when a battery of searchlights focuses you in their glares, and suddenly switches off you, that you are safe. They have merely relayed your altitude, range, and flying speed to others who are farther on."

The two weeks prior to leaving for Canada, Flying Officer Sargent flew one of the new British planes. He was in operations over Britain attacking large Condor bombers. He is enthusiastic about the new fighter planes, and stated they are much safer and more manoeuverable than the famous Spitfire.

They are heavily armored, and can take more punishment. They have practically equal altitude, range, and flying speed to others, he said, "but they are safer."

Captain Bankier Would Like Chance to Pay Back the Hun For the Sinking of His Ship

It was difficult to get much of an account of his recent experience sailing the seas, starting as a midshipman at the age of fifteen, in 1914, Captain Bankier served in a troopship till 1918, conveying Canadian troops to England. After the First Great War he returned to the merchant service, and served there till 1926, with the rank of Captain for the last twelve years.

When Great Britain, in future plans, the Scottish sea captain said that the members of the crew were already placed on other ships and that he would have no more seafaring together. Then he would be free to join the Royal Navy or the merchant marine.

It is said that no one loves a good joke on the Scotch as well as a Scotsman himself, and that love was proven yesterday, when, before leaving on a trip Captain Bankier mentioned the new Scottish National Anthem—"There'll Always Be a Scotland—And Nothing Shall Be Free."

Q. M. School Music Festival

Progress made by pupils of Queen Mary School in music during the past year was clearly demonstrated by the massed choir, directed by the teachers, in their annual music program on Friday afternoon in the school auditorium before parents and friends of the young performers and a large number of visitors and found afternoon's entertainment a most enjoyable variety and keen enjoyment. The stage setting added to the interest in the program, being provided a colorful background for the numbers. Miss Phyllis May, supervisor of music in the Public Schools received well deserved commendation for excellent work and did the teachers of the school for their assistance in carrying out the musical part of the curriculum.

Mr. F. B. Peaverly, Chairman of the Board of Education, expressed the sentiments of the audience in a few words of appreciation to the teachers for their splendid work. He was especially pleased, he said, to see such a large representation of parents present, and hoped that formal meetings of parents at the school would be productive of very good results. He congratulated the children on their singing and felt that the training all had received would be of great value to them in practical appreciation and enjoyment in later years.

Principal Mr. Ketcheson as Chairman.

Mr. C. I. Frederick, Principal of the School, who acted as chairman for the program, endorsed the words of Mr. Peaverly and invited parents to visit the school at any time. They were always welcome.

Mr. Frederick thanked Miss Phyllis May for the time, effort and thoroughness of training given to the music of the school in the past years. She expressed appreciation to the teachers for their co-operation and to the boys and girls of Queen Mary School for the way in which they had responded and brought out by the teaching in singing they had received.

The program was of much interest to the audience, introducing many lovely songs which were enhanced by the sweet, clear voices of the children in choruses, solos or group singing. In the higher classes part singing added the numbers very delightfully and showed the growth of the children after several years' training. An attractive feature of the junior program was in the "I Don't Want to Play in Your Yard" by Mary Wright. Artilli's class when tiny Misses Beth Holmes and Marilyn Cannifax with their dolls and sun bonnets played on a tester-toter with the children grouped behind and sang the chorus.

At the conclusion of the program, Beth Holmes, on behalf of the pupils of the school presented Miss May with a gift. Miss May in thanking the students said that she was happy to have had the opportunity and she had enjoyed her year very much and had enjoyed working with the pupils of Queen Mary.

I. Thomas sang, "Sing when the birds sing and working with the people Frederick.

Rochester Club Gives Silk Flags to the City

When you need us we will stand by and with you as defenders of democracy," assured Sol Heumann, President of the Rochester Club of Rochester, N.Y., during an impressive presentation ceremony held in the council chambers at the City Hall here on Friday when His Worship, Mayor Thompson was presented with two large silk flags, one the Stars and Stripes of the United States and the other the Union Jack. After the flags had been placed on either side of the Mayor's dais, His Worship then presented the key of the city to President Heumann, a large brass key inscribed with the words of "Belleville"; which will hang in the Rochester Club over as a reminder of the bond of kindredship between these two cities.

Group of Ambassadors of Good Will

"I represent a group of ambassadors from the State of New York, who come to you city-annual as a social club to bind the feelings of friendship between our two great countries.

"Our club has been paying annual visits to Belleville for many years and the hospitality extended to us and continually maintained is the true exemplification of democracy. There are no walls of defence separating our two countries and these two flags are symbolic of what I wish to convey to you. Let us hope and pray that they will wave together and always defend truth and righteousness." stated President Heumann, as two uniformed New York state troopers paraded to the Mayor's seat and stood at attention bearing the two gift flags amid loud applause of all present.

Will Stand By

"These flags will always fly for the hope of man and when the time comes that you need us we will stand by and with you as defenders of freedom for the freedom of man and the liberty of all," concluded President Heumann as his then interviewed Carl S. Hallauer, vice president of the Rochester club, the Past Master of Rochester and other visiting dignitaries. President Heumann was introduced by James Galloway, president of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce, who referred to the visiting Americans as brethren. "I use the word brethren advisedly because these gentlemen are our brethren in language, in ideals and in our common purpose and determination to remain free peoples," stated Mr. Galloway.

After the two large silken flags had been placed beneath the Mayor's dais, President Heumann presented Mayor Thompson with a bronze plaque upon which was inscribed the message to convey the significance of the occasion. On the plaque were the simple words: "Presented to the City of Belleville by your friends of "the Rochester Club of the City of Rochester, N.Y., the 13th day of June, 1941."

Mayor Thompson Accepts on Behalf of City

"I am happy on behalf of the citizens of Belleville to accept these two flags as a bond of fellowship between our cities and countries and we hope you will return soon and renew your relations with us. These flags and plaque will always remind us of the friendship that exists between us," stated Mayor Thompson as he then presented President Heumann with the key to the city.

Mayor Thompson, members of the city council and officials of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce represented the city at the exchange of mutual relations and bonds of close friendship.

175 Members Made Trip

The visiting Rochesterians enjoyed golf on the John Ross Robertson links, a dedered an afternoon of fishing in the Bay of Quinte, after which they were taken by the Chamber of Commerce on a tour of inspection of Belleville industries. The visitors left for home by boat late Friday afternoon, high in their praises of the hospitality of Belleville.

Ottawa, June 14 (CP)—(Advance) —Odds and ends at Parliament's adjournment:

Princess Alice spends a lot of time in the rock garden started at Hidden Hall by Lady Byng..... Before the garden party she and the Governor-General held on the King's birthday she worked there for hours.....And she even tossed the rocks around herself.

A debate between Finance Minister Ilsley and Rev. J. M. Nicholson (C.C.F. Mackenzie) provides plenty of gesturing..... Both throw their arms around in great fashion to drive home points.

More of the Same

When Prince Bernhard of the Netherlands was in Ottawa newspapermen tried to find out if he was leaving for United States by rail. "What's his full name?" asked the man at the airport. "He's Prince Bernhard — perhaps he wouldn't use one." "Oh, yes he would," came the reply, "or he couldn't get a reservation"...which seems doubtful.

Culled from the Chilsdean Press Service put out weekly by Chilsdean Consul-General Lulu Felix: "Empire day was celebrated with special edition by every Chilean newspaper, some times whose sentiments have been doubted.....Just two exceptions were marked down and everybody knows who is paying their expenses and profits."

A big share of the Civil Service in OCAs's three days has been imported..... That's probably why so many of the girls eating lunch outside the Parliament Buildings are writing letters at the same time.

At the Torch Ceremony

The official party was besieged by autograph hunters when it was over and several, including Cabinet ministers, signed programs, menu slips and scraps of paper for them ....Said one matron to another: "That lady over there is Princess Alice—and there's the Governor-General too"..... Wrong both times ....She pointed to a Girl Guide leader and a Second Lieutenant.....the Governor-General is a Major-General.

Reporters had two chances when they covered the torch ceremony address of Prime Minister Mackenzie King.... He spoke over a loudspeaker system from a stand in front of the Peace Tower....If reporters couldn't catch what he said right off the bat they could pick it up from the drivel or six words later—as it came bounding back from the buildings opposite Parliament Hill on Wellington Street.

Ha!, down you big mule, pull yourself together, Ye gods, he struck out pop said, and ma said Well what of it for land sakes, you're positively shouting, that's the end of the world, is it?

PRIME MINISTER'S STATEMENT

Prime Minister King's war statement in the House of Commons was one which will go far to reveal to the Canadian people the increasing strength of Britain. He said that a "true conception of the situation would go a long way to strengthen morale." The Canadian premier pointed to the significant fact that since the fall of France, which had up to that time been looked upon as the great barrier against German success, not a vital British position had been lost.

Mr. King advised that reverses were bound to come but Canadians would not lose hope on that, they did come. Undue elation or undue depression over events would only be helping the enemy, he pointed out.

Mr. King made the significant statement that the German war machine can no longer hide from the German people the effect of British raids. In sky warfare the situation for Britain is improving day by day and on the sea the curve of losses has gone down.

Mr. King coined a phrase when he spoke of this continent rapidly becoming "the shipyard of freedom of the seas," where Canada and the United States are using their resources to build ships.

Canada's war effort continues to grow steadily, the Prime Minister said and Canada's forces overseas are now ready to serve and Canada is ready to have them serve wherever their services may count for most. He told an interesting story of the Royal Canadian Air Force, the Commonwealth Plan, the army and the navy. He spoke of industrial expansion for war purposes and referred to the determination of Canada to send all the food that can be carried to Britain.

Mr. King attached to American help the greatest importance in the success of British and Allied arms in the struggle.

"The battleground are in the Atlantic and the English Channel," he declared.

He placed among the great resources the intangible things of the human spirit and gave a fervent description of the character of the people, their love of liberty, will to live and endure every necessary hardship for freedom's sake. He paid high tribute to the Canadian spirit when he said, "we have in Canada a veritable passion for human brotherhood, a hatred of hate, an intolerance of intolerance."

Mr. King closed with the words:

"All these intangible things are the very fine and fabric of the leadership and character of the British and Canadian peoples. Tried by many onslaughts, tested by many defeats, the inner fortresses of that character remain unbroken and unbreakable, indomitable. Against their walls, the tides of tyranny and the waves of battle will beat in vain."

VISCOUNT BENNETT

Canadians are proud of their former Prime Minister, the Right Honorable R. B. Bennett, who has been raised to the British peerage as Viscount in His Majesty's birthday honors list. Living in England for the past three years, Mr. Bennett, now Lord Bennett, has been able to render invaluable service to the Empire and to Canada in the war.

The new Viscount has always impressed Canadians with his great abilities and these have had ample opportunities especially in these trying days. He has been a member of the board of aircraft production in Britain during with the well-known Canadian peer, Lord Beaverbrook. Lord Bennett has been directing activity of the Canadian Red Cross overseas.

Though in Canada no titles are bestowed in keeping with a decision reached some years ago, the title which he has received is a tribute to his services rendered to the cause of Canada and the Empire and is an honor to Canada.

We cannot do evil to others without doing it to ourselves.—Desmahis.

I do love my country's good with a respect more tender, more holy and profound than mine own life.—Shakespeare.

Montreal West. —W. M. Crossley.

The "invasion" has come and gone. Yesterday one hundred and seventy Rochesterians landed here, armed not with guns, tanks and machine-guns, but goodfellowship, camaraderie, respect, and that friendship that will forever bind Canada with her great neighbor to the south.

They spoke the same language, these Rochesterians. They stormed the city, not with Stuka bombers, and aerial torpedoes, but with the sheer force of their personality. They left not gaping shell and bomb-holes but besides a splendid impression, plenty of good American dollars.

They epitomized something Hitler could not understand. They needed no fifth columnists. They descended upon the city, not beneath the blanketing folds of a parachute, but in an aura of friendliness that immediately won them the hearts of all with whom they came in contact.

They shot rounds of golf, not machine-gun ammunition. They angled for finny beauties, not for information. They drove automobiles, not innocents to the slaughter. They visited summer cottages, not concentration camps. Some of them wore sun helmets, not steel ones. They may have wrecked a few hearts, but they left homes and churches untouched. They carried "arms" but not shooting ones.

And perhaps the finest gesture of all was the presentation to Mayor Glen Thompson, members of the city council and their official hosts, the Belleville Chamber of Commerce, of two silk flags, the Union Jack and "Old Glory."

Here, in the austere dignity of the city council chamber, American and Canadian reaffirmed that spirit of democratic principles that has always exemplified relations between the residents of this city and their American cousins. As the two snaps of the Red, White and Blue mingled, guarded by two stalwart New York State troopers, there came a swelling in the throats of those who witnessed the ceremony. "When you need us we will stand by and with you," were the words of President Sol. Heuman of the Rochester club. Had he spoke for an hour, he could not have said more.

Had Hitler, Goering, Goebbels and their hangers-on been present, perhaps they would not have believed their eyes. Such things, between friendly nations, would not be tolerated in the "New Order." What they would have learned in the fact that two nations, separated by an invisible line, can live side by side in peace, contentment and mutual agreement, without fear of aggression, intrigue, suspicion and hate.

FLAG DAY THOUGHT

Bayonets know no brotherhood,
Cannon mouths repeat no creed.
Force and hate, however great,
Always at destruction lead.
High the flag of freedom holds
Dreams of all men in her folds.

Shackled serfs across the sea,
Nations beaten and afraid
Trust their hopes of liberty

To the pledge our fathers made
Glorious flag of stripe and star,
Hope of all mankind you are!

Flag of all that men hold best,
Flag, when all, save tyrants
love,
Flag of truth and chance for youth,
Flag of faith in God above.
Glorious flag without a stain,
Hearts and hands salute again!

SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK

By R. J. SCOTT

Letter to the Editor

Belleville, June 14th.

To the Editor of the Ontario Intelligencer.

Dear Sir:

Four weeks ago today I wrote re the peculiarity of our present season of weather. I stated that a drought in July was serious enough but that one in April and May was decided. I requested you to ask the churchs to pray for rain, that evening we had a shower. You said at that time the Spring season was four weeks ahead of last year. We had frequent light showers but now for three days scarcely rain to thoroughly soak the ground. These showers produced an abundant pasture so the cows thrived and milked to perfection and we naturally expected a very prosperous year, but alas, this did not materialize and there is not today a particle of moisture in the ground to insure a good vegetable crop also a fruit crop and unless we get plenty of rain right away we will have neither. Consequently I beseech you to ask the churches to pray earnestly for rain on Sunday, a good soaking rain also means the feed for the country abundant crops for the future.

Yours truly,
D. H. Ackerill, V.S.

RUSSIA BELIEVED

"From the point of view of the new Europe the matter needn't be a first class war," he said. "The world desired. It would suffice within Germany's sphere of influence for Hitler to consent to permit German industrialists to set up a modern scientific basis the production, commerce and transport of Ukraine products."

The tide of divergent stories of strained relations between Berlin and Moscow continued to increase on itself, a series of denials which Berlin officially confirmed at least one of the reports.

The Soviet Government declared that Russia had been guilty of no act being moved toward Russia's western frontiers. Others, including women and a child, are missing 24 days after the Robin Moor was sunk in the South Atlantic by a torpedo and by shells from the submarine's deck gun.

Whatever action Hull and President Roosevelt decide upon will be taken after the scheduled arrival here Monday of Philip P. Williams, secretary of the American Embassy in Rio De Janeiro. He is bringing with him survivors from the Limbichuan, American consul at Fernambuco, Brazil, who was among the eleven survivors their account of the sinking.

A brief preliminary report by Limbichuan gave the gist of these stories. He said the vessel was sunk by a Nazi vessel, and told how those aboard the Robin Moor were forced to put out in four open lifeboats hundreds of miles from land in stormy weather.

On the basis of this information Hull and Roosevelt have developed the belief Germany a treaty violator and collated the evidence on submarines to justify any measure necessary to enforce the doctrine of freedom of the seas recently reasserted by the President.

STRONG SUPPORT WILL BE GIVEN TO U.S. PROTEST

Any Demands or Protest Sent to Germany on Sinking of Robin Moor Will be Backed by Congress

REPORT ON MONDAY

Washington, June 14 (AP)—Widespread congressional support appeared developing today for whatever protest and demands the State Department may dispatch to Germany as a result of the sinking of the United States merchant ship Robin Moor by a submarine.

Senator Alben Barkley, Democratic leader, said he thought a protest note ought to be sent immediately and asserted he found it hard to believe the submarine commander sank the vessel "without some advice from higher authorities."

A leading critic of administration foreign policy, Senator Burton Wheeler (Dem. Montana), described the incident as "appalling" and "I would denounce". He said, however, that he thought "at least we ought to await an explanation before we jump at conclusions—if there is an explanation."

Senator Carter Glass (Dem. Virginia) declared that if the facts proved beyond question that Germany was responsible for the sinking "they ought to be made to pay for it".

"You know what my views are," he told newsmen. "I think we ought to go over there and shoot hell out of every U-boat. I would that before and I still believe it."

In well-informed quarters it was predicted that Hull would call a meeting first move would be to dispatch to Berlin a note of protest demanding that Germany's treaty pledges governing the sinking of merchantmen be upheld, also asking an immediate and forthright explanation of the Robin Moor incident.

May Demand Indemnification.

In the same communication, it was said, Hull may demand indemnification for American citizens who apparently lost as well as guarantees against future attacks on merchantmen flying the American flag.

Only eleven crewmen and passengers, picked up by the Brazilian vessel Cocrio, have been rescued. Others, including 11 women and a child, are missing 24 days after the Robin Moor was sunk in the South Atlantic by a torpedo and by shells from the submarine's deck gun.

Whatever action Hull and President Roosevelt decide upon will be taken after the scheduled arrival here Monday of Philip P. Williams, secretary of the American Embassy in Rio De Janeiro. Coldwell Demands Inquiry into CBC

By FRANK FLAHERTY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, June 14 (CP)—One of the early tasks of Hon. Joseph Thorson, newly appointed minister of National War Services is to deal with demands for a Parliamentary inquiry into the affairs of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

The demand was made in the House of Commons last night by Mr. M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. Leader, and ministerial responsibility for the CBC was placed in the hands of Munitions Minister Howe in the absence of Mr. Thorson.

Mr. Coldwell said public confidence in the corporation had been undermined by "unwarranted changes in the executive and changes in the allocation of broadcasting to privately owned radio stations. He said that the general manager, Gladstone Murray, had suffered a "none-too-gentle demotion" at the hands of the Board of Governors when increased power was voted in favor of Augustin Frigon, Manager, Dr. Augustin Frigon.

Mr. Howe said that when the minister responsible for radio since the establishment of the present corporation and who is about to turn the task over to Mr. Thorson said he had no apologies for the management of the corporation. He believed it was doing a good job and judging by the volume of complaints being received at his office the public were satisfied with the service than ever before.

BRUCE APPEALS FOR COMPULSORY MILITARY SERVICE

Says Equality of Sacrifice According to Ability to Services Should be Basis for Enlistment

Ottawa, June 14 (CP)—It was "an affront to the people of Canada," French speaking people to say they would oppose compulsory service, Dr. H. A. Bruce (Con. Toronto-Parkdale) declared in the House of Commons today.

He charged "political expediency" had dominated the government's consideration of compulsory service and declared the time had come "to adopt the speediest and fairest means of securing men for the army and the factory."

"I want some conscription of labor as well," said Defence Minister Ralston, and Dr. Bruce replied the time had arrived to apply to all.

The debate arose on Defence Department estimates.

Claims Dissatisfaction

Dr. Bruce said there was "widespread dissatisfaction over the conduct of the National Defence Department which, Dr. Bruce said, he believed was largely due to frequent changes of training plans.

He asked Col. Ralston to "clarify" the situation in French Canada over recruiting by giving separate figures of Active Service enlistments per 1000 of population for the French English speaking volunteers.

Also he wanted figures for enlistments in non-permanent active and reserve armies.

"We have been lulled into a sense of false security by statements made in this House that men were not needed for the present war. The British army suffered defeat in Greece and Crete for lack of manpower.

"The minister now modestly asks for 22,000 men. Has he any expectation that this will meet even our immediate needs?"

Would Double Number of Divisions

He said the country should have double the number of divisions now in active service.

Equality of sacrifice, according to ability to serve, must be the basis for enlistment. Compulsory service for home defence was not compulsory national unity. Dr. Bruce said the attitude of French-Canadians in taking participation in war outside Canada had changed. To suggest otherwise, he declared, was to make compulsory service was to insult their loyalty.

Little Raid Damage

During the past two weeks, several persons in a southeastern coastal area were trapped in their homes when bombs demolished homes. The Nazis apparently attempted to hit docks and southeast coast. A communique said the damage was not large.

London had its second air raid alarm of the week. It ended before any aeroplane or the sound of planes were heard.

The Air Ministry News Service, in describing the night combats between British and German fighters, said there were at least three battles.

One German bomber opened fire on him in a surprise attack but he swung out of the line of fire. A few minutes later he saw a second German, got in a burst of fire and the planes dip from the clouds which dove towards the ground. The pilot of the third German from close range and saw the plane dive away steeply. At about 8,000 feet it exploded in a big orange flash".

The pilot claimed only the third plane as destroyed.

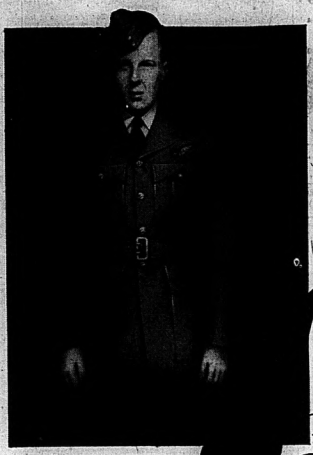
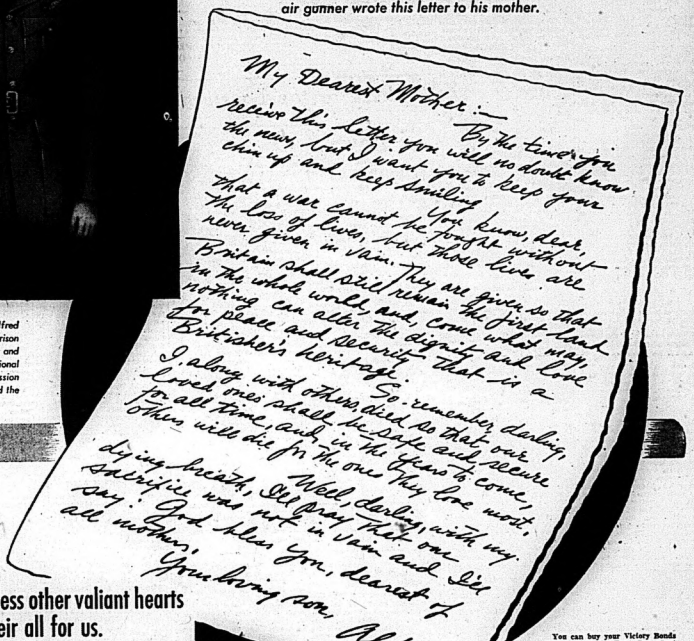
HE GAVE HIS LIFE

that we might live



As he lay dying in hospital, an R.A.F. air gunner wrote this letter to his mother.



My Dearest Mother:—

By the time you receive this letter you will no doubt know the news, but I want you to keep your chin up and keep smiling.

You know, dear, that a war cannot be fought without the loss of lives, but those lives are never given in vain. Those lives are Britain shall still remain. They are given so that in the whole world, and, come what may, nothing can alter the dignity and love for peace and security that is a Britisher's heritage.

So remember darling, I, along with others, died so that our loved ones shall be safe and secure for all time, and in the years to come, others will die in the ones they love most, dying bravely. Well darling, with my sacrifice was not in vain and I'll say: God bless you, dearest of all mothers.

Your loving son,

Alf

The letter was written by Sergeant Alfred Harrison, R.A.F., to his mother, Mrs. Harrison of Edwin Street, Nottingham. The letter and photo are reproduced by Canada's National Victory Loan Committee, under permission especially granted by Mrs. Harrison and the London "Daily Mirror."

He, and countless other valiant hearts have given their all for us.

For all we have and are, for all our freedoms' sake, we dare not let their sacrifice be in vain.

The Stars Say

For Sunday, June 15

By ORPHEUS KERMIE

SUNDAY'S horoscope holds augury of an exceptionally lively day. Social activities as well as all social, personal, domestic and emotional affairs will be carried on at a tempo. All pertaining to the young, to travel, to sports, to communications, writings and kindred matters are favored. Mars, the planet of war, from excess, extravagance, and a tendency to be quarrelsome and censorsity at the hands of too insistent or dubious friends. Be circumspect in all associations.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year which is somewhat with much liveliness and enthusiasm but although of life, private as well as business. It may be a time for forging ahead in all pertaining to writings, publishing, promotion, travel and the affairs of the mind, at the same time putting the brakes on in the way of expenditures, cutting down on sports, social functions, writings and kindred matters as Mars, the planet of war, from excess, extravagance, and a tendency to be quarrelsome and censorsity at the hands of too insistent or dubious friends. Be circumspect in all associations.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"Til Death Do Us Part" No Idle Phrase, Says Fairfax

Successful marriage is getting to be a more and more difficult achievement in modern times. The one marriage in six that went on the rocks a few years ago has now doubled and trebled.

When a couple lives happily together for fifty years and more, each other—thats news. It would be news even if the couple were born Siamese twins. It would be distinguished editor Negley Cochran and Mrs.

Girl meets boy they love, they marry and live happily ever after to keep a home and to rear their children. That is the way it should be. Millions never have the patience, the real love, and the character to make their relationship last. They try it for a year or two—then off to Reno.

I know that nothing is achieved by dissolving the chains of hatred through the years; that sometimes a legal separation becomes as necessary as a delicate operation—but it never a happy solution to those who have no faith in God or good faith.

It is not given to many couples to live together in happiness for fifty-two years, as the Cochrans did. But most people remain married in spirit, even after death has claimed them. A neighbor of domine in Virginia, when she was over 70 years of age, was courting a beautiful bed of petunias. "Why," said a kinsman, wondered at the patience of this frail little old lady in cherishing that garden and keeping it so beautifully.

She put down her trowel, smile and said, "Dred and I started to grow petunias in our first home. My children have married, I have grandchildren and great grandchildren, but every year I plant petunias and I seem nearer together when I work among them. Dred is there."

Did you smile when you read in Strachey's "Life of Queen Victoria" that she kept her husband's clothes just as he had left it? Indeed, it is memory and love that made her. It was something told in these memorable words: "Albert's room in the late Prince Consort's dressing room at the same time as it was when he was brought during their long married life."

It has that little anecdote had a grimly humorous slant. But when you think of the love that made the old queen and her pride, her sensibilities and her sensitive, she managed to do her best magnificently for the world and a whole series of her ministers—Gladstone, for instance. She said he used to address her as Mr. And Mrs. Gladstone of Commons. But she got along with him on the whole, as a friend and she was no spreader.

So without being by the least sentimental, one feels that this old couple, Queen of Great Britain, Empress of India, and Mr. Gladstone, possession in the bridelike devotion of old fire for their years and gift ed Albert, during their number of years, and the memory of his companionship, she remained married to him in spirit to the end.

Gifts Connected With a Wedding

The bridegroom usually wants to give his bride a wedding present, sometimes with a elaborate display of sentiment, usually an ornament that she wears on her wedding day and never a day after, or cheaper jewelry. The bridegroom usually sends flowers to the bride's attendants, and, on the wedding day, sends a boutonniere to the usher and corsage to his mother.

Before the bride, the bride wishes to give the bridegroom a wedding gift. A popular gift of the moment is a wrist watch for a man, or a new home, inscribed with the wedding date. A man likes a pair of cuff links, a dress set, a pocket or wrist watch, a cigarette case, a wallet, a silver or gold pencil.

Gifts to Attendants

The bride's gift to her attendants may be as elaborate and expensive present, if the bride can afford such a generous gift, or it may be a modestly-priced but thoughtfully-planned remembrance. Very often she gives her own bridal photograph in a silver, gold, or crystal frame. She may give a vanity-case, a wrist watch, a gold or silver key-case, containing a key to be cut to the desired shape, a pendant or charm brooch, necklace, bill-clip, bracelet enamel or silver or gold pencil, an evening bag, a travelling or dressing clock. The bride's gift might also be a fountain pen and pencil, a plain or fitted overnight bag, a jeweled hat or hair ornament, a bill or bill-fold, a piece of costume jewelry, a dressing-table accessory, a short gold key-chain with gold tag for monogram, or an article or jewelry set with the individual birth stone of the attendants.

The gifts are note of good wishes.

Friends Welcome

The address of welcome was given by Mrs. L. Frost of Rodoway. The Women's Institute is faced with its biggest program which has ever existed in Red Cross work or what ever form of war work we are doing, put our shoulder to the wheel and let us not be satisfied with the minor things, but do our level best and better".

Special welcome was given the new branch, Pine Grove, who have joined a district of friendly and ambitious women trying to do their bit for Home and Country. Mrs. Morley Sine, Uniondale, replied with these courageous words: "Our fair land and loved ones are at stake, Canada will not fail; England will not fail; for unity will keep us together to win".

Marching in, in single file the school children of Miss Dorothy Reid of the neighbouring school sang several numbers which were greatly enjoyed.

Mrs. C. Ketcheson, District President gave an address which was brief but with a kindly spirit she said of meeting so many nice ladies and friends after so many years office. She thanked the Department for their outstanding assistance and in closing wished her success the best of luck.

Standing committee reports followed. Education—Mrs. G Frederick, Rodoway; Canadian Legion Auxiliary relief—Mrs. R. Bush, Uniondale; Publicity—Mrs. P. Campbell, Chatterton; Historical research—Mrs. B. Miss Slicter, Department Representative discussed the standing committee reports. Every woman, rich or poor, old or young can and should further her education, she said. "Never too old to learn" is a true one. A community activity report should bear results and action otherwise it is not an activity.

Referring to the Peace report, she said "we cannot sit at home and expect peace. We can't expect God to do everything, although when we are depressed we ask ourselves the question, 'why can't our Saviour help the people'. We must meet Him half way in helping ourselves to a better world (a new world) it is going to be".

Maintain Program

Miss Slicter stated the Department was not in favour of drop-ping any standing committee. There will still be a greater work for the women to do after the war. We must save money, but we must too must have money, but we must too have a balanced life. Keep your Institute and keep yourself as an even keel". Miss Slicter congratulated the branches for the work they were doing.

Co-operative projects will be nutrition for service, Citizenship and Stirling, Mrs. Hesman, Pine Grove, the District Delegate, gave a splendid report of the Area Convention at Belleville.

Both Hurlers Throw 4-Hitter But St. Louis Cardinals Beat Brooklyn Dodgers by 1-0 Count

Babe Phelps Fined $500 for Not Accompanying the Dodgers to St. Louis

DUROCHER ANGRY

By NED NORDNESS
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

One club buys them, the other sells 'em—and both extremes are equally successful.

Under Larry MacPhail, Brooklyn Dodgers have spent close to $1,000,000 for player talent since 1938.

In the same period St. Louis Cardinals management has received more than $350,000 on the sale of players several of whom now grace the Dodger roster.

Today St. Louis and Brooklyn occupy the one-two positions in the National Baseball League, 10 1-2 and 7 1-2 games ahead of the pack and giving no indications of weakening.

In the only game played in either the National or American League yesterday the Cardinals gained a 1-0 triumph over the Flatbush team in the first or a four-game series to bring the standings in their individual rivalry to four games apiece.

Whitlow Wyatt matched Southpaw Max Lanier's performance in pitching a four-hitter, but the Cards coupled a walk and two singles in the third inning to push across their tally. After Terry Moore walked Johnny Rapp singled him to third and Don Padgett ripped loose with a one-base drive to score him.

Brooklyn had its chance in the fourth inning with the bases loaded and two out, but Mickey Owen grounded to the infield.

Brooklyn has its other troubles too with announcement that Catcher Babe Phelps had been fined $500 and indefinitely suspended for his failure to accompany the Dodgers to St. Louis. Manager Leo Durocher said he did not want Phelps on the team any longer.

5-RUN SCORING SPLURGE IN 7TH WINS FOR ZELLERS

Corbins Defeated 14-10 in One of Best Games of the Season

COLDEN GOES ROUTE

A concerted five-run scoring splurge in the last half of the seventh inning enabled the Zellers to the top position in the Ladies' softball League last evening as they came from behind to pull out a 14-10 victory over the second-place Corbin lassies. A win for Corbin's would have put them into a first place tie with the undefeated Zeller girls.

Superb defensive play by Zeller's third sacker Bennett was instrumental in holding Corbin's off the score sheet in the latter innings as the girls from across the river pressed hard to get the runs, which would tie the score. Preewer Golden limited the losers to twelve hits as she went the route, while the winners clouted the offerings of each Corbin hurler, for a total of fifteen safeties.

Erratic control on the part of Corbin's starting pitcher, E. Reid, got the losers away to a bad start as three walks and an equal number of passed balls in the initial inning gave the winners a trio of runs. Four singles in the second gave Zellers three more runs as they shelled Reid off the mound to be replaced by P. Bailey, who limited the winners to three runs up to the seventh, when the barrage broke loose. Reid came back to finish the game for Corbin's, shutting the winners out in the last inning.

Stewart, Zeller's second sacker, led the way with the willow for the winners, connecting for four safeties in five official trips to the plate, one a homer in the fifth. Garrow, Douglas and Clarke pounded out doubles for Zeller's while Bennett and Thompson clicked for a brace of singles each. For the losers, Betty Marsh was the big noise on the stick, a homer with one aboard in the fifth, while N. Blake counted two doubles.

Lineups: Corbin's—Burgess, cf; Hill, ss; Reid, p and rf; Haslip, 1b; Bland, c; Marsh, 2b; Jones, 3b; Ellis, lf, and Blake rf. Zellers—Clarke, rf; Bennett, 2b; Garrow, ss; Douglas, lf; Sherry, 1b; Thompson, 3b; Stewart cf; Golden, p; Hunter c; Stewart, p and cf; Golden, p.

Trade Talk Heard As Major League Deadline Nears

By JUDSON BAILEY
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, June 14 (AP)—This is dollar day in the big leagues and all the clubs have the "what kind of bargain sale" signs on display.

The wires have been seething with trade talk for a couple days, but it finally has reached the slowdown stage because tomorrow is the last day this season that trades may be made, except through waivers.

Babe Phelps, chubby Brooklyn catcher with a lifetime batting average of .313 is one of the bargains known to be on the shelf. The Dodgers brought up Catcher Herman Franks from their Montreal farm yesterday; fired Phelps $500 and suspended him indefinitely because he failed to accompany the club on its western invasion.

No one made any secret that the Dodgers are trying to make a deal for the 33-year-old veteran of seven seasons in the National League.

Just where he might wind up was a matter of conjecture. The Cincinnati Reds and Chicago Cubs were possibilities.

Manager Bill McKechnie of the Reds said yesterday at Cooperstown, N.Y., before the exhibition with the Cleveland Indians that he was "sure there will be some trading before the deadline. I am sure we are not going to have to hurt ourselves very much to make a deal if we want it."

He refused to amplify this statement but, with seven outfielders on his roster he is in a good position to dicker.

The New York Yankees have been canvassing virtually every other member of the American League for talent in the last two weeks without avail. They need a first baseman and a pitcher, but apparently the other clubs are afraid to strengthen the Yanks. The Chicago White Sox are desperately in need of hitting, but have little to offer in a deal.

RED WINGS BACK BY 6 TO 5 LOSS IN THIRD PLACE

Rain and Wet Grounds Forced Postponement of Rest of Schedule

SUNKEL SHOWS CLASS

(By The Associated Press)

Rochester Red Wings are back in third place in the International baseball league standings today after a one-night stand in the runner-up spot.

They got a chance to capitalize on idleness of the league-leading Newark Bears and Montreal Royals by blowing a 6-5 decision to Syracuse Chiefs last night. Defeat dropped them .003 percentage points behind Montreal and two full games in back of the Bears.

Rain and wet grounds forced postponement of the Montreal-Jersey City and Buffalo-Newark doubleheaders as well as a Toronto-Baltimore engagement.

Tom Sunkel outlasted four Red Wing hurlers in the extra-inning twilight game, with the Chiefs coming from behind three times to win. The second game of a scheduled twin-bill was called in the first inning because of rain.

With two out in the seventh, Rochester scored twice to send the game into overtime. The Wings picked up another run in the eighth but Syracuse bounced back with the tying and winning tallies when Carl Dreinsword gave up two hits and a walk. After relieving Charley Brumbleiss with one man on, John Bottarini pounded his 16th safety under the game.

Victory increased the Chiefs' lead over the seventh-place Baltimore Orioles to a full game and marked the third straight time Sunkel has beaten the champions.

LOUIS DIFFERENT TO FIGHTER WHO LICKED BAER

Brown Bomber Taking Bout Seriously and Will Go Form Opening Bell

HITTING HARD

(By Gayle Talbot)
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, June 14. (AP)—Those who are basing their predictions that Billy Conn will win the heavyweight championship when they meet Champion Joe Louis next Wednesday night on the fact that the Louis dealt a worse beating in getting Buddy Baer three weeks ago in Washington are laying themselves open to a painful surprise, Conn, of course, is included.

The great Louis now is getting ready to stalk Billy boy under the Polo grounds lights in a far different customer from the head-sufferer who approached the Baer bout with a sort of weary indifference, knowing he could stop Buddy whenever he got ready and needing no reason to hurry.

"That was awful, Joe says now. "I trained under a tin roof down there".

The day before the Baer fight Louis sat in his dressing room and idly swung his arms lying limply beside him and his mind wandering actually to another day in the army. When asked how quickly he expected to knock out Baer he roused himself only sufficiently to say that "it depends on how long it takes to get in a hurry this kind of weather."

Not in Any Hurry

And that was the way he fought Buddy, exchanging licks with the big fellow almost casually in the early rounds. He didn't even step up the pace after Buddy's murderous left half-knocked, half-shoved him through the ropes in the opening round. He was not telling how long that scrap would have gone if Baer hadn't opened a cut on Joe's left eyelid.

But between rounds, while they patched up the eye, Joe's handlers, Jack Blackburn and Julian Black, told him to give Buddy the works and take no chances on the wound being worsened. Only then did the crowd see the real Joe Louis—the one suspect Conn will face from the first bell next Wednesday.

There is no doubt in anybody's mind in Louis' camp that the champion intends to dispatch Conn in the first round if he can. Joe merely says "I'll get him quick as I can".

Billy Conn, the boy who merely rushing his sparring partners every round in the ring, is as fast in his variably corners them.

Joe's handlers are slightly fearful, in fact, that he will go in too fast and too contemptuously of Conn's hitting power. Their efforts to slow him up in training, however, have not been successful. Joe acts as if this is a personal matter between him and Conn, and he's handling it in his own way.

GOSSIP AND COMMENT

Nobody in the Shibe Park, Philadelphia, press box ever saw this play before until this season.

It was the seventh inning and Washington was leading the Philadelphia City Athletics 2 to 1. Brancato was on first base and Travis was out.

Moses fled to right field, but the play was called back as in football. Moses got another crack and promptly singled to centre.

In the meantime Brancato had reached second on a passed ball and he scored on Moses' single, tying the score.

The answer—well, it developed that Moses had failed to touch first base when he hit for an out. When he saw the ball coming, however, he hit it anyway. But as he had called time, naturally the play was recalled. Get it?

Some good softball was dished up to baseball addicts" at the last night. In the senior loop, Archie Meyer hurled the Red Sox to a 18-3 win over the Pabst Anne nine at Ox Field. In town, Chuck Barnett's undefeated Zellers' five romped indifferent their record at the expense of the Corbin nine when they held down the Armouries by a 14-10 count. In the Recreation League, Janiers squeezed out a narrow 13-12 win over the Air Force boys to keep up their selfsailing on the lofty plateaus of Mountain View.

Do you remember when Bill and Bun Cook, hockey playing brothers, signed with New York Rangers, newly-formed entry in the National League, 15 years ago today? Frank Boucher joined the team the same year as a centre and this trio was one of the famous of all Ranger forward lines. The line was broken up in 1936 when Bun was to Boston Bruins.

When Frank Lamanike is pitching and Joe Ignatic is catching for the Pioneer League team they need no signs. Both speak Polish fluently and if there are no Poles on opposing teams, they can waive the finger signals.

Thirty-four states of the U.S.A., the District of Columbia, Canada and Alaska have already entered in the 1941 All-American Soap Box Derby to be run at Akron, O., in August. It is estimated by the International Soap Box Derby officials that over 100 home town races will be held as preliminaries to the big event at which the Kinsmen Club "Soap Box Derby" in this city will be run. The Club of Ohio, site of the international and world finals, has had a series of derby participation, with an even dozen races being conducted in as many cities throughout that state. The Belleville Derby, under the auspices of The Ontario Intelligencer, is recognized as the Canadian championship race and the winner of the big event here on June 30th will compete at Akron next year against the Dominion in the All-American event. President Gardiner Dell of the Belleville Kinsmen Club informed your reporter last night. Incidentally we observed two local derby cars in yesterday's parade in the morning which was a splendid patriotic gesture on the part of the youthful owners.

Some teams remain the same too long and change is necessary if they are to keep up with the procession. It is believed by Bill Cowan, sec.-editor of the New York Journal and American, who cites the New York Giants as one club that cannot afford to remain static.

This column has both admiration and a high opinion of Cleveland's Al Hubbell, Mel Ott, Joe Moore, Hal Schumacher and Carl Hubbell, as writes Cowan. "But it is also pretty sure that the time has passed when Stoneham and Terry are going to be able to build a championship ball team around them. Horace and Bill must also realize that. They know too much baseball not to. It is only natural and a matter of pride with them, too, I imagine, that they should want to keep the Polo Grounds up as high as possible this season.

"But is there enough difference between, let us say, third and fifth place, to make the policy of clinging to the same old outfielding worth while? Perhaps too long and they will be worth nothing as trading material. There are teams in the league, however—notably Cincinnati—to whom one or more of these players might be tremendously important in the present race. As important as Herman is bidding fair to be to Brooklyn.

"There is an axiom that is taught young army officers to the effect that a bad move is better than no move at all in a crisis. In short, never sit there and let 'em shoot you like quail 'a-settin'. That's the unpardonable sin of a leader."

DID YOU KNOW—There seems to be a darky in the ebo pile-up as Cecil Travis, Lenny Merullo, Conn have fallen off. . . . The Indians edged the Reds 2-1 in Cooperstown, N.Y. yesterday, the whole playing was broadcast was originated by Abner Doubleday himself! 1941 version of . . . Bob Feller hurls a fast ball, but he takes plenty of time to do it. . . . For instance his last time out "Rapid Robert" took two hours, 45 minutes to win a 2-1 decision.

Braddock Sees Louis Licked By Billy Conn

By JAMES J. BRADOCK
Former World Heavyweight Boxing Champion

New York, June 14 (CP)— Joe Louis is in for trouble when he risks his heavyweight championship against Billy Conn at the Polo Grounds June 18. I think Louis is his match as the greatest fighter I've ever seen, a good boxer and a murderous puncher, but he is past his peak. He has never met a boy who could do Conn. And he has never faced a challenger who could outbox or thrown punches as fast as Conn.

It has been nearly four years since Louis and I fought, practically from me, June 22, 1937. He has turned back the challenges of many contenders, some of them good men. But time has changed him. He isn't the hungry, ambitious fighter he was.

He isn't as fast. And his punches don't carry the zip they did a year or two ago. Medicine men have taken his Sunday punches without going down. He has softened up. He gets cut occasionally now. He gets hit with punches he would have dodged before.

Conn will not be hit anywhere near as often as those bigger, slugging fighters Carnera and Baer. And Conn, when he is hit, will lose his temper and try to slug with Joe. I don't think he will be able to do it too smart. Anyway, it will be a great fight.

YESTERDAY'S STARS

(By the Associated Press)

Max Lanier, Cardinals and Whitlow Wyatt, Dodgers, each pitched a four-hit ball and Wyatt led Brooklyn in batting with double and single, but Lanier won 1-0 shutout.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Model Wife"

In "Model Wife" which comes to the Capitol Sunday for three mid-week days, Joan Blondell and Dick Powell step out of their usual role roles as man-and-mate to engage in one of the sprightliest series of marital mix-ups that has ever been added to the screen this season.

Joan, always one of the most sensational glamour girls to come out of the Hollywood, has a role chock-full of bright lines and breath-taking gowns, and Dick who showed himself to be just as much at ease at light comedy as he ever was in crooning when he made "Christmas in July", delivers even better in this one bit.

Just about every other member of the cast came in for his share, too, of the delightful delirium of "Model Wife".

Lee, Bowman, Charlie Ruggles, Ruth Donnelly, Lucile Watson, Billy Gilbert and John Quarles all act good. Really good.

Incidentally, as Wayne Morris there was only one good thing about playing a dual role as he does in Paramount's "The Quarterback" which is shown or the same bill in the Belle, Wife". He has to make love to two girls instead of one. In the part of a studious scholar he fails in love with the blonde and beautiful Virginia Dale. In the role of his twin brother who prefers "tootsies" to study, he makes love to brunette Lillian Cornell. Altogether, the part kept him on the jump. One day alone he had to make thirty-two changes of clothes in hopping from one part to another. The story concerns two brothers who combine their talents as athlete and scholar so that one may graduate from an athletic scholarship. It works out nicely until they both fall in love with the same girl. The love making of twins with such widely separated interests is confusing but lends itself to hilarious comedy. William Frawley is also featured in the cast, which includes Alan Hewlett, Jerome Cowan, Edgar Kennedy, Rod Cameron, Wally Vernon and Frank Burke.

The same double bill program also includes an interesting short, "Going Places".

"Goodbye Mr. Chips"

"Goodbye Mr. Chips", picturization of James Hilton's best-seller, is gloriously the story of the school teachers of the world, is the outstanding screen play which will open next at the McCarthy Theatre. According to the best pictures of the year.

Filmed in England by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, it brings to you Robert Donat, whose bit in The Citadel" in 1941, as recently as a year ago, a glamorous new feminine star, Greer Garson, who has been seen in press recently signed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and a cast including 1,200 British schoolboys, led by little Terry Kilburn of "Lord Jeff" and "A Christmas Carol" fame.

The romantic story deals with an English schoolmaster who comes to a big school as a young man, becomes loved and respected, marries and marries a beautiful girl who dies, leaving him with a great loneness in his heart toward all his charges. He shapes the careers of three great men and pilots the school during the World War. Several flashes in his life, his romances and finishes in his eighties.

Produced by Victor Saville, a production that will grip your interest from the very first scene. It will bring all your memories to you, you revel in his sheer romance and the delightful message it brings. See it to yourself not to miss "Goodbye Mr. Chips". Rounding out an excellent program a splendid second feature will be the picture of Carol Landis and Richard Cromwell starring Ingrid Gurie, also latest news of the world—in pictures—will be presented next at the McCarthy Theatre.

"I WANTED WINGS"

The thrilling story of the training of America's birdmen, told against the background of an exciting tale of adventure and romance, will be on view when Paramount's sweeping epic of the air, "I Wanted Wings", opens today at the Belle Theatre.

Starring Ray Milland, William Holden, Wayne Morris and Brian Donlevy, the film features in the important dual international newcomer, Veronica Lake and lovely Constance Moore. Produced by Arthur Hornblow and directed by Mitchell Leisen, the new air drama promises to be probably this year's most important film. Certainly not since "Wings", which many of us still remember vividly, has another exhilarating picture taken off from the ground with so much excited advance talk as "I Wanted Wings". Nor has any previous picture had better opportunity for providing authentic air thrills into enthuse.

Made with the complete co-operation of the Army Air Corps at Randolph, Kelly and March Fields, the new film takes us through the training of America's air cadets, as it tells the personal stories of four aviation trainees and the women in their lives. The men who want wings are Milland, Holden and Morris, and the women, of course, are Veronica Lake and Constance Moore. In the picture, we understand Miss Lake has been signed and known as the "blonde bombshell", causes the crash of a "Flying Fortress", after crashing into the pilot's arm hearts. Constance Moore plays the role of a girl who has been assigned to cover an air-field for a magazine.

Air-minded as we have been during the past few years, due to international events and our own efforts to build up an effective home side sky defense, "I Wanted Wings" offers us what is probably the most exciting and fascinating topic available for screen stories. It is the first time that the motion pictures has recorded the step-by-step method by which our young eagles gain their wings. The fact that the army has made available its flying fields, its planes and its personnel to Paramount leads us to expect there will be anything phony about the sky thrills which Matchless air thrills should be the result.

While movie audiences are no doubt eagerly awaiting "I Wanted Wings" for its thrills, exciting story and outstanding stars, there is also no doubt that many of us are looking forward to seeing the new screen enchantress, Veronica Lake, who has taken Hollywood by storm. Her big chance came when the second aviation picture in which he starred in the role of Veronica. The handsome actor recently was seen in the leading role of "Ride On Vaquero" William Holden and Wayne Morris have been outstanding performers in many notable films. As for Brian Donlevy, he has come to be one of Hollywood's most favored stars, following his memorable role in "The Great Dictator".

The Belle latest news events will be exhibited on the same program. Complete change of program will be presented at the Belle Theatre today with adult bargain matinee prices prevailing until 6 p.m. The first complete evening show starts at 6:45 p.m. The last show at 9:15 p.m.

SWING MAESTRO STARTED AS CHURCH MUSICIAN

Earl "Father" Hines, popularly regarded as one of the nation's foremost swing maestri, developed his interest in the jazz medium in one of the most unorthodox manners known to show business. He started playing for improvisations on church hymns.

A native of Duquesne, Pa., Hines was featured in a small choky and dance combination at the age of seven, made his first appearance as an Alpha Hi:

"Mother used to have her hands full with me," Hines says music as it's written,' she used to complain. 'There's no need trying to improve it.' We've been trying to improve anything, really. It was just that church efforts to build up a more stable sky defense, 'I Wanted Wings' offers us what is probably the most exciting and fascinating topic available for screen stories. It is the first time that the motion pictures has recorded the step-by-step method by which our young eagles gain their wings. The fact that the army has made available its flying fields, its planes and its personnel to Paramount leads us to expect there will be anything phony about the sky which Matchless air thrills should be the result.

CHAPTER SIXTEEN

WITH BETSY'S hand in his Tom led the way down the path to the pier. Blake stood for a long moment looking after them, his face dark and ugly.

Betsy shivered again as she and Tom stood on the pier while the boat swept in to make a landing. "That man gives me a creepy sort of feeling," she confided. "As if I'd come along a garden path and all of a sudden almost stepped on a snake."

Tom laughed. "Poor Mr. Blake! He thinks he's such a handsome brute, and such a devil with the ladies," he teased.

"Devil is right," said Betsy grimly.

By now the boat had tied up and the first of the passengers were coming ashore. There were only four of them, Tom and Betsy saw, a man who was frankly middle-aged, his portly build partly disguised by the well-cut white linen suit that he wore, an almost giddy band about his Panama hat. The lady he was so tenderly assisting to the pier was plump, blonde, rather jolly round and in her late thirties, for all her kittenishly coy manner.

"Mr. and Mrs. Forman, I presume," said the gentleman, having assisted his lady ashore. "May I present myself? Major William Edmonds, and the lady who did me the honor to become my wife."

"How do you do?" said Betsy pleasantly. "I'm Mrs. Forman, and this is my husband. We are very happy to have you here."

"How sweet of you!" cooed Mrs. Edmonds, giving Betsy little more than a swift glance, her eyes turning at once to Tom and lingering as though pleased. "This too, TOO lovely spot! And your dear, kind Mr. Markham — to be willing to have a lot of strangers here—"

Major Edmonds beamed happily behind her, yet there was somewhere in the back of his tired, kind eyes the faintest hint of a plea for understanding of his flustering girlish wife whom he quite obviously adored.

"I hope you will be quite comfortable in the cottage we've prepared for you," said Betsy, giving the major a friendly handshake.

"Oh, you mustn't worry about us, my dear. An old campaigner like me gets mighty few chances at anything so beautiful and luxurious as Halcyon Island, I can assure you," said the major handsomely.

Mrs. Edmonds, her hand possessively through Tom's arm, was leading the way toward the path across the sand dunes, trailing behind her a rather heady scent of spicy sweetness. She would have sworn that Mrs. Edmonds also trailed the lazy fluffiness of an evening gown, though in reality her frock of powder-blue crepe was quite plain and well cut.

"Willie, dear," her voice trailed behind her, soft and sweet, but definitely with the expectation of being obeyed.

"Coming, dear," said the major hastily. Shouldering the two bags he followed, with an almost apologetic glance at Betsy.

Betsy turned to the other couple who still stood on the pier. A small cuddly sort of blonde girl in a short, rather rumpled dark frock, her head bare, her sunny curls tangled in an enchanting childlike confusion. Beside her, a tall, broad-shouldered, husky young fellow who looked as though his might have been far more at home in football togs than in the gray slacks and blue pullover sweater he wore. His head was bare, too, crisp locks that would not quite lie straight.

Before Betsy could speak, the girl steadied herself against the man's arm, lifted first one foot and then the other, gravely and thoroughly examining the scuffed, rather thin sole.

"It's funny," she mused, as though she spoke her thoughts aloud, "I don't have corns, but very gummy, since I've been ankle-deep in syrup and honeycomb for the past two and a half hours."

Betsy looked puzzled. The young man muttered something under his breath that sounded like, "For heaven's sake, behave yourself."

But the girl looked straight at Betsy and asked with bland irreverence, "What's the penalty for murder in this state?"

"I'm afraid I wouldn't know."

"Well, never mind. The judge will tell me," said the girl innocently, "when I'm brought to the bar for murder of that — that — confounded—er—"

"Come," said the young man, his face dark and angry.

"For years and years and years," answered the girl grimly. "Since two-fifteen this afternoon when we met at the pier to wait for the boat. I wonder now at my self-control that I didn't shove her off the pier. It would have been justifiable, I do assure you."

"I suppose," said Betsy, grinning, "that she made a pass at your man?"

"Him!" the girl jerked an expressive thumb over her shoulder toward the tall, husky young man. "Oh, no—she wouldn't dare. Bill's too smart for the likes of her. It takes nice old dodos like the major to fall for her line—"

"Say no more at all, Mrs. Forman. She's not used to it," the young man interrupted in the patient tone of one long resigned to the unexpected naughtiness of a badly brought-up child. "We're the Bill McKaye. She's Terry; I'm Bill."

"And," stated Terry with an almost ominous calm, "I'll sing the first slit-wit who calls him Willie."

Betsy laughed. "Well, I should think you would," she answered promptly. "How are you, Bill? Greetings to both of you—and welcome to Halcyon Island, and all the usual stuff of that sort."

Terry stared at her, wide blue eyes startled as though she noticed Betsy for the first time. She caught her breath and turned to Bill, saying hastily, in a tone of keen delight, "BILL! She's one of us! She's BIG! Kind of people!"

"Smile when you say that, angel-puss," Bill protested gently, observing Betsy a conciliatory glance. "Maybe she won't like it."

"Oooh!" said Terry joyously, and flung herself upon Betsy with a bear-like hug that had my heart set as a perfectly swell time down here —like a dumb doll I am. It hadn't occurred to me that there'd be creatures like the Edmonds dames down here—until I saw her. And then the awful thought swept over me that if there was one like her, there might be others. Coming over on the boat, I seriously thought of crawling overboard—only the water looked so wet. How old are you?"

Betsy blinked and chuckled. "Twenty—do you mind?"

"I think it's swell," said Terry happily. "I'm 19."

"Terry!" said Bill sternly.

"We-ell, almost nineteen—"

NAZI CLAIMS UNCONFIRMED

Berlin, June 13—(AP)—The German High Command claimed today that German planes sank 28,000 tons of British shipping last night. Four merchantmen were said to have sunk in St. George's Channel and four others damaged in those waters and off the Scottish east coast.

Declining Production Raises Egg Prices

Toronto — Declining production, storing operations and export business combined to lift egg prices at this week's auction a dozen during the current week's session of the Toronto egg futures market. After early weakness, butter regained a steady footing.

Light receipts on the egg market this week reflected falling production, and the demand for local consumer requirements against export. Export trade readily cleaned up available supplies. The market closed firm and steady with prices in both sections of trading advanced from 1 cent to 2 cents a dozen. Fair quantities of eggs were moved to the Maritimes and British West Indies, and the former sent forward to Eastern points, the Maritimes taking several lots.

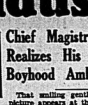
Chief Magistrate Realizes His Boyhood Ambition



Glen. Thompson

That smiling gentleman whose picture appears at the left side of this column will be readily recognized by every resident of this city. None other than His Worship Mayor Glen. E. Thompson, he is, as is also known to lonservetives, as well as taxpayers of the city, the owner of the Purity Bakery, one of Belleville's outstanding producers of fine bread, cakes, and buns.

Long before His Worship thought of entering the municipal life of the city, some twelve years ago to be exact, he toiled at the Oak Hall, former well-known haberdashery of this city. But came the yen to be on his own, and possessed of a tendency since early age to own a bakery, he made the opportunity to realize a boyhood ambition, and purchased his present business.

In a typical, old fashioned, His Worship stated "that he "needed the dough, so he handed the dough." But that was twelve years ago. Since that time the business has thrived, due to a natural business acumen and the desire to give real service to the public. That Mayor Thompson has succeeded in this, is exemplified in the high place which the Purity Bakery holds in its particular business sphere in the city.

The city's chief magistrate is justifiably proud of his business; the service he gives the public, and the staff that is no small contributing factor to the high class daily production of the plant. And the good business man that he is, and which in itself is a tribute to his fairness, he pays tribute to his competitors.

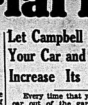
"Sure," he smiles, "I am getting a fair share of the city business, and that's all a man needs."

Truths of a staff made Mayor Thompson in his daily production of high-class bread and other bakery products. The three horse drawn vehicles and two motor trucks distribute his wares to an ever growing clientele.

The mayor first broke into municipal life seven years ago. Since then he has been a city councillor for five years and for the past two years has held the position of chief magistrate of the city.

Let Campbell Refinish Your Car and Greatly Increase Its Value

Every time that you take your car out of the garage you are subjecting it to the vicious attacks of a hundred enemies. It will be drenched with rain; then the hot sun shines through the tiny globules which act as a magnifying glass concentrating the sun's rays on the finish underneath. Sometimes



Matt. Campbell

As time goes on the finish becomes dull and the car takes on that seedy looking appearance that so often exists. When this happens to your car it's time for a new paint job. In a personal interview this week Matt Campbell, proprietor of Campbell's Auto Body and Fender Shop was telling us that his family have been in the auto painting business for the past twenty-seven years.

In pace with the progress of the auto painting business, Mr. Campbell recently installed modern new equipment and increased the size of the auto painting division of his business. Ably staffed with competent workmen the painting division of Mr. Campbell's business is a hive of activity. Mr. Campbell states that with this modern new equipment that they are able to repaint an automobile with a finish that is on a par with that of any factory finish.

Matt Campbell followed in his father's footsteps and in the days before the motor car was so popular as it is today, the late Bert Campbell was known throughout the county for his workmanship in the painting field and many a gay blade in the days gone by drove his carriage around Belleville sporting a "Campbell" finish that glistened.

Today Matt Campbell's Auto Paint Shop is equipped with modern machinery to handle an auto body and fender work as well as painting.

Mr. Campbell is well known throughout the automotive field of eastern Ontario as an establishment that has stood him hundreds and hundreds of satisfied customers.

The Campbell Auto Paint Shop is located at 225 Coleman St.

Ladies Favourite Pastry Flour Always in Demand Because of Its Quality

Consistency of the same high quality that has been maintained down through the years is the outstanding feature responsible for J. S. MacKenzie and Company for Ladies' Favourite Pastry Flour, the patent flour of which is owned exclusively by the local flour and feed merchant.

J. S. MacKenzie

"It has always been the first principle of MacKenzie & Co. to give the people the same consistently good flour," states Mr. MacKenzie. "We could oftimes purchase flour for a great deal less money than Ladies' Favourite costs us, but we could never be certain of securing a consistent grade. Ladies' Favourite Pastry Flour is the oldest brand sold in Eastern Ontario and customers can be assured that the same excellent quality is always maintained."

Ladies' Favourite Pastry Flour was first manufactured in Campbellford, Ont., by the Smith Milling Company of that town and the original name has always been carried. In years past great quantities of this flour were sold throughout the Belleville district, all the leading storeymen of the day having it brought in by the wagon load.

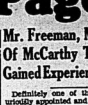
The late L. F. Hughes once owned the exclusive rights for the sale of Ladies' Favourite Pastry Flour with the Judge Jones Milling Company later acquiring the rights. J. S. MacKenzie & Company acquired the patent right a few years ago, the flour now being manufactured by the Lake of the Woods Milling Company, at Brantford.

Although the original coloring and design of the bag has been changed, the wording of the container in which Ladies' Favourite Pastry Flour was originally purchased, has been retained.

Ladies' Favourite Pastry Flour is still "The Old Original" and is better "than Gold"—absolute assurance of consistency of the same high quality which local housewives for years have found in Ladies' Favourite Pastry Flour.

Mr. Freeman, Manager Of McCarthy Theatre, Gained Experience Here

Definitely one of the most lux-uriously appointed and finest equipped theatres in Eastern Ontario, the success of the McCarthy Theatre, Belleville's newest picture house, is in no small measure due to the excellent management of a 'popular Belleville boy, Mr. Vincent Freeman.



Vince Freeman

His experience in the theatre field, however, gained entirely in Belleville, fits "Vince" remarkably well for the position that he fills so capably. During his sixteen years experience in the theatre world, "Vince" has worked in no less than five local theatres, including the three which are now operating.

Starting with the Griffin Theatre Circuit in 1925, "Vince" had his introduction to the picture world at the old Griffin Theatre on Bridge Street. When the Capitol Theatre was constructed, Vince left Griffin's and was connected with the lower Front Street show place, later to return to Griffin's, for a period of two years. During this time he had charge of the old Regent Theatre, which was later taken over by Mr. J. C. McCarthy of this city.

"Vince" is well known in his native city of Belleville. He is a member of the Belleville Kiwanis Club and also a member of the Holy Name Society. His willingness to co-operate and assist in anything for a worth-while cause has been reflected in the generosity of the theatre management placing the McCarthy Theatre at the disposal of local charitable organizations in their efforts to raise money for patriotic purposes.

With the purchase of Mr. McCarthy's theatre interests in Belleville by Famous Players Corporation, "Vince" went to the New Theatre as assistant manager for a period of eight years, and in July, 1938, resigned from Famous Players to accept the managership of the new McCarthy Theatre.

The McCarthy Theatre is equipped with the very latest in projection equipment while modern appointments such as air-conditioning and excellent seating comfort are a by-word throughout the Belleville district. Since March this popular theatre has been operated by Mr. Paul Nathanson, President of the new Canadian theatre circuit, Odeon Theatres of Canada. Temporarily, however, it is under the supervision of 20th Century Theatres, of which Mr. N. A. Taylor, of Toronto, is President.

London, June 16 (CP, Cable)—Following up successful attacks against enemy shipping, the Royal Air Force hammered at Western Germany for the fifth consecutive night last night, causing extensive damage among vital industrial targets.

The Ruhr and the Cologne area were singled out for the brunt of the attacks, carried out by bomber forces. Waves of bombers showered high explosive and incendiaries over the targets, starting large fires before the height of the attack was reached.

Detailing shipping attacks, the Air Ministry News Service said a vessel of 1,000 tons was covered between Emden and Borkum, off Northwestern Germany, and bombs were dropped as the vessel passed 300 feet over the ship. The mast was carried away and a boat was seen leaving the vessel filled with members of the crew.

Sighted Supply Ships

Later the flight of bombers sighted supply ships steaming off the hook of Holland.

When we reached the convoy we chose a 4,000-tonner and climbed just above the height of the masts to make the attack," said the observer aboard one bomber. "As the bomb fell to go, I was sure they were going to hit. We flew through an avenue of Pak (anti-aircraft fire) and, looking back, saw the vessel saw smoke curling up.

Debris was thrown up by the bomb explosions and the vessel undoubtedly was hit, the observer said. Other aircraft, in the convoy, as well as escorting anti-aircraft ships, were attacked with bursts from machine-gun fire.

Several motor torpedo boats were sighted in the same area. The bombers kept on their course, set afire. A cargo ship of 6,000 tons was attacked as it rode at anchor in Netherlands coast between Vlieland and Haselem. A hit in the bow with a glancing blow and the explosion must have caused serious damage.

VICTORY LOAN DRIVE TO EXCEED $600,000,000

Instalment Plan For Bond Purchases Urged by Minister to Pass Beyond Objective

$473,984,150 TOTAL

Ottawa, June 16 (CP)—Victory Loan campaign workers stressed the instalment plan for bond purchases this week as they started a drive to push total sales beyond the objective of $600,000,000 by the end of the week.

With total subscriptions of $473,-984,150 reported at the close of business Saturday officials look for successful results from continued efforts this week.

Today Winnipeg stepped out in front of other cities as the first to pass its objective. The Greater Winnipeg Victory Loan Committee reported subscriptions totalling $98,-430,700 or 103 per cent. of the objective fired for that city.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King in his speech at Brockville over the week-end emphasized the instalment plan under which purchasers of bonds are enabled to anticipate savings over the next six months at no extra cost.

Interest Still High

Officials in charge of the campaign reported interest still high after two weeks of progress. They expect the speech of Hon. Ernest Knox, secretary of the United States War Mission, to close up the drive new impetus for the final week.

Twelve applications from one Japanese concern in Montreal, Dunlop-ville, aggregated $7,000, and the Chinese of the west coast are contributing their share to support of the loan. A Vancouver lady, aged and nearly blind, and her two sisters were bombed out of their English home, bringing some rare old lace to buy bonds.

Evacuated Finns Subscribe

A number of evacuated Finns in Montreal have subscribed with every dollar they could raise.

Hon. Malcolm Hume Edward Island continue to invest and the latest news from there tells that Summerside has hoisted its second honor pennant. In this city the quota and the second exceeding it by 50 per cent.

In a letter and list of individual subscribers the committee today paid tribute to the Canadian Red Cross and associated companies purchasing $2,250,000 worth of bonds.

Moneta Porcupine Mines Ltd., of Toronto, purchased $300,000, and Montreal Light, Heat and Power Consolidated, $250,000.

Asked to Be Done Before Victory

Defence Minister Ralston said the campaign could continue during the week-end to speak in support of the loan at North Bay and Canadians must realize more fully that a vast amount has yet to be done before victory is achieved. He congratulated the city for being one of the first two in Canada to attain its loan quota.

At Sherbrooke, Que., more than 9,000 people pledged their loyalty to King and country Sunday at a rededication ceremony for the "Torch of Victory" which is to be carried across the Dominion to Britain as a symbol of Canadian determination. Then the torch arrived by plane to the Maritimes and today it is in Fredericton, N.B., en route to Saint John.

To Help Forces

Rt. Hon. Vincent Massey, Canadian High Commissioner in the United Kingdom, in a Sunday night broadcast to Canadians, urged support to the war loan so that nothing money could help or labor could make would be lacking for the Empire soldiers when they go into battle.

"Time is on our side only if we use it, only if we bring our great resources into play in time, he said in an address heard in Canada over the National network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation. Mr. Massey spoke from London.

BRITISH FORCES INVADE LIBYA IN GAMBUT AREA

May be Prelude to Campaign to Wrest Cirenaica from the Axis

12 VEHICLES DESTROYED

London, June 16 (CP)—British forces in North Africa smashed across the Egyptian Frontier into Libya and destroyed 12 vehicles in the Gambut area west of Axis held Sollum, an authoritative source said today.

The push into the Gambut area started last night, 24 hours after advance patrols attacked an Italian column west of the Libyan frontier, these sources said.

Military observers took the report as an indication British forces may soon be launching a full campaign to wrest cirenaica from the Axis.

The reports told of a fierce fight in the Sollum area of Northwestern Egypt, No-Man's Land between the Axis spearhead and Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell's first line of Egyptian defenses, and said heavy fighting was continuing. Sollum is a short distance south of Bardia.

Three Nazi reports claimed the German-Air Force destroyed at least 60 British tanks and armored cars and shot down 11 British planes.)

There was no comment on this claim for British sources.)

Four lifeboats in all were lowered by the Robin Moor on short notice before the freighter was sunk. One contained 11 seamen, another 12 seamen, another 10 seamen and a passenger and the fourth three married couples, a child and five seamen.

Those in the boat with 10 seamen and one passenger reached Recife on the Brazilian coast.

According to the Recife survivors the commander of the submarine said he would wireless the position of the lifeboats to expedite their rescue. Upon whether this was actually done depends part on Washington's charges that the attack was a violation of humanitarian rules for submarine warfare.

Whether the Italian ship which took the 35 to Cape Town had been asked in response to such wireless notification was not at once known.

'United We Can Guide And Save the World' Says Churchill to U.S.

British Prime Minister, 'Symbol of Britain Aroused,' Says President Valentine of Rochester (N.Y.) University Conferring on Him Honorary Degree of Doctor of Laws — Premier Notes That His Mother Was Born in Rochester and States 'Our Hands Are Joined Across the Ocean'

London, June 16—(CP)—Winston Churchill declared in a broadcast to the United States today that "divided the dark ages shall return; united we can guide and save the world."

His remarks were in acceptance of an honorary LL.D. degree conferred upon him by Rochester, N.Y., University.

His speech was heard over the British radio and, as he said, "in fact that I think as you do and that our hearts beat as one during the present struggle."

He made reference to his American forebears and to the awarding of the degree "an expression of American confidence—and I shall I say affection."

Mr. Churchill referred to the fact that his mother was born in Rochester and that his grandfather, Leonard Jerome, lived there for many years.

"My own Jeromes were rooted for many generations in American soil and fought in Washington's armies for independence of the American colonies and the foundation of the United States.

"I expect I was on both sides," he said, "Churchills and Jerome. "And I must say I felt on both sides of the Atlantic Ocean now."

The Prime Minister said: "The world is now locked in the deadliest struggle of a ruthless resolve," and he said that "the issue will be decided that resolve would be "as it sides man's seeks."

"It is men and women are hearing that they are spirits, not the people feel that their future and that of many generations is at stake. They are right. They are the character of human society will be shaped by the resolves they make and deeds they do.

All German Consulates In U.S. Ordered Closed

Washington, June 16 (AP)—The United States today ordered the closing of all German Consulates in this country and removal of all German diplomatic officials from those agencies.

Sumner Welles, Undersecretary of State, made the announcement after he had handed a note to an official of the German Embassy.

The order requires the closing also of the German Library of Information and Railway Tourist Bureau—Allied with German Railways Ocean News Agency before July 10.

Welles asserted that this did not imply a break in relations of any sorts with Germany and in no way affected the present diplomatic staff in Washington.

The action was taken, Welles stated, because German Consular officials and the other Nazi Agencies named have engaged in activities harmful to the United States.

Strong Note Sent

The note to Hans Thomsen, German charge d'affaires said:

"It has come to the knowledge of this government that agencies of the German Reich in this country, including German consular establishments, have been engaged in activities wholly outside the scope of their legislative duties.

"These activities are in form of an improper and unwarranted character.

"They render the continued presence of such agencies incompatible with the friendly relations existing between the United States and Germany.

"I am directed by the President to request that you inform your government remove from United States territory all German nationals in the employ of these agencies and consular establishments."

Welles also directed to request that all German consular officers, agents, clerks and employees there of be withdrawn. They should be removed from American territory and the consular establishments thereto be promptly closed.

Welles said that the establishments likewise be promptly closed. He said Germany had two months to withdrawals and closers shall be completed by July 10th."

One of the most important Germans who will have to leave the U.S. is Fritz Wiedemann, intimate friend of Hitler and consul general in San Francisco.

Italian consulates at Detroit and New Orleans were closed some time ago.

Ordered Reprisal

The action against the Italian consulates was mandated as a reprisal for an Italian order requiring the closing of two American consulates in Italy in mid-February.

The action was announced by Welles. The United States several weeks ago forced the recall of Admiral Alberto Lais, Italian naval attache in Washington, on the grounds that he was engaged in the wholesale buying of Italian merchant ships in American harbors. Promptly Italy demanded the recal ler Capt. Wm. Dewitt Beehler, American consul-attache at Rome.

Welles in his press conference that today's step had no relation to the sinking of the U.S. merchant ship Robin Moor which survivors said was torpedoed by a German submarine.

RUSSO-GERMAN BREAK TALK SEEN POSSIBLY FEINT

Question is, is Hitler Preparing Blow Against Britain or Against Russia?

SPLIT IN RUSSIA

London, June 16 (CP)—A reliable foreign source told The Associated Press today that German-Russian relations are approaching a stage where they must either be cemented more firmly in a pan-European scheme or break into open hostility.

The situation, this source said, has arisen from Germany's pressure for more oil, grain and ore from Russia and the concentration of certain Russian leaders that the Soviet Union's influence in these repeated European victories was endangering the Soviet's own ambitions in the Balkans.

Anti-German Russians were said to oppose the German forced French troops in ancient Sidon, northern-most town visited by Gen. Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, Commander-in-Chief of British forces in the Middle East, during his recent visit to the Near East.

Britain's Diet Still Nourishing But Lacks Things That 'Give a Kick'

By RUSSELL LANDSTROM
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, June 16—(AP)—Britain's diet still is nourishing enough, but it lacks the things that "give a kick to life."

That's the latest report from British Ministry of Food.

"We have enough meat to keep up our health, but not enough for happiness," explained Lord Woolton, Food Administrator. "The shortage of meat is affecting our food enjoyment most. Because the English meal is built around meat. It's hard to get any real substitute.

"And our diet today is dull, many of the things we eat are not enough to have foods high in nutrition value. We have not many foods served as colorfully as possible, which is bad for the appetite and morale."

Lord Woolton is hoping for quantities of canned meats and fish from the United States to put the "kick."

The government has found that, as people eat less meat, they also eat fewer vegetables. A campaign has been launched to increase the consumption of vegetables other than potatoes, as a means of giving variety to a diet, which permits only four shillings (about $1) each worth of meat a week for a family of four.

No Shortage of Onions

"One thing is sure," Lord Woolton told me, "there will be no shortage of onions. We'll have so many onions in our sandwiches we'll be able to stand it in Britain."

Despite a cold, late spring, delay of the growing season and the impact of shipping losses on the food supply, the Ministries of Food and Agriculture reported that Britain is not confronted with a shortage of vital foods.

As to the fundamental foods essential to maintaining physical life, Lord Woolton declared, there is the nation is generally as well off, and as good as a year ago.

Notwithstanding the unhealthy lives we have been living," he added, "the King's Government still rates the health of the country has been remarkably good."

Cheese has become a rarity. It is no longer sold in packages and rationing places either haven't got them or guard with enormous care. The ration is hardly enough to go around. Instead, the cheese-parings for the tea at Mrs. George Graham's, Trent Road.

Take Key Defences Of Levant Capitals To Further Drive

French Troops in Ancient Sidon Fall Back Within 12 Miles of Beirut

KISSOUE CAPTURED

London, June 16—(CP)—British and Free French forces have advanced to within five miles of Damascus and 12 miles of Beirut after capturing the key defences of both Levant capitals, Allied reports from the Middle East said today.

Allied columns were closing in on Damascus from the south, after driving the defenders from Kissoue, ten miles to the south, lending point to repeated assertions here that fall of the French capital could "be expected shortly".

Further west, a column driving up the Lebanese coast forced French troops in ancient Sidon, northernmost town visited by Gen. Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, Commander-in-Chief of British forces in the Middle East, during his recent visit to the Near East, to fall back to within 12 miles of Beirut, another south, driving inland from the coast, occupied Djezzine, 11 miles east of Sidon.

Costly Collision For Morley Duetta Of Prince Edward Co.

Being in collision with a police car should be serious enough at any time, but it is good practice to stop at the scene of such accidents, at least 46-year-old Morley Duetta, of South Bay in Prince Edward County, realizes today. Duetta was convicted of dangerous driving and also of operating a motor car with defective brakes when he appeared before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., in today's local police court.

On the dangerous driving count Duetta was fined $15.00 and costs and his driving licence suspended for three months, while on the operating of a motor vehicle without adequate brakes, Duetta was assessed $10.00 and costs. Traffic Officer Percy Ellis told the court that day that a motor vehicle driven by Duetta had been in collision with the Provincial Police cruiser car driven by Provincial Police Constable on the Bay Bridge road daturday morning and had failed to stop at the scene. Inspector Gardner gave chase and later gave Duetta into the custody of Traffic Officer Ellis.

"The brakes of Duetta's car were practically useless," testified Ellis when Crown Attorney R. C. Donnan, K.C., asked the witness for a description of them, at the trial.

"I'll get 'em fired," was the only comment Duetta made. He paid the fine.

$531,000 of Victory Loan Remains to be Subscribed Before the End of the Week

A Large Number of People in City and County Have Not Subscribed Yet

DUTY TO COUNTRY

With two weeks of the Victory Loan campaign already gone, Hastings County has subscribed $1,689,-900, according to figures released today by campaign officials. The amount subscribed was that placed in the hands of officials up to Saturday night.

Five hundred and thirty-one thousand dollars still remains to be subscribed if this county is to attain the quota allotted to it. Other counties, some of them neighboring ones, have already achieved their quotas and are well on the way to subscribing substantial amounts over and above that originally set for them.

Hastings City officials believe, can do the same thing. But it cannot be done unless the whole-hearted co-operation of all classes of its population is forthcoming.

To date the response has been good. But the last mile is the hardest. It is always an uphill struggle, and it is necessary for all to put their shoulder to the wheel, it can be accomplished. Hastings County industry and business have come forward in a manner expected of them. Many of its wealthy residents have subscribed in the way in which they should. Large numbers of the working class and salaried men and women have done yeoman service in buying bonds within their capacity.

But there remain a lot of people who, as yet, have not signified their intention of coming to the county's aid. It is to these people that attention to the serious state of affairs is drawn. Canada needs their money. She is asking no favors. She is not on a prosperous rate of interest. It is their duty and privilege to come out to the Empire and civilization to do this. They are asked to leave their subscriptions as soon as possible with the canvassers.

WORKERS ALL:

Back up our Fighting Men

Their cause is yours

• This is a mechanized war. Never before has the responsibility for the outcome of a war fallen so squarely upon the shoulders of those who toil in workshop or office, factory or farm. Proudly labour has accepted the challenge. Throughout the land, night and day, rises the clang of metal and the tireless hum of industry—of men and women at work.

Canada's war effort calls for huge sums of money. To turn back the tide of tyranny, to protect your right to be free, more ships and planes are needed, more tanks and guns, more food for soldier, sailor and airman. You, the worker, are asked to invest your savings, and some of your wages, in Victory Bonds. You are not asked to give, but to lend. All of Canada is your security for repayment. A good rate of interest and a gratified sense of loyalty are your rewards. Invest generously and cheerfully.

Act now. Make sure your dollars will have a glorious share in helping to crush the barbaric power that would make slaves of free men.

10% cash and the balance in monthly instalments. Bonds may be bought in denominations of $50, $100, $1000, and larger, if, as a result of unforseen contingencies you are unable to meet the instalment payment a loan may be arranged with your bank with your Victory Bond as collateral security. Dominion Government Bonds have always enjoyed the highest degree of marketability and there never has been a time when they could not be readily realized upon for cash.

HOW TO BUY

Telephone your local Victory Loan headquarters and an authorized canvasser will call upon you immediately, or place your order directly with your bank or Trust Company. Don't delay. Go to the telephone now and call your Victory Loan headquarters.

LOANING TO ONE'S COUNTRY.

This third and last week of the Victory Loan campaign will see no let-up in the zeal of the drive for subscriptions, but rather intensification on not only the part of the canvassers but of the citizens. Hard work will be put into the effort and there is expected a ready response on all sides by those who have not yet subscribed and also by those who feel that they should increase their subscriptions, and so increase their share in the victory effort.

The appeal is really the appeal for the sake of all that which counts most in the lives of the people, their country and their country's institutions. Protection or defence of these institutions and civilization is essential today for they are menaced by an enemy, bent on destroying everything that does not agree with their tenets, which in themselves are vicious and narrow. There can be no security in the world while the vile principles of a so-called Hun super-race are held and while nations like Germany and Italy are ready to cancel treaties and thoughts with that of looting the world.

The appeal of one's native land, therefore, is most potent. It stands for everything the word loving, love and respect. Without these life would be impossible to those who are accustomed to and love liberty.

There is no nobler cause than to serve one's country and put on its altar all that one can in service and means.

The war is an all-out effort between democracy and evil forces in international society and one's service that comes short of the greatest humanly possible quite fulfils the obligations of such a time.

Wordsworth delivered over a century ago in another time of danger, these stirring words:

"We must be free or die that speak the tongue
That Shakespeare spoke, the faith and morals hold
That Milton held."

It is freedom and life to serve one's country by defending it with body, intellect, soul and means. These endowments and means have been possible through the heritage which has come to Canadians of living in a land of freedom.

The War Loan provides one way of so expressing that devotion to British democratic ideals and foundations and makes possible so many avenues in which the strength of the nation can be built up. The dollars go to make the millions of dollars which help to raise armies and to keep the factories at work on war contracts, so as to provide the defenders with every resource possible to make certain their native land's defence. The subscribing of these dollars is also a very comforting and satisfying thought to the citizen for he has shown his loyalty.

ANSWER TO HUN LEAFLETS

One night last week the Nazis distributed leaflets from planes over three villages in the east of England while British bombers were over two great German industrial centres and the port of Boulogne. The leaflets were littered with handbills in this latest German effort. In English on both sides of the bills there were printed predictions of starvation for Britain as a result of the war in the Atlantic.

But Britain has the facts to show that there is no question of starvation for Britain. The London Times replied that the German claims of ship losses are grossly exaggerated, that British defence against U-boats has been "brilliantly successful" and that the problem of Nazi bombers is nearing solution. The newspaper also stated that German diet is deficient in the necessary vitamins. This condition does not exist under food conditions in Britain.

The German Propaganda Ministry ought to know by thi stime that they are wasting their time trying to disturb the British people by such falsifications of the truth as the handbills contain. They cannot frighten the calm of the British people by handbills when their bombs do not.

The situation in the Atlantic is improving and enemy submarines are finding British counter-measures very costly to these raiders against British and Allied shipping.

OURSELVES AND OTHERS...

BY

THE REBEL

("Textiles are largely made of wood and so is cattle fodder, some of which is dyed green so as to make it 'eatable'. In Norway this fodder has caused diseases among cattle.").

"Come, pretty cow," said Truthful Joe,
"Gulp down your latest fodder—
The color's right, you must allow,
Although the taste is odder."
The cow made answer with a snort:
"I will not get outside of
Such wretched meat, which is, in short,
The food the old cow died of."

"Ungrateful beast!" cried Joe. "Adopt
At once a mood demurer!
This graceless conduct must be stopped—
'Tis treason to the Fuehrer!
If timber coat and vest and trews
Will serve for man the plodder,
Why should a Nordic cow refuse
Its ersatz cattle fodder?"
The answer came both loud and free,
And free of all flapdoodle:
"Because I am a cow, you see,
And not a Nazi noodle.
Be off, poor Joe, and set this down
Among your memoranda:
One cannot feed a cow, you clown,
On lost green propaganda!"
—Lucio in the Manchester Guardian.

Ruddy-faced, eager, they stood in a straight line, heads thrown back, chests out, pride of achievement glowing in English eyes. They would within a few seconds receive the coveted wing of the Royal Air Force observer, and their sergeant's stripes. Between the ages of 19 and 23, these handsome English youths, the majority of them from the playing-fields of well-known English public schools, had been in Canada but four short weeks, finishing their courses under the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan.

It was a delight to talk with them. In varying accents, in which were mingled the crisp clipped words of London, the roll of the Devonshire Hills, the bur of the Midlands and the soft tangy accents of Inverness and Wales, they chatted with newspapermen as they were awaiting their turn to be photographed at the Picton Airport.

"Dashed jolly country, this Canada of yours," quoth a tall Cambridge youth, "But you know, I shall be sort of pleased to get home again and do something about this man Hitler."

From Hants, Bucks, Berks (they call it Barkshire) Norfolk, Suffolk, Essex, Devon and other famous shires of England they came. Clear-eyed, eager, they stood in little groups, their new "wing" pinned on their tunics, after the ceremony. In low voices they chatted with each other, but it was plain to be seen they were champing on the bit. They had had a lovely time over here, but their place was in England.

They fairly ran from the parade-ground they they were dismissed. The proud chevrons of a sergeant-observer had to be sewn on tunics, as had the coveted "wing."

Soon they will be in the van of the fighting. Soon they will have achieved the climax of months of "plugging" at courses. The supreme moment when they see a Hun plane in their bomb-sights is not far off. And these young, care-free British youths, like our own Canadians, will point their faces to the West, and by their daring, rich traditions and faith in the cause for which they are fighting, will emerge victorious.

"God, I just happened to think—I put my meal ticket in my hip pocket!"

ON THE RECORD

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

The Robin Moor

New York, June 16—Between the two passages of the Neutrality Act, 'way back in 1937, and the sinking of the Robin Moor, there has been inserted a long parenthesis.

The Neutrality Act was a typical gesture of a Congress dominated by years of isolation. It sought safety by powerlessness and by that democracy is weakened whenever it sticks up for its rights. When the act was passed there was no war and most members of Congress were living in the comfortable illusion that none was being planned. The act came as a god-send to Hitler, who was able to quote it as proof that, given a war, the United States would be uninterested.

Hitler never thought the United States would be uninterested. He is much too keen a student of naval power, world commerce and geopolitics to have made any such short a view of things. Hitler is not an ideologue.

But he did think the Neutrality Act would give him a powerful advantage at the outset, and that it would delay and confuse all world opinion many months.

This is precisely what it did. It took no more than a wit on Hitler's part to foresee the results. Every American who took a trip abroad thought and study to our world distress. Every American publication protested against the act, and many of them against the guaranteeing our neutrality, its inadequacy and its effect on the position where we would have to fight or be unmercifully pushed around.

The United States is not a nation of pacifists. Any poll of opinion allows itself 95 be pushed around, and resents it. Even the Neutrality Act gave him the pretext he needed.

By that act the United States, in advance of any war, relinquished its historic policy of the maintenance of the freedom of the seas and abandoned primary neutral rights in respect of the freedom of the seas. It lost its leadership of neutrality and put it into Hitler's hands and it removed nine tenths of the difficulties in his attempts to prevent the war.

That act has confused public opinion for the last four years. For by it the American people were persuaded to believe that a nega- [illegible]

[illegible] they removed the right half of the brain from a backhanded, sideeyed man. According to all the laws, he should be completely incapacitated because his abilities to speak, to write, to talk, to focus his eyes or to eat normally should have been wiped out by removal of the dominant half of his brain. But their assessment he is now able, after three years, to walk with the aid of a cane, and to speak and see after the operation. His only difficulty is in training his right hand to write and he has only slight mental impairment.

The fourth classic case is the history of brain surgery was that of a 37-year-old man who was found by an X-ray examination to have an extensive tumor of the brain. The tumor had begun to spread so Dr. Karnosh and Dr. Gardner did the same radical removal of half of the brain. The patient is back at work today more than three years after the operation.

Dr. Karnosh said the removal of half the brain is a daring and formidable procedure. If the subject survives the acute ordeals of shock, hemorrhage and infection, the clinical results are definitely encouraging and are looked upon by some as something short of miraculous.

Eager to Live Again.

These patients came to the hospital in a sleepy, half-conscious condition, making no particular effort to live again after the operation.

The physicians, of course, did not expect half the brain to grow back its activity and were amazed when three years after the operation, with only partial loss of movement of the left leg and left arm. When the patient walked away from the hospital without a drop of the left corner of his mouth, he began to recover some movement of their left legs, which out of the left. Others set down and began to revise the textbook concepts of how the brain operates.

"The greatest difficulty in these cases is to find the lesion, to concentrate, to deliberate at great length in a hurry and to be escorted protected mental procedure." Dr. Karnosh and other physicians questioned that this difficulty was a disadvantage.

Surgeons Remove Half Brain, Result Only Partial Paralysis

(By STEPHEN J. McDONOUGH)

Cleveland, June 16—(AP)—It is possible to live with only half a brain, and now Dr. Walter Dandy of the recent American College of Surgeons has proved it. At two Cleveland Clinic physicians, Dr. Louis J. Karnosh and Dr. Ernest A. Gardner, he has the cases of three persons who lived more than two years after the removal of one half halves of their brains removed.

A fourth case has been presented except that after operation he found the woman was expecting woman patient got over-confident, insisted on walking without a cane, fell downstairs, and died from a brain concussion five years later.

All four operations were done because of incurable tumors which would inevitably have been fatal without surgery. Dr. Dandy says carefully selected patients cannot be said to be their former selves, because the entire personality is changed. He left side (the right half of the brain controls the movements of the left side of the body), but they are left with little difficulty.

The functions of the brain are not identical in their function and seem to act as two drivers of a locomotive, each working with each other in keeping all movements in balance.

Mental Upsets Eliminated.

Thinking, according to other reports of brain specialists, seems to be a function of the whole brain, but is not impaired by cutting out part of it. Most mental upsets seem worries, hysteria and chronic palsy have been eliminated in many cases by cutting away the nerves from prefrontal lobes of the brain, just behind the forehead.

"Motor" function — the elimination of nerve impulses which control a person's bidding — is a separate activity of the brain. The Clinic and physicians found that removal of the right half of the brain caused partial paralysis of the left side of the body, but did not include the face or certain movements of talking.

The operation affected the left arm and hand more than the left leg, so that the patients may still able to carry on concentrating the movement of the muscles below the hip, indicating that the left half of the brain took over part of the "motor" activity of the right half of the brain, but not all of it.

The operations cast new doubt over old conceptions that nerves separate and distinct motor, sight, smell, thought and other localized areas of the brain.

Talk During Operation.

Many people still believe that the slightest touch on the brain will result in immediate death. Actually it is one of the toughest organs in the body, as the Cleveland clinic physicians have proved. You can even be awake and talking to the surgeon, while he cuts into your brain and there is less sensation than you would feel in an appendicitis operation.

Naturally enough, the brain is completely insensitive to pain, even though it controls many of the nerves of the body. One of the patients was operated on sitting up with only a local anesthetic over the scalp. The scalp was injected with the local, then a flap was cut and the skull was drilled and sawed open and the left half of the brain was removed. After the operation the patient was filled with the normal body salt solution and the skull cap replaced.

Then the patient who fell downstairs, but her accident was incidental and unrelated to the operation. The second patient lived only twenty-nine days after the operation, but again her death was not due to the brain operation but to her brain but to an infection.

Left-Handed Case.

An amazing thing, still a puzzle to the physicians, happened after

ILLEGAL USE OF UNIFORM

Recently a civilian was sentenced in Washington, D.C., to pay a $100 fine or serve 90 days in jail for wearing an official army uniform.

The purpose of this law is to protect civilians wearing military uniforms and to protect the dignity of the uniform.

The national defence act of 1918 makes it unlawful for a civilian, except certain persons, to wear the American army, navy or marine uniform, or any distinctive part of it.

It is also unlawful for a civilian to wear a uniform any part of which is similar to a distinctive part of the uniform.

A violator is liable to a fine not exceeding $300, or to imprisonment not exceeding six months, or to both.

Violation constitutes a civil, not a military offense.

The offender is liable to the Department of Justice and the courts, not to the military authorities.

A honorably discharged soldier, sailor or marine however, may wear his uniform three months after his discharge, and members of military organizations are permitted to wear uniforms on the occasions when provided they include only such parts as are prescribed by the government to distinguish them from civilian dress.

When the government disposes of obsolete or surplus army, navy and marine corps clothing to private dealers it specifies that all distinctive marks must be removed.

The purpose of this law against civilians wearing military uniforms is to protect the dignity of the uniform.

To protect civilians who wish to wear old army clothes the federal government has from time to time issued information as to just what parts of the clothing constitute distinctive parts of military uniforms.

Part of the distinctive parts of the army uniform that may not be worn by civilians are the uniform buttons, coat collars, collar insignia of rank and grade, while, and olive drab caps, hats and overcoats, service coats and officers' white shirts.

On the other hand, underclothing, shirts, trousers, socks, leggings, shoes, boots, rubbers, galoshes, gloves, mittens and raincoats are not considered distinctive and may be worn by civilians.

Dying army clothes a different color prevents them from the distinctive class and any part of a distinctive uniform, though considered distinctive, may be worn by civilians if a radical change is made in the color or by changing the style of the collar.

ITALIAN GOV'T FREEZES U. S. BANK ACCOUNTS

Action in Retaliation for That Taken in United States by Order of the President

ISSUE STATEMENT

Rome, June 16 (AP)—The Italian Government froze United States bank accounts in Italy today. The Bank of Italy instructed other banks to block the accounts of Americans.

Those who sought to withdraw funds this morning were turned away.

Italy's decision had been foreshadowed recently in a commercial issue which said:

"Following the blocking of Italian and German funds and the requisition of all foreign property by the President of the United States, the Fascist Government decided ordering suitable measures in reply, has ordered immediate registration of all property belonging to the United States and existing in Italy."

The only United States property in Italy is the Embassy, which enjoys extraterritorial privileges, but Americans thought the decree would result in property in Italy of all Americans.

Sheet of Cash

(The speed of the Italian counteraction prevented Americans from replenishing their cash by withdrawals from accounts.

(The freezing of Italian credits in the United States was ordered Saturday, after banking hours in Rome, and the Italian measure came with the reopening of banks after the week-end.)

United States holdings in Italy were understood to be comparatively fre—(Washington dispatches said they were estimated at $142,000,000)—and most businesses already have been closed up by government conditions while funds in Italy have long been more or less blocked. Death Penalty

It was still unaware this morning that German army in the United States had been frozen and officials declined comment.)

Machinists Strike Still in Progress

Washington, June 16 (AP)—The National Mediation Board, balked in its attempt to settle a machinists' strike involving 11 shipyards of the San Francisco Bay area, proceeded today to prepare its recommendations for publication.

The Board has no power to enforce them, but President Roosevelt has told both management and labor that the American people expect "the impartial recommendations" of the Board to be accepted.

Strikers at the yards belong both to the American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organizations. The A.F.L. members voted 500 to 400 yesterday to continue the strike and the C.I.O. contingent went along by a vote of 360 to 36.

Both want $1.15 an hour and double pay for overtime. They have been offered $1.12 and time and a half.

The strike has held up a $500,000,000 shipbuilding program.

Japan Receives Sharp Protest By United States

Tokyo, June 16 (AP)—United States Ambassador Joseph C. Grew has personally delivered today a sharp 500-word note of protest to Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka against Sunday's Japanese bombing of Chungking in which bombs fell on the American safety zone, narrowly missing the U.S. gunboat Tutuila.

The Ambassador acted after receiving definite notification of the bombing from Chungking and without waiting for instructions from the state department.

The Embassy received word that at least five bombs fell in the vicinity of the U.S. Embassy at Chungking and of the gunboat.

One bomb was said to have exploded fifty yards from the entrance to the Embassy air raid shelter, damaging offices and breaking windows in the Embassy itself.

Food Situation in Belgium Reported Worst in Europe

Washington, June 16 (AP)—Clandestine markets with exorbitant prices, inability to obtain imports of fats and cereals are JUST, if at all, over one-half of peacetime consumption. The normal consumer's meal and fat rations were said to be probably between one-fourth and one-third of consumption before the outbreak of war.

These rations, however, are largely theoretical and the population in the urban and industrial centres are unable "to get their full allowances," the Department added.

There were many clandestine markets where people of means can buy additional food at exorbitant prices.

Hitting out that Belgium is basically dependent upon imports of large quantities of food and feeds, the Department said the British blockade as well as Nazi control over the Belgian economy have aggravated the food situation.

First R.A.F. Observers Given Wings at Picton

Picton, Ont.—(Staff)—Youthful Britons, the majority of them from the playing fields of Britain's public schools, stood proudly at attention at the Picton Bombing and Gunnery Air Station here on Saturday morning and had the coveted "wing" of an air observer pinned on their tunics. At the same time the young graduates received the observers' badge designated their new rank of sergeant observer.

The class, one of the largest to be graduated since the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan came into being, is the first observers' course of Royal Air Force personnel to complete training in Canada.

Wing-Commander P. W. Lowe-Holmes, chief instructor of the school and second in command of the station pinned the wing on the young observers. Air-Vice Marshal McKean, of Ottawa, who was inspecting officials at the ceremony, was prevented from doing so by flying business. Wing Group Captain C. W. Keith, officer commanding the station, was also absent due to illness. He sent his regrets and congratulations to the graduating class.

Sent to Various Posts

In the shadow of the large hangars, with Fairey Battle bombers aligned behind them, the young Britons proudly stepped forward as their names were called. Today they will be sent to various parts of Canada, the class chosen for the first time since its inception, and within a short time they will be in England and in action.

In a brief address following the ceremony, Wing Commander Lowe - Holmes congratulated the class. "You have been in Canada a month,", he said, "and have had heavy barriers to overcome, due to personnel and equipment. These, however, have been cleared up and we look to the future with confidence. The success of the class has been due in no small measure to the tremendous enthusiasm of its members, and their keenness and ability has been a revelation to us."

"You are very worthy representatives of the Royal Air Force, and the results achieved by you have been most gratifying. I feel a bit envious, for as an enemy target which gets in your sights and I envy you the chance you have of striking a real blow for Britain and the Empire."

A beautiful silver trophy, emblematic of efficiency in firing and bombing in the air, was presented by the officiating officer to Sergt.-Observer V. J. Hale, of Crowthorne, Bucks. The rosy-cheeked English youth received the congratulations of his classmates as they quietly crowded around him following the presentation.

Sergeant - Observer David K. Fawkes, a first-year man at Cambridge, was high man of the class.

Want to Get Home

Chatting with newspapermen following the ceremonies, the ruddy-cheeked Britons practically as one man voiced their eagerness to get back to England and in action against the Nazi hordes. Canada is a grand country, with its green trees, bright lights and good food, but there was a big job to be done "over home" and they were anxious to get at it.

Practically every shire in England was represented. Such famous names as Norfolk, Suffolk, Hants, Bucks, Herts, Sussex, South Wales, not to forget Kincardine and Fifeshire in Scotland were talked about. Sergt.-Observer P. W. Jarrett has his home in Singapore.

Stories of Night in R.A.F. Station With 15 of Score

London, June 16 (CP)—A vivid account of a night in the fight-plane station during a heavy enemy air raid was described by a flight-Lieutenant.

"Reports began to come in of enemy bombers crossing the eastern London," he said. "In the distance bursting shells and the anti-aircraft some of them had arrived already. Grim-looking night-fighters taxied into position and took off at a signal to the 'Drome Chief.'

Then the first night fighter—a double-header—returned.

Here's what he told the intelligencer officer: "I saw a dark shape on my left. It gave him several squirts of my gun. He went down in a steep dive. I followed. All the time I kept pumping more bullets. I definitely filled him full of hole but he got away in the end. He went down so low I nearly hit a tree trying to keep on his tail and he disappeared at nought feet." The intelligencer officer credited him with one damaged.

Two Crashes

Other night fighters returned and soon three intelligence officers were busy taking down their stories. "One had had two combats," continued the flight-lieutenant. "In the first he had seen his bullets strike home and the enemy aircraft go in a steep dive. He was not sure about that one. The second fight was better. He had fallen off the bomber just before it went down, nearly vertically. But the intelligencer officer only credited them as two damaged "at one time being."

By this time the phones in the station were ringing almost incessantly. "This is the police station at So-and-So. We have a German here." This is H.Q. The Hun was prisoner No. 2 for the night. "This is the Observer Corps. There is one down at So-and-So."

"Then the tousle-headed pilot was off again, after a second patrol. He was told that the one down probably was his. The time and place where it crashed seemed to agree with his report. Then a squadron-leader came in reporting one definitely destroyed. Just outside London a raider flew right in front of me," he said. "I gave him a long burst and he went down—straight down in flames."

Fifteen All Told.

H.Q. reported again, with a score of fifteen. A flight-lieutenant came in and said he had shot a plane down into the sea with both engines blazing. Another flight-lieutenant, "with the purple and white ribbon of the D.F.C. showing beneath his open flying jacket, reported shooting at a raider south of London and seeing it go straight down. He was credited with one "damaged".

As dawn the last of the fighters returned, including two crews who had been over enemy airdromes.

A tall, fair-haired pilot in a heavy flying suit, got a Dornier 17. It was his second victory over France in a few days. "I followed him in to land," he said, "and nearly hit the ground doing it."

. . . We went to breakfast with the station score at four destroyed and the tousle-headed pilot still allowed only one "damaged"!

Axis Communique

Rome, June 16 (AP)—The Italian High Command today said a battle is in progress on the Salum front, on the Egypt-Libya frontier, when the British forces launched an offensive action yesterday.

The communique claimed the British forces have been "repulsed everywhere with considerable losses." Several days of preparation preceded the offensive, the war bulletin said.

(British advices confirmed the frontier had been crossed and that 12 Axis vehicles in the Gambut area had been destroyed.

Of the 181 motor trucks in British Honduras 146 are of United States and Canadian manufacture and 35 British.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was starting to go out and ma was talking on the telephone saying. Wait a minute, Benny, dont go out till I get through here. I want you to do something for me, what were you saying, Maud, I was talking to Benny.

And she kept on phoning til she got through, saying, Now, what was it I was going to send you for, it's completely slipped my mind, all I remember is it had something to do with food.

O, ma, I bet you were going to send me for a box of mixed chocklits for the bridge ladies, I said, and ma said, The Bridge ladies dont meet here for 2 weeks.

Then I bet you were going to send me for 2 pounds of hard candies so you'd have them in the house and wouldn't have to think of them again, because hard candies keep for 2 weeks, they keep forever, I said, and ma said, Not with you in the house.

Being a good answer, and I said, I bet I know, speaking of food, you were going to tell me I could go and stay at Jimmy Brink's for supper if I wanted to, O, ma, that's a good idea.

And that's just what it's going to remain, and idea, ma said. Now I remember, I want you to go to the hardware store and get me a box of little tacks, she said, and I said, Well aw gosh, ma, I mean O wimickers, what kind of food is little tacks, or any size tacks?

I didn't say they were food, I said they had some connection with food, ma said. Nora wants to tack some oilcloth o nher kitchin shelfs and kitchin shelves certainly have a close connection with food, ma said, and I said, Well gosh, ma, do you mean right away?

O no, any time next week or next year will do, and if you're not back here in less than 5 minutes with those tacks you'll wish you had been, ma said.

The result being I was back with them in less than a half an hour.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Mother-in-Law Proved To Be a Mother

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Behold, an original contribution concerning mothers-in-law!

I'm an only-child, and my mother-in-law is an only-child, and when I was first married, I was a bad time to keep from crying.

Then she said: "The important thing for a woman who's going to have a baby is to learn to be happy. It's bad for a child to come into the world if the mother before the fight has really begun, by a feeling of not having been treated right and all the things an unhappy mother can hand on. You take this little scrap and if your baby comes here a happy child, I shall be more than repaid."

"That was the beginning of a love affair between us that I'm glad for my own mother. We weathered the shocks that are inevitable in years old, and a happier, more flourishing child could be found.

Confette Daughter-in-Law"

This letter speaks for itself. Nothing that I could add would make more plain the folly of any bride going into a family with a chip on her shoulder. Contrary to tradition, the jokesmiths, all the old wheezes about the blighted life a mother-in-law, here proved to be her best friend. Let's hear more about mothers-in-law who are pretty good sisters, after all.

friendliness way and said: "This is something between you and me; we're just two women together and we're going to have the middle out of this. You're going to have a baby so my first grandchild ... I don't want you to be worried about rent or paying bills. You take this little sum which I've managed to put in bank against just such a fight you'll be able to face them."

"Naturally, I hesitated because I had been a stand-offish with my mother-in-law, and when I saw the cheque, I had a hard time to keep from crying.

"Then she said: 'The important thing for a woman who's going to have a baby is to be happy. GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Visiting Problem

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When my sister was married, she went to live with her husband's parents. She and my wife corresponded with each other, and I wrote her husband a letter, telling them both that any time they were in town, our house was at their disposal.

Now I have heard through my parents that they are coming here on a vacation in June, and are to stay with my parents during their vacation.

Should my wife and I go to see them first, or wait until they come over to see us? We feel that they should come to see us first. They have not told us of their coming here.

G.A.

I'm sure that your sister and her husband will write you and your wife very soon of their plan to come to your city for their summer vacation. Certainly, the best policy for it was extremely kind and generous of your wife to offer them the hospitality of your home.

However, if they don't get around to writing you, don't stand on ceremony about who visits whom first. Let them know to inform you of their visit, don't make any bones of it, be hospitable and cordial, and either be at your parents' home when they arrive, or at the time as you possibly can, to welcome them.

What To Wear

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have been invited to an elaborate wedding to be held at four o'clock in the afternoon of a large hotel. Would you give me some advice as to what is proper for me to wear?

U.A.

Wear your best-looking day costume, the same as for a dressy affair. This may be a silk dress, a dressmaker suit, or an ensemble, perhaps with a fur neckpiece, corsage, to match, or to contrast, should be carefully chosen.

Graduation Invitation

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it appropriate for a girl to send High School graduation announcements in the form of invitations to her sister's boy friends?

Most schools have rules about the number of graduation invitations or announcements that are assigned to each graduate. However, it is quite proper for her to send your beau-of-the-moment. She would be under no obligation to do so, don't see much point in sending these announcements to your sister's boy friends.

When to Answer

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

How soon after a wedding invitation has been received, should it be answered?

The invitation should be answered as soon as possible after it arrives.

COURTESY TIP

Dr. Myers On Church Schooling

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

In these days of war and destruction, fears and anxieties, and the things which are basic are destroyed is certainly desirable.

Religion at home and at school provides this emphasis. As never before, we parents and our children need this helpful and sustaining influence.

Unfortunately so many parents and children, whole families, take vacation from Sunday school and church, and tend to relax in their religion at home, during the summer.

Here let me say a word about church schools during the summer, often referred to as "Vacation Bible Schools." In this church program the church building, or the church yard daily throughout the week as a school building for the children of the community who wishes to attend. It is free to all, as a rule.

Church workers are relieved for several hours a day. Their children are relieved for a time from the physical and moral hazards of the street. Moreover, these children receive wholesome moral and religious training under the guidance of fine persons.

Activities at School

In these schools children learn from the Bible and other great literature, with their hearts especially stirred to memorize more from these sources. They sing together to make music with instruments. They create with crayons, paint, and with blocks. There are dramatic art and learn games they can play in their homes, or on the play ground. They learn to do many things together, co-operatively.

In order to make the vacation church school effective, there must be more than much reading aloud by older children to younger children, or by adult groups. There could be a dozen or more such small groups in a building. Many high school girls could be attracted to help.

While I would encourage considerable teaching from the Bible and religious and moral training, I wish that music, drama and pageantry were employed as much as these ends.

I like the atmosphere of tolerance which the vacation church school affords, from children of all faiths or no faith. I wish each child attending school could be made to attend at the church or Sunday school of his parents' faith or preference.

WITH enterprise and initiative brought to bear on new and imaginative ideas, you will find opportunities for a very progressive and successful year. It is a time for pushing with zeal and determination toward high goals of achievement, in either sense activity involving the public welfare or your private enterprises. There should be fine co-operation from those in authority who are impressed by the merit of propositions submitted to them. Although the element of friendship may figure as well, favoritism does not under an expansive rule.

Those born on this day must find their fortunes and accomplishments under a very progressive influence. Intelligence if they will but direct their talents energies to make them important constructive channels. Major projects of worth are sure to win the support of those in influence and authority, either socially or financially. Personal achievements may win public recognition. The financial status is enhanced by such expansie and worthy vibration.

A child born on this day should be extremely energetic, aggressive, public-spirited and independent-minded. Quick-witted and winning its way by friendly interests as well as its inherent talents.

Fifth Columnists In Your Home!

Joliet, Ill., June 16.—Are you harboring a fifth columnist in your home?

In all innocence you may be playing host to a subversive army, Lewis Wilson, 47-year-old president of the National Institute of Laundering declared today, if so, with the coming of summer, termites and other insects with voracious appetites will destroy woollen fabrics of all kinds in homes from coast to coast.

Termites, he said, are the greatest pests in action. Through their industrious work they can leave an entire house inside wooden structure of a house and its furniture, leaving an empty shell that collapses under the first strain.

Not satisfied with devouring your home and its furnishings, these termites will also make a meal out of your wardrobe. Pieces of damaged cloth submitted to the testing laboratories for analysis proved to have been the terrible dessert. They based her estimate of breed their way through a pile of clothes folded in a dresser drawer, making a tunnel from bottom to top.

Their fifth column work against any fifth column, the Textile men advised housewives to turn spy to examine closely their dresses, coats, suits, bureaus, chests and other places where garments are stored or kept to see if termites are at work.

Food Rationing Helps Improve British Health by Establishing Digestive Troubles

The wisdom of the adage that we are what we eat with our teeth is being proved anew by what is going on in Great Britain now.

With the "Battle of the Atlantic" began to affect British food stores and the whole nation had to go on rations, persons began experiencing epidemics of disease, especially in the winter months when many had to sleep in air raid shelters poorly heated, ventilated and crowded.

But now after a year and more of rationing there is evidence the health of the nation has actually improved. A medical man of international reputation recently returned to Canada after spending a year in England, assures me this is true.

While overeating now virtually impossible, but necessary food elements digestive disorders have declined. We all know that digestive disorders are a great strain on the heart, so with indigestion, dyspepsia, and other ailments in decline, hearts have been subjected to less stress. With balanced diets more common, dental health has correspondingly improved.

Morale has also been helped, too. For as Lord Woolton, the Minister of Food, observed, indigestion is the mother of despair.

Instead of having to get along on a fraction of the meat they used to eat, Eggs are scarce, and so is fruit. So they're eating more vegetables. With it comes necessary to conserve fuel and with the cooking facilities limited, the foods are being prepared more simply or eaten raw, instead of being cooked to death and the vital juices thrown away. All bread is now whole wheat, with the vitamins intact.

BANCROFT GRANT LAID OVER TILL DECEMBER SESSION

Reeve Dr. S. S. Lumb Seeking Money on Motion Passed in County Council in 1924

HOSPITAL ACCOUNTS

Resurrection of a motion passed in County Council in 1924 awarding a grant of $75 to the Village of Bancroft for administration of justice in that community brought about one of the sharpest verbal duels-heard in austere Shire Hall in many years at the closing session of council.

The glamor of argument, which were lighted on Wednesday when Reeve Dr. S. S. Lumb-Bancroft, moved for the grant, and which has instantly brought similar requests from reeves of other towns in the county, were given additional fuel when the council left for a committee of the whole of ways and means shortly after four o'clock.

However the argument ended in legality of the motion was brought into the debate and the motion that was laid over until the December session in order to give all parties concerned an opportunity to secure legal advice.

At that the motion of Dr. Lumb for the sum of $300 representing grants for the years 1939-40 and '41 was defeated by a vote of 11-7.

Prior to this the motions of Reeves George West, Madoc, Elzear Kerr, Tweed, and Wm. Lloyd Limn, Marmora for a grant of $75 for similar reasons were badly defeated.

Reeve Lumb Seconded

When Chairman Wallace Ware and Means Cj. B. Bedford, announced the motion of Dr. Lumb, Limn had been lost, Dr. Lumb immediately jumped to his feet. Visibly incensed, he told the council in no uncertain terms that the motion was illegal. "I want my money," he said, "and I am going to get them. If the motion was not legally rescinded, then I claim $225 from this council. Then you can rescind the motion if you wish."

"If the town of Bancroft agrees to have the motion rescinded then I will support him," Reeve Charles Kerr, Tweed, stated.

"I agree to nothing," said Reeve Limb. "I want what is rightfully due me. I stand for my rights and what this council is doing is not legal."

When the motion of Reeve West to Bancroft was introduced, Chairman Bedford, Reeve Lumb in support, said the council was only a poor benighted community. We pay for everything. The hospitals are, he; and pulpwood that leaves the north country. We have no County Industry while the south gets a bonus. Let's be for ourselves."

Appealing for the grant, he produced a copy of a motion passed by the 1924 County Council which authorised an annual grant of $75 for the costs of administration of justice. This grant had been paid every two or three years up to 1938, Dr. Lumb pointed out, but had been paid by the treasurer on the power of the motion on the books. This year it was felt the motion should be brought before the council as a whole.

"We in Bancroft," he said, "have no armoury, our population is decreasing and men are going into the army, the mills, factories and mines. Everyone else also going into the army and factories. Our population is down. No relief paid for. We need and want this grant."

Herdsman Reeve's Reply

Reeve J. L. Churcher, Dungannon, supported the motion. The Bancroft Community, he said, "serves the entire northern district organizations are based from what part they come, have the use of the hall. We pay insurance and for patriotic purposes especially."

Reeve Wm. Lloyd Limn stated that he was of the opinion that these communities should contribute something to the upkeep of the hall. "If Bancroft gets this grant, then every village in the county is entitled to it. We have to pay for our roads, and Bancroft can afford to pay, too."

The reeves of Tweed and Marmora agreed with Reeve West. The motion was defeated at this point and was defeated. Following the post-motion argument, Deputy Clerk Hamilton suggested that the matter be laid over until the December session in order that legal advice could be secured. The motion was defeated, the grant was rescinded and the matter laid over.

Accounts Passed

Gordon Barclay, administrator of the Belleville General Hospital, in a brief address to council asked—for the co-operation of the members in the collection of indigent hospitalization accounts.

He urged the immediate assistance of heads of municipalities in view of the fact, he said, that the Finance Board of the Hospital felt that more success would be achieved in the collection at the present time, when money was more plentiful than it has been for some time.

The hospital Mr. Barclay pointed out, was taking all accounts, separating and placing them under groups, then subdividing them and putting them into collectible form.

"We will try our best to co-operate even better with the county in the future," he said, "and in this way hope to cut down the amount of outstanding accounts. We realize that some of the old accounts mean hard collecting, and we respectfully ask county and municipalities in this sale the full co-operation of the matter."

"In spite of war conditions and the fact that several changes had to be made in the old wing, the hospital building program went over, he said. "Consequently we had to borrow $100,000. We are paying this off with another loan and with present working organization and the co-operation of the county council and others, we believe we shall soon get on our feet."

Thanking the council for their reception, Mr. Barclay informed the body that the office staff of the hospital were prepared to put the patients through a stiff examination as to those regarding their ability to pay, when they were admitted to hospital. More stress will be placed on collections, he said, and those who can afford to pay, will be made to do so.

In spite of increased costs, he said, the hospital rates had not been raised. As an example, he quoted the meat bill for the last month was $776 as against $441 of a year ago.

Grants paid were: Bancroft Red Cross Hospital, $200; Coe Hill Red Cross Hospital, $100; after a motion for $300 to each hospital was defeated 17-4; to Wollaston Township for old Hastings boundary road, $300; motion for grant 11-6; to town's Taxidrivers of North, West and East Hastings, $15 each; British Empire Cheese Exhibition for Hastings County Cheese Makers, $150 to be Saving Certificates; Ontario Farmer Extension Work, H. L. Pair, $75; Protection of Agriculture, Hastings County Branch, $300; Belleville Pair Board, $200; County Pairs, $100, after a amendment to grant Belleville Pair $150 was defeated 11-6.

Bylaws

Bylaws authorizing the county to borrow money; for equalization of county assessment; to commit persons to the House of Refuge; the levy rates for current purposes, roads and bridges, for education and for patriotic purposes; were passed their third and final reading and the council adjourned sine die.

British Prisoners In Germany Receive Red Cross Parcels

That British prisoners of war in Germany do receive the parcels sent out, was the statement the Canadian Red Cross is shown by a letter to Mrs. H. L. This was the first parcel that Pte. Oxley received and in a letter to his mother, Mrs. Collins' sister in England, he spoke of the many wonderful things it contained.

SECOND SESSION 19TH PARLIAMENT CLOSES TILL NOV. 3

Members Will Assist Home Over Recruiting and Loan Drives

ESTIMATES PASSED

Ottawa, June 16.—(CP)— Freed from their parliamentary duties until November 3, members of parliament today turned to aiding in their home constituencies the two popular war campaigns — getting men and money, now going forward across Canada.

The second session of the 19th parliament of Canada completed its normal sessional work Saturday and adjourned until Nov. 3, unless war developments or early passage of the St. Lawrence Waterway project through the United States Congress makes it desirable to call parliament together at an earlier date.

Members of the special committee on war expenditures, directed to report before the end of session on ways of effecting economy in the spending of billions of dollars on war projects, on contracts, supplies and supplies for them, will work in their home districts during the summer and are expected to resume their task shortly.

The few days before adjournment were devoted to consideration of estimates for the current fiscal year. A total of $535,000,000 was approved for non-war expenditures, which, added to the $1,300,000,000 for war purposes, marked a new all-time high in governmental expenditures.

To meet this the highest taxes in Canadian history were imposed. Income tax and excess profits tax rates were expected to add $200,000,000 to the revenue, besides being given to a total $1,150,000,000.

Ontario Asked to do Share

With the remainder of the money to come from voluntary lending by the people, the government members are expected to do their share in pushing the $600,000,000 Victory Loan campaign past the objective.

They will also assist with the recruiting campaign for air force airmen for the army. Defence Minister Ralston, one of his last utterances before adjournment besides the help of members in this drive, announced that the Minister of Labor, Pensions and Health and Agriculture would address speech speedily on Saturday and the House completed its work shortly after 3 p.m. after starting at 11 a.m. Eastern Standard Time on Monday.

Only 24 members four more than the quorum were in the House at a round of applause marked the passage of the last estimate.

Two tasks were preventing coalmining areas Clarence Gills (C.C.F. Prince Rupert) and Colin Cameron (Johnston (N.D. Bow River) urged the government to frame a national fuel policy for the maximum utilization of Canada's coal in these times and resources estimates were studied.

Mr. Johnston said while importation of coal increased miners in Alberta were idle. Alberta went short because of lack of a market for their product. Mr. Gills said the coal mining industry was in a state of chaos.

On pensions estimates Pensions Minister Mckenzie assured the House equitable pensions on way of pension would be paid to men serving overseas with the auxiliary services and their dependents.

Opened on Nov. 7, 1940

The Parliament which opened Nov. 7, 1940, was adjourned Dec. 6 for the Christmas recess. It resumed on Feb. 17, then adjourned for the Easter recess from April 4 to May 5.

During the session the Senate held 31 sittings. While some 200-odd words were placed on Senate Hansard, the official report of speeches and proceedings, the Commons Hansard published 2,000 large volumes of more than 4,000 pages containing approximately 2,000,000 words of oratory.

On the whole the people's representatives in Parliament took kindly to the increased taxation, including the prolonged debate on the new Gasoline Tax of three cents a gallon. The government on all parties urged should not apply to Canadian Industry.

Considerable Debate

There was considerable debate on the proposal to increase the tax on incomes that provinces which holders of Canadian securities exempted from the payment of provincial government securities. The direct and guaranteed securities of the $5 billion British royal assent was given there were 49 bills, which included private bills, most of the latter having to do with companies.

Newport News, Va., June 16.—(AP)—United States shipbuilders were disclosed Saturday to be turning merchant vessels into "escort" airplane carriers with only ninety days work in an urgent drive to put more anti-submarine fire power on the seas.

Refuse to Allow Training Planes Help in Blackout

Toronto, June 16 (CP)—Attorney General Gordon Conant of Ontario, Chairman of the Provincial Civilian Defence Committee, said last night he had received word from Defence Minister Ralston that the use of training planes in blackout practices would be refused.

Col. Ralston, acting for Air Minister Power, said he had consulted with the air staff responsible for operations and training and "they agree with the suggestion that nature are being continually received and as you will appreciate, if they were complied with it would entail the aggregate a great waste of time."

The Minister's letter added that there has been an "absolute" prohibition placed on the use of training planes for other than training purposes.

Conant said, that officers of the Royal Norwegian army, and naval services training in Toronto said their planes might be used in the blackout demonstration, provided they could combine their regular training operations with the demonstration.

Toronto's 14 municipalities will be blacked out for 15 minutes Wednesday night in the city's first demonstration of this nature. ".

Seven-Game Winning Streak Takes Yanks to Within 2 Games Of Lead and Cleveland Indians

Jo DiMaggio Hits Safely in Last Twenty Eight Games

CARDS ON TOP

By JUDSON BAILEY
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

New York, Yankees are scourging the American League again with a slashing, seven-game winning streak that has Cleveland Indians trembling on their pedestal.

At various times this year the Yanks have been good, bad and indifferent—mostly the last — but right now they are hot.

Yesterday they polished off the Indians for the sixth time in nine meetings this season and trimmed the Tribe's margin at the top of the league to two games. They had pummeled Saturday Bob Feller is not invincible and they came right back with a whipper game against young Jim Bagby and won 13-1.

The Yanks let all their scoring in the first three innings, Joe DiMaggio providing the climax with his 11th home run to extend his hitting streak to 28 consecutive games. After Bagby was removed in the fourth, Charley Keller singled and the bombers won one-hit hurling, but it was too late.

The first 3 games of the series attracted a total of 83,181 fans and the Sunday doubleheader program as a whole drew a turnout of 186,751, including capacity crowds in Boston in the American League and a mob in Detroit.

Cards Divide with Dodgers

The Brooklyn Dodgers were fighting for first place in the latter end of the 4-1-0 spectacular saw them divide a doubleheader.

Kirby Higbe pitched seven-hit ball to hold the Redbirds in subjection and the Dodgers added to four runs, three on a ninth-inning homer, as the Flock won the opener 8-1. Then Ernie White retaliated with a two-hit masterpiece to take the nightcap 3-0.

A four-game Chicago series saw the Red Sox sweep two games from Chicago White Sox in 2nd of a Boston twin bill 15 hits in the first game and 11 in the nightcap.

Philadelphia Athletics battered St. Louis Browns 10-4 with a 16-hit offensive and an eight-hit pitching job by Johnny Babich. Rain prevented the scheduled second game.

Tigers Get Split

Washington and Detroit divided their bargain bill. Washington was aided by eight walks in addition to eight hits, but managed to pitch the Tigers to a two-hit 7-0 triumph in the first game. A homer by Bruce Campbell and a double by Pat Mullin brought the Tigers a 4-2 victory over Washington's ballot play after six innings in the nightcap.

Cincinnati Reds took a hefty hold on third place in the National League by nailing New York Giants 5-2 and 7-3.

Chicago Cubs and Philadelphia Phillies split their twin bill. Claude Passeau pitched a 5-0 shutout for the Cubs in the first game and the Phillies, with an eighteen hit winning rally took the second 8-4.

Pittsburgh Braves beat Pittsburgh Pirates 5-1 on the five-hit pitching of Sailor Bill Posedel and a 14-hit assault on five Pittsburgh flingers. Rain halted the second game.

Dahlgren to Cubs

The Braves and Cubs also had the distinction of making the only deal of the week-end as the deadline fell for trading in the majors. Boston sold first baseman Ellsworth (Babe) Dahlgren to Connie Mack's Athletics and the Phillies sold Outfielder Al Lakeman to

Senate Leaders To Overhaul Property Seizure Bill

Washington, June 16 (AP)—Senate leaders talked today of overhauling the War Department's property seizure bill to make it would give the United States government a club against hoarding of materials needed for defence instead of granting it blanket authority to take over anything useful in furthering the arms program.

As it stands, the measure would permit the President to "requisition or take over, either temporarily or permanently, property of any kind or character" in the interest of National Defence.

This broad language has drawn substantial opposition. Reports circulated during the week-end that the President soon would advise Congress to write its own ticket on the legislation as long as the main objectives were preserved.

Netherlands Reject Any Japanese-Proposed New Order for E. Asia

Batavia, Netherlands East Indies, June 16 (AP)—The Governor-General of these Netherlands Pacific possessions, speaking in the midst of an economic crisis with Japan, declared today his government had notified Tokyo it emphatically rejected such thought" of including them in the Japanese-proposed "new order for East Asia."

Addressing the opening of the Legislative Assembly, Governor-General A. W. L. Tjarda Van Starkenborgh Stachouwer recalled Japan's entry into the Rome-Berlin Axis and declared an Axis victory "would mean destruction of the kingdom of the Netherlands."

He asserted further that the East Indies Government would guard carefully against the introduction of any non-important raw materials to Germany.

Reviewing the situation with Japan, the Governor-General said the Batavia government had pledged to grant the Japanese extraordinary privileges because "a people in our line of conduct, or half-hearted application thereof, could not be expected."

Japanese Cable Home

Kenkichi Yoshizawa, Japanese representative, received instructions from Tokyo early today to leave for this next move, and then cabled Tokyo asking the meaning of "certain points."

The Governor-General said the Indies was producing war materials essential to the Allied cause, delivering them to Britain and China against diversion.

One of the objections the Netherlands Indies raised repeatedly during conversations with Japan was that materials supplied to the Japanese might find their way into Germany and Soviet Russia.

The Governor-General intimated that the Netherlands Indies had reached the limit in its trade concessions, preferring to leave the discussion of commercial matters in the hands of diplomatic and commercial representatives, but said the door to Netherlands East Indies "is only dented" by Japan.

He said his government had notified Japan emphatically that it rejected any thought of including the Netherlands East Indies" in a greater East Asia order "under the leadership of any power whatsoever."

The Physician Must Know People As Well as Disease

When a patient is ill enough to be confined to bed either at home or in hospital, the question arises as to how much the physician should tell the patient about the probable outcome. Of course, if the condition is not serious that is plainly and gamily are so told and no problem arises.

At a lecture at Harvard Medical School, Dr. Charles R. Austrian, Johns Hopkins, stated that to gain full co-operation of the patient he was given a choice. He could tell him the exact nature of his illness. Hard facts can be softened by careful statements. "When a patient is seriously ill, it is justifiable for the physician to express the hope that his chances for recovery are better than they seem to be at the moment; but if he is fatally sick, it is not often well to tell him that he will not recover".

Of course, there is no rule about this but Dr. Austrian states that the full truth should be told to some responsible relative or friend. "Generally a partial truth is worse than a lie, for complete information will spare avoidable sorrow".

When the physician does not consider the patient to be suffering from any serious symptoms, the patient is considered a "neurotic". In former days this type of patient was sent to go home and forget it; today he is given a thorough examination and an attempt is made to find out why he or she feels it necessary to consult the physician.

However, Dr. Austrian points out that some of these "neurotics" do have real or organic conditions and are not merely imaginary as all. "There are many people", he declared, "who apparently have no organic disease but who, when careful studies have shown the cause of the pain, weakness, dizziness, heart palpitation and other symptoms, the physician cannot tell the difference between a neurotic (thinking an ailment to be present) and the early stage of some disease".

From the above it is evident that a physician must not only know disease but know people so that he can speak the right word to his patient, whether he thinks the outcome will be fatal, is uncertain, or will be favOrable.

For use indoors a rubber clothesline has been invented that is equipped with plastic hooks to hold garments.

AT THE BELLE

"I Wanted Wings"

With throttle wide open and motors running smoothly, the best picture of the year settled into the Belle Theatre on Saturday with exciting and dramatic effect. The picture is the Paramount aviation epic "I Wanted Wings" starring Ray Milland, William Holden, Wayne Morris and Brian Donlevy, and featuring Veronica Lake in a sensational newcomer. Veronica Lake, and lovely Constance Moore.

The new film was made with the cooperation of the entire United States Air Corps, with the result that the flying scenes are the most thrilling depicted on the screen, and with the sound ring of fact about "I Wanted Wings". Even the fiction of its story is plausible.

Milland, Holden and Morris are three young cadets who come to Randolph Field, ready to go through the Army Air Corps paces preliminary to becoming fliers. Milland is a society boy, Holden a garage mechanic from the Cornbelt, Morris a football hero. The drama, the fun they have, the anxiety, the thrills, are all part of the story, as the film takes us through the various stages of their wing-winning career. Brian Donlevy plays the part of a flying instructor who endears them when they falter during their training period. All in all a remarkable and thrilling story performances.

Veronica Lake is the gold-digging ruthless night club singer, who almost ruins the hard-built career of Milland and Holden. Beautiful and unprincipled, the honeyhued schemer goes "on the make" for Milland, after tossing aside Holden. When she gets into trouble with the police she hides herself aboard a giant "Flying Fortress" before it takes off for maneuvers in a mock night bombing raid. She causes the bombers to stray, and dies in the wreckage. Although it is an unsympathetic role, Miss Lake succeeds in doing such a marvellous piece of acting, she can't help adopting her. There's no question this girl is headed for Hollywood fame.

Of uniform excellence is the performance of the beautiful Constance Moore, in the role of a part straight-from-the-shoulder girl who stands for a national magazine, who falls in love with Ray Milland, to the utter despair of Holden.

The audience shares the emotions of Ray Milland, William Holden and Wayne Morris, as they go through the flying course. In the first time up, the thrill of soloing, dive bombing, and the terror of the crashes. Of course, there have their fun, too, and their are moments of hilarious comedy in the story.

"I Wanted Wings" is way up in the Paramount as genuine picture entertainment.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Goodbye Mr. Chips"

"Goodbye Mr. Chips", James Hilton's charming novel of the life of an English school teacher, is now playing at the McCarthy Theatre in the long-awaited screen adaptation, which brings to outstanding fulfillment his "dream". In "The Citadel", Robert Donat, together with Greer Garson, beautiful English actress.

Third of the pictures filmed in the M-G-M's English studios, "Goodbye, Mr. Chips" tells the story of a kindly schoolmaster, starting his career at the age of twenty-three a veritable institution in a big English school and seeing the sons and daughters of boys destined to become great men. As "The Citadel" dealt with medical ethics, so the new picture goes deeply into the heart of education. Donat brings deep understanding to the role, which carries him through four periods. His makeup is enhanced by the psychology which makes the character fairly live at each age. Miss Garson is a compellingly skilful actress as well as beautiful. Terry Kilburn, the appealing youngster of "Lord Jeffrey" in "A Christmas Carol", has an interesting role, playing four generations of boys who attend the school, grow up, and send their sons back.

Dramatic highlights include the rescue of the heroine in the Tyrolean Alps and a spectacular air raid during the World War, with football and cricket games at famous English schools adding thrilling and exciting moments. Skilful human interest touches are supplied in the deft direction of Sam Wood.

"Dark Streets of Cairo"

An excellent second feature presentation "Dark Streets of Cairo", which features Sigrid Gurie, Ralph Byrd and Katherine DeMille, is also now showing at the McCarthy Theatre, plus the latest World news events and interesting shorts. A lady patrons who received coupons for some during last week.

CHAPTER SEVENTEEN

"SHE WAS 18 two weeks ago," said Gill sternly. "We had to wait until she was 18 to be married, on account of her father doesn't exactly take to me—except with a shotgun—"

"It's funny, too. I've always thought Pops was so smart," Terry cut in breathlessly. "He's been a great disappointment to me ever since he admitted he didn't like Bill."

"Admitted is putting it pretty mildly," said Bill. "In fact, it's a miracle we got his consent."

"Oh, well," said Terry, lifting a shoulder in a little shrug of dismissal. "Pops thinks money is important and that Bill ought to have had some before we married or at least a job. You see, Pops is a bit stuffy and old-fashioned."

"And there was another fellow in the running—"

"Not with me, he wasn't," Terry cut in brightly.

"Who had money and a job and a down-payment on a bungalow?" Bill went on, as though he hadn't spoken. "And of course Terry's father thought she needed her head examined when he discovered that she wanted to marry me instead of the other fellow."

"Poor Pops!" Her father's stupidity seemed a pitiful thing to the wide-eyed Terry. "I've had almost any difference about money when you're in love So Bill and I waited until I was 18, got married, were invited here for 30 days' free board and room, and we can worry about money and a job later. There's always plenty of time later on to worry—but you have to have fun and good times and be happy now!"

Obviously the thought struck her as brilliant. She beamed happily at Betsy and then at Bill. Bill slipped her hand through his arm, drew her close to him and bent his good-looking head above hers for a moment. The look they exchanged made Betsy's eyes sting with tears — a fact that she knew would have made them look with amazement and derision.

And then Bill looked up at Betsy and said almost apologetically, "I know it's a bit wacky and terribly young, but she's kind of cute and I can't help it—"

"You better had," said Terry blissfully. "You're stuck with me."

Tom came striding down the path to them. "What's holding you people back?" he demanded. "I've installed the Edmonds in the Gray Gull cottage, Mrs. Edmonds thinks it's too, too divine."

"Who would!" said Terry darkly and looked sharply at Tom. "What cottage is farthest from the Gray Gull joint?"

Tom's eyebrows went up ever so little, but there was a twinkle in his eye. "The Cardinal — at the other end of the beach," he told her promptly.

Terry nodded. "Then we'll take the Cardinal, thanks," she said firmly.

Bill, scandalized by her unmannerliness, said quickly, "It's considered polite, angel-puss, to let your host assign you to your guestroom, Mister Tom. They've got other plans for this Cardinal cottage maybe."

"I warn you all — if I'm in sound of Mrs. Edmonds's mike, I'll murder her," said Terry fiercely. "I'm a patient woman, but I am stand just so much—"

Betsy laughed and slid her arm around the girl. "Never you mind, Terry, I meant you to have the Cardinal instead of Gray Gull. I'll show you where it is."

"See, Bill?" said Terry over Betsy's shoulder. "I told you she was our kind of people. The gal's got gumption."

"Too bad it doesn't rub off. Maybe you could acquire a little," said Bill, as he picked up the suitcase they had brought and he and Tom fell into step behind the two girls.

Terry stood on the deep looking at the Cardinal cottage, her eyes wide with delight.

"Bill," she gasped. "Oh, Bill, it's lovely! It's scrumptious! It's gorgeous! What I mean in—it's awfully nice, isn't it?"

And it was. The cottage had a large living room with walls and woodwork white. Its furnishings were upholstered in brightly patterned cretonne in which a design of redbirds and green woods predominated. Over the mantel there was a large framed picture of a cardinal and his mate, and Betsy had taken her color scheme from the picture. There was a small but very compact bedroom, a tiny bath and a kitchenette and dining alcove. It was all very complete, very new, attractive. Terry took it all in, tried to stammer her thanks to Betsy, burst into tears, and flung herself into Bill's arms.

"Which," Betsy told Tom as they tiptoed away, "is as good a place as any to leave them."

"You folks fo' Halcyon Island?" asked the porter as he shouldered the new, inexpensive luggage. "Yes, right over this way. Dey's some other folks waitin'."

Natalie and Brooks exchanged amused glances, and followed him. On a beach at the end of the boardwalk a man and a woman were sitting; the woman about 36, Natalie decided, neatly dressed with a smartness achieved by care and exquisite taste rather than the liberal use of money. A woman with a round, pretty face, by no means dull-brown eyes that were very stiff-lashed in contrast to the taffy-blonde hair that she wore in a smooth knot low on her neck. The man was about 30; physically fit, quite distinctively good looking, handsome was not but not too new.

Natalie and Brooks paused as the porter put down their bags and said, grinning a little, "Here some mo' folks what's waitin' for de Halcyon boat."

The two on the beach stood up and there was a moment that was a little awkward — until the man held out his hand to Brooks, saying cheerfully, "I'm Donald Heath. And, of course, this is Mrs. Heath — June."

"How do you do? My name's Mac—Simpson," said Brooks, remembering just in time that he and Natalie were masquerading. "And Mrs. Simpson."

He thought the other man looked at him curiously, an odd tightening about his mouth and eyes; but the next moment he told himself that was because he had so nearly made a mistake in giving the name he and Natalie had agreed upon.

"Funny — I have a feeling I've met you somewhere," Donald Heath admitted, and the girl with him smiled in apology.

"That's the curse of being a newspaperman. You are always quite sure you've met people before, and you go around trying to pin names to the memory—"

Brooks and Natalie very carefully didn't exchange glances, but each was conscious of a tiny shock. So Donald Heath was a newspaperman, was he? That meant it would be only a matter of moments until he would remember where he had seen them before and "pin names" to the memory. Brooks told himself, annoyed, that the whole idea had been crazy anyway—their attempting to hide themselves behind inexpensive clothes in a place like Halcyon Island.

Kidney Acids Rob Your Rest

Many people never seem to get a good night's rest. They toss and toss—fix sandals and count sheep. Often they blame it on "nerves" when it may be their kidneys. Healthy kidneys help purify the blood. If they are faulty and fail, poisons stay in the system and needlessness, backache, backache often follow. If you don't feel right, try Doan's Kidney Pills—for half a century the favorite remedy. In every locality good looking, highly recommended people use it. Ask your neighbor!

Luckless Fisherman Turns Tables on Pals

Jack Ericson, Oshawa fisherman, is now a firm believer in the old adage that those who laugh last, laugh the loudest," even when it comes to fish stories.

Fishing in Lake Nipissing, Ontario, over the week-end, Ericson proved to his fellow fishermen friends in the party—at least for three or four hours—that he was the best fisherman and pickerel, the biggest of which topped the scales at 9¼ pounds.

The inevitable ribbing followed, and by the time he got decided to call it a fishing day, Ericson was still without a bite of his own.

A minute after landing at the dock, he decided to take another try, and with the taunts of his pals ringing in his ears, started on a lone foray to the fishing grounds.

But an hour later he strode into the camp with the pals were busy photographing the haulz. There was a smile on his face as he never did a word as he walked past his buddies, but their jeers soon died in amazement. In Ericson's hand dangled a pike that later tipped the scales at 18½ pounds.

THE WAR TODAY

By DON GILBERT
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

The fact that war has been one of the war's best for Royal Air Force Bomber Command recently spells the core of German war industry, Ruhr Valley, has been effectively attacked.

On the other hand, British industry has maintained its 24-hour production schedule almost unmolested by German night raiders.

Unfavorable weather has been suggested as the reason why there as no European weather reports are available on the far side of the Atlantic, it is not possible to be sure that this is the case. Yet it seems unusual that the weather, for a number of nights in succession, should be favorable for the R.A.F. bombers, which have made a long flight to German targets, and at the same time unfavorable for Nazi raiders which have come to the short flight across the English Channel to London.

One possibility that the British authorities are not overlooking is that the German air force is reorganizing for another all-out drive on Britain in the hours of daylight. German aircraft designers have British before it is possible to answer them.

Lack of information regarding casualties sustained at this or that various resorts is making the job of the Free Press correspondent difficult, it is stated as, quite often, it is necessary to visit personally each of the various districts before the desired information can be obtained. In the opinion of the vacationist, Chamber of Commerce officials and the Canadian National Railways resort owners and cabin owners will be kept busy, both constantly as to rates and accommodation.

That a great many Americans are desirous of spending their vacation in the Canadian Playground is the fact that approximately one-fifth of the membership of the Chamber of Commerce are from the United States, just across the border. Inquiries from Toronto and Western Ontario are also frequent, it was stated.

of the 167—the height at which it performs best—to 30,000 feet.

Although the size of the British bomber and fighter production is secret, Hanston said that all of a sudden the British squad was in first place speedwise.

"We have been held up somewhat by part suppliers," Hanston said, "but we have caught up and are being made all over the country you couldn't expect all of them to be here on time."

The engineer said an aluminum shortage also had slowed production but reports indicate that the company is beginning to tap plywood and plastic to replace aluminum. Meanwhile, The R.A.F. is to have more than 200 British bombers and fighters, for aluminum castings add forgings.

Arrested on Charge Man Breaks Jail But Soon Recaptured

Dorsin Akey of 'Tweed gained his liberty from custody for twelve hours on Saturday night, when he broke jail, but was soon after to be picked up again on Sunday morning and placed in the county jail at Belleville where two additional charges were laid against him.

Akey was arrested on Saturday by Provincial Constable Hagen on a charge of illegal possession of liquor, and was placed in the cells while the constable was busy with other matters. He was found absent from his cell in the village, Akey with another prisoner, Vincent Brown, of the district is making his way into Tweed early on Sunday morning and was taken to Belleville. He was charged with jail breaking and disorderly conduct, and will face further charge of having liquor in his possession illegally.

New Type U.S. Bombers As Fast as Fighters

(By EDWIN STOUT)

Baltimore, June 16 (AP)—The first test flight of a new bomber being built for British aboard it to Great Britain, was made by Glenn L. Martin Company's building Pilot Elmer Boland.

It is faster than the B-26, which the Martin Company is building for the United States Army, but it has less range and bomb capacity, Boland said. The new bomber is a twin-engine, mid-wing, low-wing monoplane with two vertical stabilizers.

They were shown the new bomber and a huge flying boat under construction for the army's B-19, the world's largest bomber. Newspapermen were asked by a navy representative not to reveal the flying boat's construction, range, speed, or bomb capacity.

"The new plane for Britain is a twin-engine bomber," Boland said. "We will start shipping them to Britain in July, but I'm not free to say how many will be over. The dual combat we expect them to do will require speed and the latest types of pursuit planes."

The model is known as the Martin 187, and will be called the "Baltimore" by Britain. It is a fast, swing, medium bomber with two 1,-600-horsepower engines. Company Hartson said it is faster than any bomber now in the air except possibly the British Mosquito bombers, which could out-speed it at very high altitudes. The critical altitude used the winter months to apply to their production the lessons of the Battle of Britain, and how new models are said to have been developed. Some of the guns which proved most vulnerable to R.A.F. fighter fire have been made more available in quantity, it is possible that the new and daylight fighting on a large scale, whether or not the German High Command wants it, means an invasion of the British Isles.

At the present the Germans are being cautious not only in night bombing of Britain, but elsewhere as well, by the R.A.F. Apparently something is afoot, and several British regiments—was attempting to smash up the Lebanon—Syrian Valley and drive a wedge between Damascus and Beirut.

Allies Straighten Lines

These advances indicated the British and Free French forces had straightened their lines to give them a uniform penetration of 25 miles into Syria, whereas since they invaded the French mandate eight days ago.

The Royal Air Force command at Cairo reported yesterday that planes of the fleet air arm had torpedoed an "enemy" vessel near Beirut, the Lebanon capital. The Allies have been bombing from calling the Vichy French the "enemy" add hasn't made that word for the Axis powers.

But while British and Free French advances were being reported, a spokesman in Cairo declared reiterated that officials were trying to settle things amicably in Syria.

Authoritative sources here said the British and Free French forces are subjecting the Vichy troops to heavy pressure in the central sector of the British advance into Syria and Lebanon despite British efforts "to avoid unnecessary bloodshed" in the conflict with the Vichy French, British Information Service announced today.

The Vichy command Kissoue, 19 miles south of Damascus, and Sidon, 30 miles north of Beirut "in spite of the strong opposition offered by the Vichy troops," the communique said.

"Although every effort has been made by the Commander-in-Chief to shed in the operation of which the object is to avoid unnecessary bloodshed in the operation of which the Vichy troops are subjected to heavy pressure in the central sector," the Command added.

Redhead Expects Axis Slow Against British

"We must not allow our minds to be distracted from major purposes by these fascinating guessing games. One thing at least can be said with confidence about it is not Russia but the British Commonwealth which dominates Hitler's strategic thought.

The newspaper declared Hitler "can be expected to attack with the "maximum blow against British before Russia gets up to full strength."

The same feeling is strong in authoritative circles. These sources have said repeatedly German movements in the east disclosed no defeat and that the real blow might be launched against Britain within a few weeks.

Crippe to Return to Moscow

London sources said there was every reason for assuming that Sir Stafford Cripps would leave London last week after a year in Moscow as British ambassador to improve Anglo-Soviet relations, would return to the Russian capital.

Previously, the Ambassador was said to have expressed a feeling that his mission had not been entirely satisfactory results and hoped to return to Britain. He arrived in Commons unless urgently requested by Prime Minister Churchill to reassume his ambassadorial duties.

Cripps arrived here today, however, said he would leave for Russia as soon as the consultations for which he was summoned were over. There was no indication as to how long these would last.

'Kid Glove' Handling Of Syrian Situation Criticized by Press

London, June 16.— (CP)—Kid gloves, British press critics declared, situation was criticized by the News Chronicle today which said editorially that one of the reasons the progress of the campaign has been so slow is "that we have been reluctant to spill French blood and have fought with kid gloves on."

"We cannot afford that", the paper said. "In Syria, as in many other places we are literally fighting for time. We have certainly cannot afford to add to the difficulties of Vichy careful about saving a few Vichy lives.

"Vichy is not France. We must take the long view of the future of France and we must be ruthless for her sake as well as our own.

Kissoue moved immediately across the river Aswad to Hatra, within five miles of the gates of Damascus, while another column, circling to the north and east, reached Adaiyi and came within five miles of the city in that direction, Jerusalem reports said.

Richard Kennedy, Associated Press Correspondent with the British forces advancing, said the column operating in the Djezzine sector—made up of Australian, British and Indian troops, several British regiments—was attempting to smash up the Litani River Valley and drive a wedge between Damascus and Beirut.

Allies Straighten Lines

These advances indicated the British and Free French forces had straightened their lines to give them a uniform penetration of 25 miles into Syria, whereas since they invaded the French mandate eight days ago.

The Royal Air Force command at Cairo reported yesterday that planes of the fleet air arm had torpedoed an "enemy" vessel near Beirut, the Lebanon capital. The Allies have been bombing from calling the Vichy French the "enemy" add hasn't made that word for the Axis powers.

The possibility that Russia is not opposed even within Soviet ranks if he made further concessions was suggested in a broadcast from Finland Sunday that the Red army is fighting against the alleged "German appeasement policy."

Moscow radio heard at a Moscow broadcast Friday that "it was not to be assumed that Germany, despite the stress directed against Russia "gave the impression the commanding circles considered Germany's military preparations against Russia "as the principal task."

The Daily Herald suggested the military rumblings might be intended merely to "scare Stalin into stepping economic concessions" but added:

NAZI SUPPLY

A smaller force of bombers attacked docks at Dunkirk, on the French coast, and a formation of fighter craft smashed at German airdromes in Northern France.

All operations three aircraft of the bomber command were reported missing.

(Nazi sources in Berlin admitted that Britain had bombed a number of German cities were bombed by the R.A.F. overnight, but claimed "limited raids.")

Meanwhile, enemy activity over the British Isles during the night was reported unusually slight.

Bombs were dropped at two points in the south of England, but no casualties or damage were reported.

One Ship Set Afire

A 1,000-ton Nazi supply ship was hit in the Ems Estuary near Borkum Sunday afternoon by bombs of the R.A.F., and the crew was seen to abandon ship, it was stated today, and a 8,000-ton vessel were hit and damaged off the Netherlands Coast. The Air Ministry announced that, while in convoy and German antiaircraft defences were considerably increased.

A Nazi E-boat (torpedo-boat) was "believed to have been sunk" in the Channel when British patrol planes pressed their week-end search for enemy shipping in the Straits of Dover, Boulogne-Ostata and in German Territorial.

A Nazi destroyer was damaged.

In the Sunday attacks on airdromes, Nazi planes were shot down destroyed in combat. Dromes bombed included those at Merville, Abbeville and the French port of Cherbourg.

Saturday night and early Sunday Nazi airdromes in the Calais-Boulogne area was attacked, adding to previous heavy raids on previous nights. Fires were started but poor visibility prevented observation of reports on the attacks. All bombers returned from these raids.

LAC. S.W. BLAIR DIES IN CRASH

Airman Taking Training in Night Flying Solo at Time

Yorkton Sask., June 16 (CP)—LAC. S. W. L. Blair of the Royal Canadian Air Force was killed early today when the Harvard trainer plane in which he was flying also crashed a wheel, just from No. 11 service flying training school here.

LAC. Blair's next-of-kin was announced by R.C.A.F. officials as J. W. L. Blair father of Inverness, N.S.

The airman was taking training in night flying when the accident occurred. Air force authorities said he started to spiral at a good height but failed to come out of the twist and the machine smashed to the ground about a mile south of the No. 11 school relief airdrome of the No. 11 school relief airdrome which is six miles southeast of the main airport.

The speedy Harvard trainer was a complete wreck. An Air Force Court of Enquiry has been convened to investigate the crash.

U.S.-Born Fighter Pilot Has Thrilling Hour Over France

London, June 16—(CP)— The Air Ministry News Service today described the experience of a United States-born flighter pilot who in a one-hour hour over German-occupied territory, "shot down a Messerschmitt 110, attacked an airdrome, and shot up a searchlight station and two beacons used for guiding aircraft.

In his first "adventure" the News Service said, the pilot encountered the Messerschmitt, which sideslipped away into the darkness after the first burst of fire from the British fighter and "a few seconds later there was a huge flash as it hit the ground and exploded".

His next target, the report continued, was some activity on an aerodrome. He banged away at two flashing beacons, one of which went out, and last he shot up a searchlight station which tried to catch him in its beams as he headed home.

The Service said the pilot was a squadron-leader but declined to give his name.

2,000 Italians And General Surrender

Cairo, Egypt, June 16.—(AP)— The British forces have launched a slashing offensive against the Germans and Italians along the Egyptian-Libyan frontier and the mop-ups of Eritrea and Abyssinia is making step with the surrender of an Italian General and 2,000 troops in the southern Ethiopia, the Near East Command communique announced today.

Plunging across the Libyan border, the three Empire-bound columns drive stalled two months ago, British and Imperial forces destroyed 12 Italian tanks in the Gambut area, lost across the frontier west of Bardia.

"The operation is continuing," today's communique said significantly. Axis positions south and southeast of the fortress of Tobruk, also are bearing the brunt of the offensive.

"The border curves to the southwest in this region and apparently action centred on both sides of the line. Neither the communique nor London sources indicated the depth of the British penetration.)

Probably Campaign

The push into the Gambut area, which some observers took to be only a new British sweep to recapture Cirenaica from the Axis, started last night 36 hours after advance patrols attacked an Italian column north of the Libyan border.

On the East African front, the Middle East Command said, Imperial General Pienaar with 2,000 troops had surrendered in the Soddo Area some 150 miles south of Addis Ababa, the Ethiopian capital. This force constituted one of the last organized islands of resistance in Ethiopia.

After the surrender of the Italians in the southern part of Ethiopia, the General and the remnants of his division took to the hills where they were harried by native patriots and finally forced to capitulate because of lack of supplies.

Further north, in the Amara area, Imperial forces, aided by the natives, were pressing hard on the heels of main Italian concentrations.

TEXT OF BROADCAST BY WINSTON CHURCHILL

New York, June 16 (AP)—Following is the text of Prime Minister Churchill's broadcast radio address accepting an Honorary Degree from the University of Rochester, N.Y., as transcribed by the National Broadcasting Company.

I am grateful, President Valentine, for the honor which you have conferred upon me in making me a Doctor of Laws of Rochester University in the 124th year of its work. I am extremely complimented by the expressions of praise and commendation in which you have addressed me—not because I am, or can be, worthy of them but because they are the expression of American confidence and that, may I say, affection which I shall ever strive to deserve.

Sense of Kinship and Unity

But what interests me most in this ceremony is that sense of kinship and of unity which I feel existing between us this afternoon.

As I speak from Bowling Street to Rochester University and through you to the people of the United States, I feel that I have the right to do so because my mother, as you have stated, was born in your city and there my grandfather, Leonard Jerome, lived for so many years, conducting, as a prominent and rising citizen, his newspaper—with the excellent 18th century title of "The Plain Dealer".

A great poet has said, and said well, "people will not look forward to posterity who never looked backward to their ancestors." I feel it most agreeable to recall to you that the Jeromes were rooted for many generations in America, and have fought in Washington's armies for independence of the American colonies and in the foundation of the United States. I expect I was on both sides then, and I must say I feel on both sides of the Atlantic ocean now.

U.S. Love of Freedom and Fair Play

At intervals during the [illegible] years I have addressed [illegible] great American audiences [illegible] the United States. I have learned to admire the courtesy of these audiences, the care for free speech, their sense of fair play, their sensitive regard for honor, never minding the jokes that go against themselves, their generous and vicarious devotion to the root of the matter and to be well and truly informed on all world affairs.

And now in this time of world storm when I find myself honored by King and Parliament, and with the support of all parties in the State and the solid will of the people, to bear the chief responsibility in Great Britain, and when I have had the supreme honor of speaking for the British nation in his most deadly danger and in its finest hour, it has given me comfort and inspiration to feel that, as I think you do, our hands are joined across the ocean and our hearts pulse thru and beat as one.

Hold Light for American Hearts

Indeed, I will make so bold as to say that here at least in the modern life city of Rochester, I hold the latchkey to American hearts. I will say when I proceed to fierce surges of passion, sweep the broad expanse of the Atlantic in the year of fate.

"In that hour of travail there are many elemental forces. There is much heart searching and self-examination, much pain, some sorrow, some conflicting voices, but in the end, when the moment has the birth throe, of a sublime resolve, I shall not be content to say that I have no doubts what that resolve will be. The destiny of mankind is not decided in such mortal computation when forces today are on the move in the world, affecting men's souls, drawing them from their firesides, casting aside cares of life, amusement, wealth and the pursuit of happiness in response to the call, at once all-attractive and irresistible, then it is we learn we are spirits—not animals, and that something is going on beyond space and time which, whether we like it or not, spells duty.

Have Shaped My Deeds of Today

A wonderful story is unfolding before our eyes. Much of it now we are not allowed to know. But both sides of the Atlantic we all feel—I repeat all—that we are part of it, that our future and that of many generations is at stake. We are sure that the Minister of Armaments will be snaped by the resolves we take an the deeds we do.

We need not bewail the fact that we have been called upon to face such solemn responsibilities. We may be proud and even rejoice amid our tribulations that we have been born at this cardinal time for so great an age, so glorious an opportunity of service here below. Wicked enemies, embodying a cruel, almighty triumphant, casts its shadow over Europe and Asia. Laws, customs, traditions are broken up. Justice is driven from her seat. The rights of the weak are trampled upon. The great freedoms of which the President of the United States has spoken so movingly are menaced or overthrown. The whole stature of man, his genius, his intelligence and his mobility is prone down under a system of mechanical barbarism well organized and scheduled terror.

British Faithful Guardians

For more than a year, we British have stood alone uplifted by your sympathy and good will, sustained by our own unconquerable will power and by the unflinching courage and hopes of your massive aid, in those British Islands which are the only small spot upon the map, we stand the faithful guardians of the rights and cherished hopes of a dozen states and nations now prostrate in misery in a base and cruel servitude.

Whatever happens, we shall endure to the end. But what is the position which we have reached in Europe by the German Nazi regime? How did they get it? It is but a few years ago since one until-lectual gentry in the world of great and what now lie broken in the dust would have laughed off the idea that the fearful ordeal it has had to undergo. But there was no laughing. There was no vision.

The nations were pulled down one by one by the oldest good and shuddered. One by one, each in its turn, the free countries be caught. One after another they were laid low by brutal violence, by force from within, by subtle intrigue.

Stern Proclaim Deliverance of Mankind

Now the call, then, with her lion cubs at her side, stands alone between those who are armed with deadly weapons and impelled by the most destructive rage in this tragedy to repeat itself once more, and those who have not the rule. The stars and their courses proclaim that deliverance of mankind. Not so easily shall the onward progress of the world be checked. Not so easily shall the lights of freedom die. But time is short. Every week counts, every day adds to the length and the perils of the road that still have to be made. United we stand. Divided we fall. Divided into dark ages to come. United we can save and guide the world.

Toronto, June 16 (CP)—J. Bickell, Belleville magnate, who has been in England for some time, returned with the Ministry of Aircraft Production, advised Toronto associates today that flying conditions interrupted his plans to make a surprise appearance at the annual meeting of the Algoma Ore-Porcupine Mines in Toronto.

The meeting here opened with Bernard E. Smith of New York, vice president in the chair, and he revealed a wire from Mr. Bickell showed that the latter had been grounded in Newfoundland. The telegram from Gander, Nfld., said flying conditions delayed me on the other side for a day and a half, and that I was now in Gander, so unable to be with you for the annual meeting".

The telegram was a surprise to local associates who had no knowledge that Mr. Bickell was in England. It was not known for now that he had sailed for that country.

BRITISH TROOPS THRUST INTO LIBYAN DESERT

INDUSTRIAL GERMANY HEAVILY ATTACKED

Major Offensive Likely Underway By British Forces

Mechanized Unit Seabs 40 Miles into Libya to Capture Fort Capuzzo

NEARING SALUM

Cairo, June 17 (AP)—British troops in a surprise movement "made an initial penetration as far as Fort Capuzzo," just across the Egyptian border in Libya, and "then beat a determined and successful counter attack by reinforcements hurried there from the Tobruk area," the Middle East command announced today.

The war bulletin said heavy losses were inflicted on the German and Italian troops who repeatedly assaulted the Imperial forces.

Fort Capuzzo is opposite Salum where fierce fighting appeared developing into a major battle following the start of the British offensive.

In bringing up reinforcements from Tobruk, 90 miles away, the Axis commanders had to draw off part of their forces encircling that British-held port. (A German military spokesman said last night the apparent purpose of the British offensive was to relieve the beleaguered Tobruk garrison.)

Reports from the front indicated British and Imperial forces were employing the tactics which proved so successful against the Italians last winter — lashing out at Axis communication lines with swift flanking thrusts by mechanized units.

One such unit was said to have stabbed 40 miles into Libya Monday to reach a point 15 miles south of Gambut, and there were reports that another British force had occupied Fort Capuzzo, just west of the Egyptian frontier.

Nazi Troops Reported on W. Coast Norway

London, June 17 (CP)—Persistent reports reaching Norwegian circles in London today said that Germany is concentrating "large numbers" of troops on the Norwegian west coast, possibly for a landing board for invasion of Scotland.

The Norwegians said that in the past few days numerous troop trains of soldiers and materials had passed through Oslo on the way to west coast bases.

In addition, reports from Krageroe, on the Skagerrak, say a steady procession of German troops and materials has been streaming in a westerly direction.

Ban on Exports Oil on E. Coast Asked by Ickles

Washington, June 17—(AP)—A complete ban on exports of oil from the east coast of United States, without prior government approval of individual shipments, was proposed to the petroleum industry today by Interior Secretary Ickes.

Petroleum Co-ordinator Davies.

The action followed close on the heels of the sinking yesterday of a 240,000 gallon shipment of oil from Philadelphia to Canada, because of the threatened oil famine on the eastern seaboard.

Ickes' Assistant Petroleum Coordinator, Ralph K. Davies, issued identical telegrams to 23 east coast oil shippers, as follows:

"Because of the impending petroleum shortage in the Atlantic coast area, it is important that all supplies of stocks from this region be avoided. It appears therefore that no further sales of petroleum products for exchanges shipment be made without prior consideration by this office."

"Bravo, men and us", he said, "there is a community of thought, skill and purpose."

On an sim-studded lawn in view of thousands of students and their parents and friends, Mr. Mackenzie King received the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws at Princeton's 194th graduation exercises.

Other recipients of honorary degrees included Princess Juliana of the Netherlands, Mr. King's Prime Minister mentioned warmly in his speech, and Robert Frost, American poet.

Addressing the graduating class, Mr. King paid high tribute to a one-time president of Princeton, Dr. Francis Patton, who was the room-mate of the Prime Minister's father at the University of Toronto.

Mr. King accepted the honorary degree as "an honor meant not for myself alone, but for what would see in it, as I also do, an expression of your abiding pleasure that our two countries, destined by Divine Providence to be neighbors, have for so many years lived together in peace and understanding as friends."

The Prime Minister expressed pleasure in the fact that the university was also conferring an honorary degree upon Princess Juliana of The Netherlands who "shares with Mrs. King and me" her country had been occupied by Nazis.

Inspired by Same Vision

"Both in the United States and Canada and the United States have inspired by the same vision," Mr. King said.

HEAVIER FIGHTING

Cairo, June 17—(AP)—The British and Free French forces have continued successfully their drive in fighting in southern Syria where the Vichy forces hagh launched their counter attack, the British Command announced today.

This fighting was at Mardjayoun and Kuneitra, each about 40 miles southwest of Damascus. Vichy French troops have continued bitterly resistance at these points in spite of the advance of other Allied forces northward to within 6 miles of Damascus.

Mardjayoun is only a few miles from the Palestine border.

"Although the Allied forces are making slow progress on the Damascus sector, the enemy has met strong counter attacks by Vichy troops have been launched at Merdjayoun and Kuneitra," said the Middle East Command, communique.

"Allied reinforcements are now approaching both these places, where heavy fighting is continuing."

London, June 17 (CP)—British forces are attacking Aalouin, six miles south-southwest of the Syrian capital of Damascus after capturing Madani yesterday, authoritative British sources reported today.

Madani is 10 miles south-southwest of Damascus.

These sources reiterated that the British-Free French command is going ahead in the Syrian campaign purposely to keep losses as low as possible both for themselves and the defenders.

Gen. Paul Le Gentilhomme was said to be carrying on in command of the Free French forces despite a broken arm suffered in the air bomb.

Miss Carruthers said she had been authorized to recruit the women in Canada.

Great Progress Made in New Device To Detect, Destroy German Bombers

London, June 17 —(CP Cable)— Colonel Ashley Clarke, Privy Seal, told the House of Commons today that, "thanks to the brilliant work of our scientists, great progress, has been made in devising means" of detecting and destroying German bombers over Britain.

He said the House is helping in the work of supplying men to maintain this new equipment, and that "the country is behind the organizing powerful aid." The Privy Seal was speaking in answer based on a recent reference in Commons to a new weapon against night raiders made by Hon. J. L. Ralston, Minister of National Defence.

Air Attache's new apparatus contributed to British victory in the Battle of Britain last August.

Colonel Clarke said: "Interchements of high promise in many directions," he continued. "Our industries are now turning out increasing quantities of ingenious apparatus, maintenance and repair of which demand large numbers of skilled men, especially radio mechanics.

"Training for this work is being given by the fighting services, assisted by universities and technical colleges throughout the country. The Dominions and other parts of the British Empire, and the United States in Canada, in particular, is organizing powerful aid."

The need for trained men to operate the secret devices has increased in proportion to production, he said, adding that Lord Beaverbrook, Minister of State, in an Empire broadcast tonight would refer to this question.

Colonel Clarke returned today from overseas with technical experience to "come forward and help us in the maintenance and repair of the new equipment."

14 Nazi Aircraft Destroyed Around Britain in 24 Hours

R.A.F. Using Bigger Planes Which Carry Fire, Explosive and New "Super" Bombs In Raids on Germany

TYPE NOT IDENTIFIED

London, June 17. — (CP)—The Royal Air Force, bombing the western industrial districts of Germany for the sixth successive night, delivered its principal blows overnight in Cologne and Duesseldorf, authoritative source said today. Many fires were started in the heavy bombings.

The night attacks followed offensive daylight sweeps yesterday during which the British air command continued attacks on shipping off the coasts of Germany and the occupied countries of the Netherlands.

Duisburg Attacked

Duisburg also was touched in the sweep over Germany's industrial Ruhr and Rhineland districts, while other planes attacked the docks at Boulogne and the Nazi air base at Calais with R.A.F. bombers in an assault on the docks and harbor at Dunkerque on the Nazi occupied French coast.

Senators Endorse Decision to Close Nazi Consulates

Washington, June 17 (AP)—The State Department order for the closing of all German Consulates in the United States by July 10, drew many expressions of senate approval today, but Senator Patrick McCarran (Dem.-Nevada) called it a step toward averting diplomatic relations.

"I am sorry that such an order was made," McCarran told reporters, explaining he feared the action might push the U.S. closer to war. "Of course, if we are going to be forced into war, it was essential, but so long as normal trade activities are concerned it would be well if the State Department had ordered a cessation by Soviet Russia."

State Undersecretary Sumner Welles, however, minded any diplomatic rupture was implied and predicted only that the action did not affect the German Embassy here.

Doubling Season of Propaganda

Senator Tom Connally (Dem.-Texas), member of the Foreign Relations Committee, asserted that "some of the diplomatic representatives have been the source of Nazi propaganda, perhaps of sabotage, and of efforts to create confusion in National Defence plants."

Senator Pepper of the Foreign Relations Committee, Senator Johnson (Dem.-Colorado) and others said the state Department decision was "just what should have been done."

There appeared to be a fairly widespread belief that Germany would retaliate for the Consulate closings, perhaps by closing the remaining U. S. Consular officials in German German and occupied territory. Diplomatic representatives already have been forced to leave occupied territories.

PETAIN DENIES FRENCH 'SOLD OUT'

Aged Marshal Speaks on First Anniversary of His Regime

Vichy, June 17 —(AP)— Marshal Philippe Petain, speaking on the first anniversary of his regime, asserted today the French people had been "neither sold out nor betrayed" and asked them to give him their confidence.

In a broadcast address, the Marshal claimed the situation has improved since the day a year ago when he signed the armistice with Germany, and added:

"Today you have for the most part gone back to your homes. Undoubtedly prisoners have not yet returned, women and suffer, food is difficult to get, taxes irritate you and prices rise. You don't always have enough to eat, but you have given up fighting and her factories are being rebuilt.

"You are suffering and you will suffer for a long time because you have not finished paying for all our faults."

He went on to ask the people to remember what they were told only a year ago, when Germany's roads were clogged with refugees and when normal supplies roared overhead.

"Remember," he said, "the immense effort of our agriculture, which despite the absence of a million farmer prisoners has put a million more hectares (about 2,500,000 acres) of new land into cultivation?" he asked.

Canada Commits Its Every Day Life Despite Threat of Shells and Bombs

By W. T. YARBROUGH

(Associated Press Staff Writer

Dover, June 17 (AP)—In the year since the collapse of France—a year of continual exposure to bombs and shellfire—Britain has made a gradual change in this English coast city from tense excitement to easy calm. The proverbial "Dover's Corner" is astonishing and Dover is not nearly the target it was when Pas de Calais was but a few miles off the French coast.

Air raid sirens have no excitement and Dover takes a certain amount of pride in the fact that it has had more alarms than any other community. When British fighters roar low on their way to warfare over French coast, the people look up like spectators at an air show.

In the past 12 months of watching, sailing and arming against invasion, the people have learned to take it easy. Invasion talk is common in London, but here it has to be primed.

"What's the use of talking about it?" the town clerk said. "If it happens it'll be all unpleasant—if it doesn't it won't."

The combination of bombing and shelling has caused considerable. So-called non-essential citizens to go. Thousands of children and mothers pushing baby carriages are conspicuous.

Shelling brought Dover a special type of uneasiness. No other place in England has had the National Fire Service's threat breathless interval between the flash of a German gun across the Channel and then the explosion this side. Bombs make uglier scars than shells, but the potential danger area around shellbursts is greater.

Some persons, not many, go into shelters that are considered the world's safest. They are the endless caves and tunnels in the cliffs of solid chalk. The "shelter communities" have a large number of persons who sleep in the caves every night, but it is small compared with London's total.

DECORATION OF CHURCH DEPENDS ON BALL TEAM

New York, June 17 (CP) — Whether All Souls (Unitarian) Church in Brooklyn gets a new coat of paint has largely with Brooklyn Dodgers, Rev. Cornelius Greenaway, pastor of the church foundation, brought for the church fee be distributed it at $1 each among the congregation with orders to invest it and return the proceeds. A father-and-son combo raised the $1 and their dollars on the baseball team's performance in the National League pennant. Others followed suit and Mr. Greenway now reads the sports pages.

PITCH STOPS FLEEING PRISONer

Boonville Mo, June 17 (AP)—Deputy Sheriff A. W. Tally struck out a prisoner with a single pitch. As Tally drove his car into the jail yard in the county jail the man broke away. Tally grabbed a lock from a cell wound up and let fly. The prisoner hit behind the ear was knocked unconscious.

HALF BILLION MARK IS PASSED BY VICTORY LOAN

Total Reported at $501,484,250 up to Monday Night

$27,500,100 ON MONDAY

Ottawa, June 17 (CP)—Canada's Victory Loan has passed the half billion dollar mark, National Loan Headquarters announced today. The cumulative total of subscriptions towards the $500,000,000 objective stands at $501,484,250.

Subscriptions Monday, reported to the close of business, totalled an astounded to $27,500,100.

"The figures are somewhat on the low side again," said G. W. Mooney, National Director, chairman, "and the time is opportune to re-emphasize what I said at this time last week, namely, that there is much work to be done. We have declared Victory Loan a national objective. We need considerably more."

Torch Must Go To Mr. Churchill

"The loan will only be a success if the nation's objective of $500,000,000 is over-subscribed and only then if everybody capable of buying a bond has bought one.

"The loan can be made a complete success if Canadians, all canvassers and public, will put their backs into it during these latter days of our campaign. The torch must not go out. Everybody must make it go handsomely. It can only leave the shores of Canada when the loan is over-subscribed."

Individual subscriptions yesterday numbered 41,800 bringing the cumulative total to 1,041,000.

The largest subscription reported at National Headquarters today was that of the Canada Life Assurance Company, Toronto, for $10,000,000.

Subscriptions by provinces follow:

Calgary $4,961,000, $8.20 per cent; Ottawa $28,550,000, $8.60 per cent; Montreal $96,396,850, $2.3 per cent; Sherbrooke $1,501,000, $1.5 per cent; Halifax $4,158,800, 70.4 per cent; Quebec $7,397,700, 66.17 per cent; Saint John $2,200, 62.2 per cent; Rivers $1,232,350, 62.2 per cent;

Federal Gas Tax Has Little Effect On Sales Volume

It takes more than a few cents tax to deprive Mr. and Mrs. Motoring Public of their favorite summer diversion, according to a consensus of service stations operators here.

In short, there has been no appreciable falling-off in gasoline sales in this district since the federal budget brought down a few weeks ago, declared an additional tax of three cents on the fuel.

There were some complaints, a Dundas Street service station proprietor said, but these did not deal with the rise in price so much as the difference in prices between Toronto, Montreal and Belleville. Drivers stated that gas here was two cents more than in either of the metropolitan centres, and that was something they could not understand.

Sales, if anything, are up compared with those of the corresponding period of a year ago. This is due in part, it was stated, to the added influx of American tourists. Travellers from south of the border are much more numerous, or have been during the latter weeks of May and early June, than they were a year ago.

This, in the opinion of the service station men, augurs well for the regular tourist season which generally reaches its peak about the first of August. One week so far as to say that present indications point to a record busine as visitors from the United States are concerned.

First of New Potatoes Offered on Market

Increased quantities of strawberries and early peas on the local produce market forced prices of these commodities to lower levels this morning with strawberries selling at two boxes for thirty-five cents and at 20 cents per box with peas at forty-five cents per quart in the pod and thirty cents per pint.

Quality of berries offered was exceptionally good, the benefiting effects of recent showers apparently being reflected on the berry patches. Several farmers which came on early, however, are now beginning to dry up with berries from these vines being offered as low as 10c per box.

Early potatoes were offered by one or two vendors, 20c per berry box and 25c per peck for "spuds" ranging fin size up to hen's eggs, excellent samples considering the earliness of the season.

T. Bata Purchases $150,000 Worth of Victory Loan Bonds

Judge Cimeron Makes Announcement at Rally at Which Mr. Strange Gave Address

TOTAL NOW $1,675,350

With four days to go to the official close of the current Victory Loan campaign, the thermometer up to 10 o'clock this morning registered $1,675,350.

However, at the Victory Loan rally held in the Collegiate Institute last night, the Bata Shoe Company through its president, Mr. Thomas Bata, gave the total a decided boost when he presented General Chairman Judge Charles A. Cameron with a cheque for $150,000 to be applied to the Victory Loan.

Judge Cameron expressed the thanks of not only his committee in the county but the Dominion of Canada as a whole, when he accepted the cheque on the stage of the auditorium. Later it was announced that ninety-one Canadian nationals, employees of the Bata plant at Batawa, had subscribed to the loan. The employees of the plant were not canvassed 100 per cent.

However, as Judge Cameron pointed out last night, there is a road to travel before the end of next few days if Hastings County is to attain its quota of two-million dollars. "The small salaried man and the earner have come and wage magnificently," he said, "as have the business and industrial concerns. But the middle class, who have substantial bank balances, should be responding in a like manner. And it is to these people that we appeal as the campaign nears the finish line, to do their bit for the cause which is at stake.

"Hastings County has never let the Dominion and Empire down and it won't now, but the task will be hard indeed if all these people buy bonds.

"Glad to feel the awfulness of war. A lot of Canadians, and I am sorry to say, even Americans, do not realize the seriousness of the situation. Had they turned out in any numbers at the rally at which Mr. William Strange gave such a graphic description of the lives of the ordinary people of Britain, they perhaps would realize what war is. But they did not, and by not doing so, showed a lackadaisical interest in things that should be of vital importance to them."

Winners of Victory Loan Essay in P. E. County Are Announced

Picton, June 17—In the essay contest sponsored in connection with the Victory Loan 1941, three were chosen as the best among those submitted by pupils of Elementary Schools and one from Secondary School.

In the Elementary Schools, the first prize in this county was awarded Jim McCaw, S.S. 7, South Marysburgh; second to Clifford Bissell, Consecon, and third to Phyllis Archard, Wellington. All three essays have been forwarded to provincial Headquarters where they will be eligible for the provincial prizes.

The best essay by Picton Collegiate pupils was written by Eleanor Goodmurphy and it has also been sent to headquarters to be judged in its class. Principal F. E. Ansell was in charge of P.C.V.I. while Public School Inspector A. J. Reynolds and Mrs. Carmen Rose visited many public schools and urged participation in the contest, with good results.

The final essay will be announced, on receipt of information from headquarters by the County Publicity Director, J. E. Dodds. County prizes were not offered but students were urged to try for Provincial prizes of bonds, the point that they were trying to make to arouse interest in Victory bonds being stressed.

Continues Pastorate

Mr. F. E. Rice, who has been the popular minister on Cherry Valley circuit for the past year, will remain for another year, it was announced at the Official Board meeting decision was made by the Settlement Committee of the Bay of Quinte Conference. The arrangements were made by the various committees of the church and tested his proposed removal to a charge near Kingston. The chairman of the committee is greatly appreciated by the Allore church and who were loathe to part with Mr. and Mrs. Rice.

Rain is badly needed in Prince Edward County. Nona fell over the weekend as it did in some centres and the shower Monday was very light.

Car Crashes Into Culvert

When a motor car driven by 19-year-old Donald Rodgers of Frankford, crashed into a culvert on No. 2 highway near the R.C.A.F. base at Trenton, Monday last it marked the first motor accident, in which a person sustained injuries, to occur on Motorcycle Patrolman J. H. Hatch's district. Other than a bruised chin that officer revealed when making his report on the crash here.

Rodgers is believed to have fallen asleep at the wheel of the machine as the vehicle leaving the highway ran into a concrete culvert. The driver sustained a serious head laceration as the result of the impact. He was taken to Trenton Hospital in Trenton and later continued home to his parents' home. That is the first accident reported in the Belleville district for some months but has sustained serious injuries in over two weeks, revealed Constable Hatch on the crack-up.

Provincial Constable R. S. Patterson investigated another minor accident on No. 2 near No. 31, three miles south of Belleville late Monday afternoon when C.A.F. cars had collided with the rear of a motor car driven by John Thompson of Mountain View. Considerable damage resulted to Mr. Thompson's automobile, but no injuries were reported.

Belleville Band Hard Hit by Many Enlistments

Its original membership depleted by sixteen through enlistments in the fighting services of the Empire, the Belleville Municipal Band is still carrying on, however, and has even added ordinarily affect the harmony and balance of a musical organization.

Today, officials of the band announced that two more of its members are leaving the organization to go into the services of the country.

The band, rated as one of Eastern Ontario's finest musical aggregations, enjoys an enviable reputation not only in the city but in the district as well. Its services have always been at the command of worthy causes, for its members have given of their time and talents on many occasions without remuneration.

The band has done exceptional service in the current Victory Loan campaign, with Judge Cameron General Chairman, and Vice Chairman Bert Boyce are loud in their praise of the work done by the band along these lines. It has journeyed to the far-flung sections of Hastings County, to bring music and entertainment to residents of communities in a manner that is worthy of commendation.

Under Lieut. Fred Jobson, who took the organization over some years ago, it has been steadily until it has reached a point where it is considered one of the best in the class of military and civilian bands.

McKim's Directory Just off the Press

According to the 34th edition of McKim's Directory of Canadian Publications, just off the press, Canada now has 1,806 publications. Of this total, well over one-third, 666, are published in Ontario. The Province of Quebec ranks next with 360. Over half of all Canadian publications are weeklies—894 as compared with 112 dailies and 462 monthlies.

It is interesting to note that Canada supports sixty-four foreign language publications among which there are four dailies in Chinese, two in Japanese and two in Jewish. Foreign publications in Canada are printed in sixteen languages which include Croatian, Czecho-Slovax, Danish, Dutch, Finnish, German, Hungarian Icelandic, Italian, Norwegian, Polish, Swedish and Ukrainian.

McKim's Directory has become practically a national institution and is widely circulated at home and abroad. The publication summarizes exhaustive information on markets, media and populations throughout Canada, constituting an industrial analysis reference of all towns in which publications are printed. Enquiries concerning this directory should be addressed to anyone of the A. McKim Limited offices in Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Vancouver and in London, England.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Model Wife"

Joan Blondell and Dick Powell co-star in the riotous comedy, "Model Wife," now on the Capitol screen.

In addition to the Blondell-Powell combination, the cast includes Lee Bowman, most recently in "Buck Privates"; Charlie Ruggles, in a typically Ruggles character and Ruth Donnelly, Lucile Watson, Billy Gilbert and John Qualen.

The story, streamlined for comedy and romance, also presents an excellent opportunity for Miss Blondell to display a complete revue of her charms in a variety of fashions in gowns and chapeaux. The lead roles are those of a wedded couple who live in an ultra-modern grown shoppe, where marriage in the department is the rule.

Miss Blondell and Powell seemingly guard their secret from every clime for an anticipated arrival from the stork, but the situation becomes rather complicated when the fun-making boss, played by Miss Watson, puts her incorrigible son, Bowman, to work and he falls in love with Miss Blondell.

"Quarterback"

A thrilling football picture is showing at the Capitol Theatre today and tomorrow featuring handsome Wayne Morris in a dual role. It's the Paramount picture "The Quarterback." In addition to the excitement of a great game, Virginia Dale is charming as the romantic co-ed, Lillian Cornell, a brunette beauty, is also featured in the cast in the part of a night club entertainer that the boys fall for in droves.

Wayne plays his own twin brother in this amusing story. As Jimmy Jones he is studious and conscientious, passing all his studies at the head of his class. As Bill Jones he would rather play football than eat, studies are just a necessary evil. A combination of the two makes the ideal student. That's exactly what they do. Jimmy goes to class to get the high marks so that Bill can be the star quarterback of the school.

In addition to Wayne Morris, Virginia Dale and Lillian Cornell, the cast includes William Frawley, Edgar Kennedy, Alan Mowbray, Jerome Cowan, Rod Cameron, Walter Catlett and Frank Burke. It was directed by H. Bruce Humberstone from an original screen play by Robert Pirosh.

AT THE BELLE

"I Wanted Wings"

Combining a story of adventure and romance Paramount's mighty aviation spectacle "I Wanted Wings" is the feature attraction at the Belle Theatre. While starring in the picture stars such brilliant players as Ray Milland, William Holden, Constance Moore, Wayne Morris and Brian Donlevy, there is one player in "I Wanted Wings" to whom commendation must be given and she is Veronica Lake, who has been singing up a storm wherever she has been given to any movie actress in the past decade. She's a thoroughly streamlined beauty, honey-blonde, with exciting facial trim figure and no doubt plenty of genuine acting ability. The role of Miss Lake today will also be exhibited on the same program.

"The Lady Eve" Merry

If ever a picture lived up to promise of being the comedy hit of the year it is Paramount's new excursion into the laugh field, the "Lady Eve," written and directed by Preston Sturges and starring Barbara Stanwyck and Henry Fonda in the chief comedy roles. Featured in the brilliant cast of the picture, which previews tomorrow at the Belle Theatre, are such sharp comedy actors as Charles Coburn, Eugene Pallette, William Demarest, Eric Blore, Martha O'Driscoll and Lyle Talbot.

Even Hollywood, supposed to be accustomed to the unusual, was amazed at the rapid-fire pace that Sturges set when he completed three pictures in approximately a year. The remarkable thing is that they're all hits! First came "The Great McGinty," which Sturges then followed up with last season's big comedy success, "Christmas in July." Now he come up with a picture, "The Lady Eve" which advance reports say is the best thing Sturges has done to date. Hollywood is already hailing Sturges as a genius at handling comedy. "The Sturges Touch" is by way of becoming as real and distinguished as the vaunted "Lubitsch touch."

"Raggedy Anne," a multiple-reel technicolor film cartoon and an interesting Belle News of the day will also be exhibited.

Leo Callaghan Presented With Bag Before Leaving City

Mr. Leo Callaghan, who is leaving the city to take up his new duties as C. N. Express Agent at Simcoe, Ont., was presented with a beautiful gladstone bag by St. Michael's Separate School Board, of which he was a member.

The presentation was made by the chairman, Mr. F. E. McMahon, who wished Mr. Callaghan, on behalf of the board, every success in his new position. The chairman stated that he was very sorry to lose such an active member, one who showed great interest in all school affairs.

Mr. Callaghan, who was taken wholly by surprise, thanked the Board most heartily.

A Tourist Writes About Canada

A Letter to the New York Herald Tribune

Sir:—Even a short trip through Canada must convince any reasoning south of the border that Mackenzie King's countrymen are giving of their best to the war.

We spent a night in Ontario in a tourist cabin; it was not what one would call especially quiet. After a long motor trip, some days visiting the Buffalo bee-hive, with its great steel plants, its astounding airplane factories which spring like weeds in a garden and spread equally fast, we wanted to turn in early.

Our cabin was next to a railroad with a highway a few yards from our front door. All through the night, and after, we counted past our heads while heavy trucks rumbled past our feet. Canada was in motion; the power of the Dominion was in our ears. Things were moving. In the morning we saw the same power exerting itself in the air. Squat, clumsy, heavily laden ships moving, filled with grain, and the other end our material most essential to the prosecution of the war against a system that is the least in the fundamentals which we were taught to hold dear—the right to our very lives.

Throughout the night there was the roar of 'planes—no bombs, no flares, no incendiaries. Some score of Canadians, Poles, Americans were getting their hours in the air in night flying. At this one place there were more 'planes being operated than the British had in their whole fighting force in 1914. How Lord Tweedsmuir (Col. John Buchan), the late Governor General of Canada, would have loved to tell his old pupil about the show as he did in the World War! It seemed unreal to a couple of Americans, who had lived through the First World War, who had seen Zeppelins brought down in flames, who knew that there had been children in their care while Gotha raiders rained bombs unpleasantly near.

At dawn it was difficult to realize that all the noise of the last night had left no scars on the beautiful countryside, no casualties, no wrecked buildings, no homeless people.

We passed a factory before 7 o'clock in the morning; on this factory more than 10,000 men were converging. They were arriving in their own cars, in company buses, on motor cycles, on bicycles, by foot. It is one of Canada's most essential factories; it is one in which the United States is profoundly interested. There was no labor trouble, no lost support to airplanes as soft coal is to the manufacture of the vessels which will be built in Canada across the Atlantic or to Singapore or to the Suez Canal.

We gave a lift to a couple of these workers. We found them keen as confident of the result of the war as if they were wearing the uniforms instead of overalls. They felt they were members of a great team and they were very proud of the contribution they were making. They were no shirkers; they were varsity players.

At breakfast we bumped into a man wearing the insignia of a colonel, a chap who had a couple of ribbons, a graduate of Ypres and Mons, a veteran of a generation back. He left Canada in 1914 as a private; he came out of the last war as a gallant soldier, who had been decorated. He was back in the army and proud of it—and he also had two sons in the flying corps and he was even prouder of that.

We talked a moment or two with London, the Savoy Hotel bar, when it was the rendezvous for Canadian officers on leave, of the saddle of mutton in Simpson's in the Strand, of Westminster, of St. Paul's.

Breakfast over, he pulled out his short-stemmed pipe, hesitated a moment, and then said:

"They (the soldiers today) are better than we were. This time they'll give Jerry a proper hiding! I know it because my sons can lick it better than we did. They are all set to lick Jerry; we were satisfied to show that he couldn't lick us."

From Gay New York to Inky Black of Sea Battle

Writer Describes Entry of United States Ship to British Navy for Conflicts Of the Atlantic

This is one of a series on the entry into the Battle of the Atlantic of an American vessel transferred to Britain under the Lease-Lend Bill.

By MORGAN M. BEATTY
Associated Press Staff Writer
Aboard H.M.S. st ers (AP)—The lights of metropolitan New York blazed a friendly farewell.

Steaming close, the rest of our squadron was silhouetted against the western horizon their running lights winking and weaving back of us as we slipped out of the harbor. Ahead was the dark Atlantic. The bridge of our leading ship buzzed with efficient orders and movement.

The yellow reflection from New York cast dull streaks along the barrels of our big guns silhouetted against the decks below. Except for those deadly guns, it would have seemed like a pleasure trip.

Suddenly the senior officer present lowered his binoculars, leaned over orders. Darken ship! Show no lights! Executive Order!"

His voice was quiet, almost casual. But instantly the bridge went inky black. Signal men rushed to stations with long-barrelled flashlights and winked pinpoints of light at our following train.

In a few moments all our warships disappeared in a well of darkness. All that remained of warm, friendly lights points in masts, a faint yellow glow. Here was blackout for you—in American waters!

Practical Practice

I moved closer to the shadowy form of our commanding officer.

"Practice?" I asked, "Hardly," he said. "a British ship takes it for granted the enemy may be anywhere. They're going to point in making a target of these fine ships your government has turned over to us."

"Target!" Somehow the word in wartime is rather blind at night. Unless somebody gives him a light to aim—!

No need to finish the sentence. The sub commander who could sink a "Land-Lease" ship before it had been in British hands more than a few hours would be a national hero in Germany. And no—we were in the dark.

In those few minutes I saw and felt for the first time the difference between a world at war and my own United States so close behind me.

I had come aboard this former U. S. Coast Guard cutter the night before, soon after it had been transferred from the United States to the Royal Navy. They told me the ceremony was impressive.

What had been a U.S.S. became an H.M.S. The American crew had decked her out in dark war paint. Gone was the gleaming white coat of a Coast Guard vessel. They had loaded her with guns, wired her for automatic blackouts at night. She was complete down to the last knife and fork, even to electric refrigeration in the ward room. And her decks were coated with crushed granite for sure-footed action against the enemy.

Then a quiet, disciplined English crew took over a vessel they'd never seen before, soon her wheel, turned her knobs, snapped her switches, oiled her guns. They'd done it as casually and confidently as if they turn the spigot on my shower at home.

Shower And Poker

When I stepped across the gangplank, I was greeted by an officer, and taken to the ward room below, where I met my ship mates. The executive officer reminded me that formality was absurd in wartime, he made me make myself comfortable. Soon the commanding officer came down, gave me the same cordial greeting, told me I had the run of the ship—even to his excellent shower.

When my American taxi-driver friend helped to collect this fare, he wished me well, as if he expected he'd never be seen alive again. My new friends, filled me in generalities about that. And we sat down to dinner.

In one of those bright English drawing room conversations I discovered that the departing American officer had introduced the English ward room officers to poker, and left with something of a flourish.

"We'd like to take the time to get it back from you," they said. "But we've got to handle this ship."

As for America, they liked best our women, our coffee, our movie pix, our night clubs and our newspapers.

Canada had taken its decision to fight and was fighting.

No Doubt of U.K. Courage

"That we are determined to travel the same route that you are travelling has been let in no doubt by the recent declarations of the President of the United States," he added.

He described the United States defence program as having "made over the greatest industrial machine in the world into a peace production to a war e production basis.

"We have subordinated all else in our way of life to the supremely important requirements of national defence and of aid to the British Empire."

Augmented Fleet Under Construction

"We have under construction an augmented fleet 'which when completed will more than double the size of the present fleet. We have expanded our aviation production program until we envisage an ultimate goal of more than 50,000 planes and an annual production rate which insures ultimate British-American mastery of the air."

The people of the United States, Col. Knox described as "grimly accepting and understanding the realities of the world situation. Never Planned or Ever Lost War

"We have never planned a war," he said, "and we have always been unready when we entered one. But we have lost no wars that I can remember."

WORRIES FOR THE HUNS

Germany is getting a revelation of the new British explosive used in bombs. The past week has seen the greatest series of raids of the war showered upon industrial Germany. Germans have been advised by their authorities to run to shelters when the alarm is given.

Britain is using night and day offensive upon enemy targets.

Upon the sea the British arms are showing fine results. Latest is the hitting of a Nazi pocket battleship towards the close of last week by a torpedo from a British plane as a result of which the enemy craft had to crawl away under protection of a smoke screen.

All this has been going on while the Huns have been doing little damage to Britain.

At the same time Britain has been strengthening her position in the Middle East.

MUSSOLINI'S EMPIRE GONE

Mussolini, a tattered lackey! The Italian Empire, rags and tatters!

Justice was not long in punishing this boasting meddler with the rights of nations.

Mussolini's eastern empire is gone. The capture of the minor port of Assab by Indian troops closed the last port of exit for the Fascists. Britain has wiped the stain of Fascism off a great part of Eastern Africa. There remain only a few mountain centres in Ethiopia left to abandoned Italian garrisons. Yesterday 2,000 men and an Italian general were reported to have surrendered.

Britain has brought justice back into that country. Emperor Haile Selassie is on his throne and is helping Britain. British Somaliland is back under British rule after a few months in Italian hands. Italy has lost Eritrea and Italian Somaliland, now in the hands of Britain. French Somaliland is an oasis in the territory now in British hands, and in the Red Sea the British fleet is dominant.

Mussolini's course recalls Aesop's fable of the dog which dropped some meat in the stream in jumping to add the shadow in the water beneath to what he already had.

What will Italy after this war think of the man who for ambition and greed brought all this infamy upon his race, who forced a party to dominate Italy and link her to the hyena of nations?

It is safe to say that Italy will feel the sting of this for many years and that Mussolini's name will go down to scorn.

AUTOMOBILE SPEED AND ECONOMY

Slower driving is suggested as a step which may be taken on account of heavy demand for defence on gasoline in United States. New York Times cites tests by motorcar manufacturers, insurance companies, the A.A.A. and the U.S. Bureau of Standards to show that at least a twenty per cent saving in fuel consumption can be saved by moderation of road speeds and by sensible driving instead of an attempt to get off to a flying start at every change of traffic signal or entry upon a stop street.

Tests show a difference of 6.2 miles per gallon for the same car travelling 40 miles and at 60 miles an hour, the paper points out. Attempts to beat the other fellow at a light by maximum acceleration in low gear and when it is held overdriving in middle gear are called "excessively wasteful."

Such methods dig deeply in the pocketbook of the driver, says the Times, though they may satisfy his "ego."

Travellers' Insurance Company made tests over 1,000 miles to show the relationship of speed, the time saved and the cost. An average car, travelling the average roads with an average driver for 1,000 miles saves only 6.4 hours by increasing car speed from 35 miles to 45 miles per hour, and the extra cost is 65 cents for every hour saved or $4.16 for the trip. The journey will cost $12.45 more if the speed is stepped from 35 to 555 miles per hour or $1.20 per hour for each of the 10.4 hours saved.

According to these figures slower driving is more economical. Besides, high speeds under prevailing conditions are credited with the major cause of accidents.

OURSELVES AND OTHERS...

DO IT TODAY

A whirr, a roar, a blinding flash,
Seering flames and terrific crash.
Helpless people hold their breath,
Knowing that that crash brought death.

Death—'tis true, to old and young,
Violent—tortuous, bodies flung,
Mixed with rubble, dust and steel,
Children crying for a meal.

Maimed and broken—helpless souls
Die in anguish in these holes.
Those alive—they cry for aid—
Just another nightly raid.

A raid by madmen of the sky
Who think it honorable to die,
To satisfy—the lust and greed,
Of men with neither God nor creed.

STOP these monsters—now's the time,
Hitler, Mussolini, masters of crime,
Spawned in the gutter of fanatical hate,
DO IT TODAY—Tomorrow's too late.

Think of the children, robbed of their life,
Too fearful to cry, during this strife.
Crowded in shelters, in Britain tonight,
Hungry and cold, sleepless with fright.

Here it is peaceful—no roar of a gun,
No need to fear—the fanatical Hun.
But wishful hoping won't keep him away,
Let's all do our bit—TODAY—Every day.

—C. V. PARKER.

NATURE AND GOEBBELS

In Spring, when weary of the strain of making out that black is white, that foul is fair and left is right and only lunatics are sane, I love to lie—that is, to rest—on Mother Earth's reviving breast. Here, where the deadly nightshade blooms and poison ivy's verdant plumes suffuse the breeze with balmy fumes, 'tis sweet to sit at Nature's knee and harken to her hints to me.

The skunk, the spider and the leech, what golden lessons they can teach! The butcherbird of early morn, impaling sparrows on a thorn, offers a thought I will not scorn. The happy, heedless nightingale, the innocent dove, the linnet frail, by noon their silly day is done. The weasel gets them one by one, or else a Nordic with a gun.

Rabbits, I note, will yield the road to lizard or to slimy toad. The rust, the mildew and the blight, the cunning borer hid from sight, the cutworm creeping in the night to snip the ugly lily's stem—inspired am I by all of them.

Dear Nature, one refreshing hour in thin embrace restores my power. I ponder well thy laws, and then, assured that perfidy and ruin constitute thy way of doin', back to my microphone, my pen! Thy Goebbels is himself again!—N.Y. Times.

TOO SLOW

As the master of the house smoked his pipe the old gardener was busy at his digging.

Suddenly the old chap straightened up with a jerk, seemed to think hard for a minute, then gave the spade a vicious kick. "What's the trouble, Mac?" asked his employer.

"Well, sir, ye mind that Annie, who was maid here about twenty year ago?" replied Mac, angrily. "I was standing at the back door wi' her one nicht and she said she was cault; so I gied her my muffler. Weel, she said she was still cauld, so I gied her my coat. An it's just struck me that the lass wanted me to cuddle her. I'm that mad I didn't think of it before!"

MOTHER SAYS

Mother says and frowns at me:
"Grown-up soon I ought to be,
Married five and thirty years
Still no sign of sense appears.
Other men, and younger, too,
Do as old men ought to do.
You," she mutters, "act as though
You were never meant to grow.

"Reached the grandpa age, and still
Thinking you can run up hill.
Gray and fat and wrinkled, too,
Racing round as youngsters do;
Dodging cars that should be met,
Heeding as a school boy yet.
Seems you never will commence
Getting dignity or sense.

"Other men," the mother cries,
"Solemn look and very wise.
Other men wear gloves and spats,
Swallow pills and high silk hats,
And like actors on the stage
Carry well the weight of age.
You refuse to play the part.
You are just a boy at heart!"

Plans for Automatic Bomb Sight Offered to Allies by the Inventor

Montreal, June 17.—(CP)—Plans for an automatic bomb sight, expected to do away with much waste of bombs due to inaccuracy, have been submitted to the British and United States governments, Capt. Birger Johnsen, inventor of the device, said here last night.

Capt. Johnsen, a native of Los Angeles engaged in war work with the British commission for aircraft production, said his invention will automatically release a salvo of bombs even if an airman "is flying blind". The instrument also will allow the pilot to determine directly his ground speed and distance covered, "so though the plane was directly geared to the ground", said Capt. Johnsen, who came here to apply for patents.

According to the inventor, a pilot with the United States Army Air Service in the First Great War, the instrument will allow flyers to hit an object from an absolute altitude of 20,000 feet with exceptional accuracy.

"Ninety percent of bombs dropped by either side in the present conflict are wasted", Capt. Johnsen said, "due to inaccuracy. My invention should eliminate all this waste, without danger of crashing the pilot to anti-aircraft fire, and can be operated by a pilot alone without the aid of a crew".

The sight weighs less than 20 pounds, Capt. Johnsen said, and will facilitate the tasks of pilots, because they will have only to watch a panel of about ten inches square instead of keeping track of the many gadgets incorporated in the present day instrument boards.

The invention, he said, will eliminate all radio and other signal communication with the ground, a feature particularly important in wartime. Besides being a robot pilot, the unit will give an actual picture of the enemy position even if visibility is zero-zero.

AMERICA'S TROUBADOUR

A bronze portrait bust of Stephen Collins Foster was recently unveiled in the Hall of Fame for Great Americans at New York University.

The songs of Foster are so permeated with the spirit of the Southern Negro that they have often been mistaken for folk songs.

Many people have a hazy sort of notion that the great song-writer was either a Southerner or that he spent most of his life in the South.

Yet Foster made only one trip south of the Mason and Dixon Line, a visit to New Orleans in 1852, and virtually all his work—which was done in Pittsburgh.

Stephen Foster was born July 4, 1826, on the 50th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence and on the same day that John Adams and Thomas Jefferson died.

He began to dabble in musical composition and song-writing when little more than a child, and his first success, "Open Thy Lattice, Love," was published in 1844, when he was 16.

When he was only 20 he published a collection of his Negro ballads entitled "Songs of the Sable Harmonist," including "Louisiana Belle," "O Susanna," "Nelly Bly" and "Away Down South."

In these days writing songs for Negro Minstrels was profitable and Foster found his happiest and most successful theme in the nostalgic melancholy of the Southern Negro.

From 1846 until 1857, while living in Pittsburgh, Foster composed "Nellie Was a Lady," "The Old Folks at Home," "Massa's in the Cold, Cold Ground," "My Old Kentucky Home," "Old Black Joe," "Nellie Bly," "Hard Times Come Again No More," "Maggie by My Side," "Jeanie With the Light Brown Hair," and many other popular favorites.

"Old Dog Tray," sold 125,000 copies within 18 months after its publication.

Settling in New York in 1860, Foster composed ceaselessly—he wrote 48 songs in one year—but never again was able to produce a national hit.

Everything seemed to go wrong with him. He separated from his wife, began to drink heavily and eked out a precarious living by selling songs to music stores.

On January 10, 1864, he fell and injured himself in his room in a flowery lodging house and was taken to the charity ward of Bellevue Hospital where he died three days later.

Altogether, Stephen Foster composed more than 300 songs and arranged or adapted about 100 others.

Canning of Lobsters Described in Paper At Roslin W. I.

Roslin—The June meeting of the Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Arthur Bates on Thursday afternoon. There were 17 ladies present. With the president, Mrs. White, presiding, the meeting was opened by all joining in singing the Opening Ode and repeating the Lord's prayer, a short business period followed.

A donation of $5.00 was received from the Hungerford Junior Farmers for the Institute's Red Cross fund. The roll call was answered with "Uses of leftover meats." Members paid their membership fees for another year.

The leader, Mrs. MacDonald took charge of the program. Mrs. MacDonald who had gone through a lobster canning factory in Nova Scotia told of how they are caught and canned. The lobsters are caught in traps, these are about three feet long and made of fish net. The traps are baited with dead fish or meat.

The lobsters enter the traps and find it impossible to back out. As many as four or five are caught in a trap at the same time.

The fishermen attach large anchors to the traps to keep them in place and each fisherman has a different colour of buoys to mark his territory. Each morning they go out and bring in the lobsters. In large baskets. They are canned at the factories the same afternoon.

Live lobsters are a deep green color. They must be at least 7 inches long and have hard shells. The live lobsters are placed in tanks of boiling water and boiled twenty minutes, when cooked their color is bright red. Now they are ready to be disected. The tails and claws are the only parts used for canning.

The cans are lined with parchment paper; a measure of salt water and 1-2 lb. lobster are weighed and packed in each can.

The cans are partially sealed, processed and labelled and ready for market. At the last the Canadian women have been asked to buy canned lobster to help use the surplus.

With Mrs. Burleigh as pianist everyone joined in singing "The Maple Leaf."

Mrs. Fred Grey gave the topic "Rural opportunities and how to make the most of them."

Twenty five years ago Rural Ontario comprised 75 per cent of the whole population while today it is scarcely 25 per cent. Ontario is rapidly being changed from an agricultural province to an industrial province.

Rural communities are rapidly disappearing with all the young people going to the cities. The duty of the Women's Institute is to place rural Ontario on the same standard of life and happiness as enjoyed by city cousins.

"We should unite through our institute with these purposes in these hard times" she said, "first to improve our community; second, improve and strengthen our war effort, third, make Ontario and Canada a better place to live in and place rural women on the same level as our city cousins."

A contest was held and the program closed with the singing of the National Anthem. Later lunch was served and a social hour spent.

A nice partnership is that of black sheer with black lace. Black silk chiffon making a nice afternoon frock with small yoke and collar of fine cream-colour of black lace. At the waist, a ruffle of the lace is held in the middle by a narrow belt. Lace ruffle, on short sleeves.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

What Makes Dovelet Love Become Domestic Tyrant?

A letter received recently from a wife asks: "What happens to some men after they make the necessary responses in the marriage vows?"

Another one asks: "What changes the devoted lover into the domestic tyrant?"

And another one writes that her Romeo has turned into a grouch.

These things may not be as serious as they sound. The reason that some ladies see their lords in this cold, unflattering light may be due to the weather, or because the glamor has been rubbed off, or perhaps it's just wives they've hunt for crumpled rose leaves. Whatever it is, I've several letters from men which married women confide various domestic afflictions to me. The prize plaint is: "My husband, who was a devoted lover before the 'I do' vows are said, has developed a chronic domestic fault-finder and won't even take me to the movies."

Grabbed the bull by the tail, the policy of grouching at home is unwise. One indignant lady writes: "Grouching husband has burned the boat which would have carried him to a snug harbor in his old age."

And here's another: "Being nasty at home is the downward progress of squandering one's capital in gambling. The capital of love, respect, and common courtesy is necessary to keep a home going, as fuel is required for the furnace."

But enough of quotes. I have more than a suspicion that some of the ladies who have written me these bright barbs on the subject of domesticated Romeos who sulk hands and find fault are more than match for them. Their letters prove it. The wife who wrote that the selfish fault-finder "burned the boat" summed up the situation.

Every woman should have certain fails in marriage. Even when then the right to expect courtesy from her husband. Some men seem to think that the "I wills" and the "I dos" of the marriage ceremony are a ticket conferring the right to park politeness, consideration and generosity anywhere but under the family roof tree.

Most women—excluding the gold-digger type—marry because they are in love and hope to get an understanding and affectionate companion. And how desperately wives cling to that hope. It isn't enough just to pay the rent and supply a woman with food and clothing.

"Not by bread alone," said Jesus of Nazareth. One of the underlying reasons for the great divorce evil today is that so many marriages are conducted on the "bread alone" principle.

If a woman is a mistake—and let no husband imagine that marketing, cooking, dish-washing and housecleaning, not to mention child care, is a pleasantly-automatic process—she needs a little love-making and tenderness once in a while.

And how about throwing in a little fun, too. Now and then a theatre or a concert or picnic or-er the weekend, when there are not so many calls on the pay envelope. A woman's work is as trying as a man's, and all work and no play makes Jill just as dull as it does Jack. Now, let's hear from the husbands.

Afternoon Dress For Morning Wedding?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please tell me if a long afternoon dress is appropriate for a wedding to be held in a hotel on a Saturday morning at 10 o'clock? The reception is directly after the ceremony.

Apparently the only persons who are contemplating wearing this type of dress are the bride's aunt and a friend of the groom. The bride-to-be does not anticipate that her sisters or close friends should be burdened with such an expense . . . and it is my opinion that such a dress is not appropriate for the late morning and early afternoon.

What is your advice about this?

Anne.

You haven't told me the fact that determining the answer to your question—the fact that the bride is to wear and, therefore, the kind of wedding it is to be.

Customarily a 10 o'clock wedding, the bride's mother, the bride's mother, and sometimes the women members of the immediate families wear frocks of the same length as the bride's dress. That is, if it is a formal wedding, with the bride wearing either a floor-length veil (they wear floor-length dresses; if it is informal with the bride wearing a street-length dress, they too wear street-length dresses, and dress accordingly.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am to be married before I plan to make the fact public. When I do announce my marriage to whom does my mother and father send the announcements? Is there any set rule, or do I include all of my relatives, friends, and my boy friends?

Anne.

In case like yours, when no invitations are issued to the wedding but when announcements are to be sent out, the announcements are sent to the entire list of both the bride's and the groom's relatives and friends.

Can't Judge His Relentions

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please help us to settle this question that we are having in our family? A young man who is a very good friend of a daughter in the family suggested that he would like to put flowers on her mother's grave when the girl is taking flowers. Would this have any special meaning as to his part of view in life, or merely indicating that he is taking the girl and her family more seriously?

R. O.

Of course no one but the young man would know what his intentions are but the chances are that he is just a naturally thoughtful and considerate-minded fellow, who would like to make a courtly bow to the memory of the girl's mother. Perhaps the girl has told him beautiful things about her mother, and his suggestion shows his kind wish to participate in her memorial flowers.

The girl and her family should accept this kindly suggestion naturally, and not read into it anything serious that may not be in the intentions of the young man.

Dr. Dafoe's Column on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

CHILD'S MUSICAL EDUCATION CAN BEGIN AS EARLY AS ONE YEAR

Third of a series on the normal progress of the child in the first year.

Many children at one year are able to walk. But if your year-old child, though apparently healthy and vigorous, still takes flops when-ever he tries to get along erect, you have no need to worry. A great many muscles must work together in the apparently simple process of walking erectly and gracefully. A leg, buttock, abdomen, trunk and leg muscles all play a part. Some children are slower than they are in coordinating these than others. Overweight children find it harder to manage than the small, wiry type. An average child can walk well until it is 14 or 15 months old.

At an early age the child begins to delight in balancing himself, and you may find that your child stands and supports his weight by hanging onto a chair or table for a long time before he lets go and starts out on his own. It is not necessary or advisable to force him through this stage. After a while he will walk with his little muscles in his feet and legs strengthened. He will take one step without support, and stand, swaying, but soon gets his balance and his weight well distributed over the feet. Then he will take another step, and so on until walking is merely another habit he has acquired.

Progress in talk is much the same. There is a great variation in the speed of talking that year-old children do. Some can't or don't speak at all, others are quite talkative.

Some children are slow in learning to talk not because they are backward but simply because they have no impulse or desire to talk. You see the same trait in some items talk too much, some talk very little. Children who have a great deal of attention from their parents who believe children should be seen and not heard, do not develop in talking as early and regularly as children who are surrounded by children of their own age, or who are encouraged to babble and talk. Oddly, girl babies usually start talking two or three months before boys do.

At 12 months a girl normally understands a great deal of what is said to her, and she may be able to say such words as mama, papa, water, milk, kitty and to identify the articles to which they relate. She listens to everything said within her hearing. Often she is surprised by coming out with a word that has no relation to the subject under discussion or seeing. Sounds affect her, and she forms clear ideas of what they mean by the tone of your voice.

At this age babies begin to show a real interest and enjoyment in music, and there has been plenty of it. The Dionne Quintuplets have had music as part of their daily lives since they were born, and though they had their daily naps, they were put to sleep to this music, and when they had their fifteen minute rest periods, before meals, it was to the soothing strains of music. I think it has been beneficial to them in more ways than one.

A child of twelve months spoils easily. I think that if he wants things, he sometimes gets them if he makes enough fuss about it. Be careful, for if you give in a time, you have a serious problem on your hands.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

The Facts About Pimples by Some Cases

As youngsters we thought that any boy to get with pimples did not wash his or her face thoroughly because of the blackheads so often present. Later we were told that pimples were due to eating too much sugar and candy. Finally it was found that as pimples occurred just as the boy and girl were emerging into manhood and womanhood—puberty—some gland change was at fault and pimples should disappear when the change was completed. This often means many years of distress and embarrassment for young people as they pass through the adolescent age.

While the glands must definitely have some relation to pimples, many physicians still feel that foods are an important factor; that the glands at fault are not able to affect sufficiently the other glands which have to do with the handling of certain foods in the body.

That some individuals are sensitive or allergic to certain foods is that these foods cause hives and head colds is well known. That in some individuals these foods cause pimples is pointed out by Dr. F. E. Tisserie, Montreal, in Journal of Allergy. Dr. Cormia suspected that in 25 of 30 private patients with acne vulgaris (pimples), the cause was some food or foods to which they were sensitive. Twenty were given diets in which suspected foods were left out. Sixteen patients believed that one or more foods caused the acne to become worse.

The foods most frequently mentioned were tomatoes and chocolate. These are two excellent foods the tomatoes being unusually rich in vitamins and chocolate candy supplying the energy so greatly needed by growing boys and girls. Other foods aggravating the acne were spinach, [illegible] wheat, white bread, coffee, [illegible]ten, eggs, peas, grapefruit, milk, string beans, tea, milk, oatmeal, fish, corn, lettuce, beets, cheese and cabbage. These are all good and necessary foods and should be [illegible]. After the flare-up showed which foods were aggravating the acne, the offending foods were first given in small quantities and gradually increased so that finally the individual was able to eat an ordinary helping without any aggravation of the pimples.

Most physicians are now equipped to make skin tests of foods. The patient himself can try leaving out foods from his diet which he "suspects" aggravate his acne.

OUTLOOK UNCOMFORTABLE

Chicago June 17 (AP)—The outlook was mighty uncomfortable today for a good share of Chicago's youngest generation because of a labor dispute of 10 truck drivers. Yankees Giving Rival Clubs Jitters as They Begin to Roll; Only Game Out of Top Spot

Score Three Unearned Runs to Defeat Indians by 6-4

DIMAG STILL HITTING

(By Judson Bailey)
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York Yankees have a psychological edge over their rivals wherever they get rolling high and handsome in their present manner.

In winning their eighth consecutive game yesterday they appeared to overawe Cleveland Indians and this should be a danger signal for the rest of the American League. In their days of glory the Yankees always had two strikes on every foe before they ever sauntered on the field.

The bombers didn't outhit the Indians and they didn't outpitch them yesterday, but they won 6-4 and cut Cleveland's first-place margin to a single game.

The tribe had a 4-3 lead by the time the Yankees came to bat in the eighth inning and Lefty Al Milnar was looking better than he had at the start of the game. Then his infield went to pieces and donated the Yankees three unearned runs.

Extends Hitting Streak

Joe DiMaggio extended his hitting streak to 20 straight games with a stinging double in the fourth inning, but had no part in any of the Yankee scoring. The three-game series drew 100,618 fans.

Washington's Senators downed Detroit Tigers 3-1 in the only other American League game. Ken Chase pulled a fine pitching show for his first victory since April 21, scattering eight hits and fanning seven batters. The Senators poked out Buck Newsom for their hits in the first six innings with Buddy Lewis again delivering the most important blow, a two-run single.

National League

In the National League New York Giants trimmed out Cincinnati Reds 6-0 on the three-hit hurling of Bill Lohrman and the wildness of John Vander Meer and Elmer (Lucky) Thompson.

The shutout-no hit south paw star, who had walked only four men in two complete games, went the first four men who faced him at the start of yesterday's game. Thompson was rushed in from the bull pen and he walked the next man.

The Reds finally got the Giants out, but in the second inning Thompson walked two more, one of the passes loading the bases and the other forcing in a run.

The New York righthander was spectacular on the mound, letting only one runner get past first in the whole game.

Chicago Cubs cuffed the Phillies 9-1 with Bucky Walters in relief. Babe Dahlgren, their new first baseman, played an important part. He handled 4 dozen chances and participated in three double plays. Two of Walters' runs batted in were home plate. He also made a hit and got two walks at the plate. Jake Mooty kept the tall-enders scoreless until the ninth.

NEWARK BEARS THREE GAMES UP IN INT. LEAGUE

Score 6-0 Victory Over Maple Leafs on 13-Hit Assault of 3 Hurlers

BUFFALO WINS

(By The Associated Press)

The inutilious walk, when encountered in clusters can prove fully as damaging as the more spectacular base hit, Rochester Red Wings will be sad to testify.

Five of them thrown together with lavish hand by pitcher John Berly in a single inning last night, when interspersed with a couple of hits scent the Red Wings seven big guns, brought their defeat by Jersey City, 12-8 and dropped them three full games behind the International League-leading Newark Bears.

Newark unfolded a 13-hit attack against two Toronto pitchers to win a 6-0 and take a tighter hold on the top. John Lindell allowed the Maple Leafs only four straight hits in scoring his eighth victory of the season.

Henry Majeski and Tom Padden each pounded three hits for the leaders and drove across two runs apiece. Lindell struck out seven.

A four-run rally in the seventh, climaxed by Mickey Rocco's game-clearing triple, gave Buffalo a 7-3 triumph over Baltimore Orioles. Orioles suffered their first setback of the season. Jim Levey sparked the winners' attack with three hits, including a home run. Mike Rocco was credited with his fourth victory of the year, but he had a close shave when Porfie Valdivia had to come in and quell a ninth-inning uprising. Baltimore batters fanned Bob Seeds for the last out with the bags loaded.

Orie Arntzen shuttered the night air with a home run, a triple and a double as Syracuse Chiefs handed Montreal its third straight defeat, 4-0. The Chiefs committed six errors, but they managed to choke off a couple of late rallies by the Royals.

CORBYS SCORE 7TH STRAIGHT IN SOFTBALL LOOP

Connie Harris Pitches Six-Hitter to Down Esquire Kids 10-0

HEAVY HITTING

Behind Connie Harris' six-hit pitching the Corby A. C. chalked up their seventh consecutive win in as many games played in the City Senior Softball League when Coach Bawden's Corby's nine downed the Esquire juniors, 10 to 0 at Coleman Flats last night.

The Corby swatsmiths went to work on the youthful Doug Adams and scored four runs in the initial frame to count in behind Harris' air-tight pitching effort.

Guay made a sensational running catch on Hans Barrtage's first inning jitter, but Ronsky followed with a double, Henn hit for the circuit, Ty Barrtage singled and Kier doubled and before the dust had settled four runs were scored. The Corbys continued to add to their scores, but they managed to choke off a couple of late rallies by the Royals.

Extra Base Hits

John Bawden led the winners on the attack with a home run and two singles in four trips, Henn getting a circuit blow and a single, as the Barrtage boys also counted a brace of safeties. Art Mansfield with a brace of singles and Cook with two one base blows accounted for the majority of the Townsend-led juniors' offensive.

The loss dropped the Esquire nine into a three-way tie with the Cementmen and the Reliance for second place, as the Corby A. C. remain undefeated in seven starts. The lucky number ticket selected was number 706.

NO DEAD-PAN HERE

The cigar store Indian inscrutability of Brown Bomber Joe Louis is conspicuous by its absence in this series of intimate photos taken at his training camp, where he is tuning up her next Billy Conn. At TOP LEFT, Louis becomes positively voluble as he displays the hands that are his fortune. TOP RIGHT, playing with the camp pup, "Proud Joe." BOTTOM LEFT, cogitating on Conn and BOTTOM RIGHT, the sleep-inducing rigbt.

DAVE CASTILLOUX DEFEATS BERGER IN CLASSY BOUT

Left Jab Thrown Continuously Through Contest Wins for Montrealer

GIVEN 5 ROUNDS

Toronto, June 17—(CP) — Dave Castilloux, of Montreal, Canadian lightweight boxing champion, has lightweight victory chalked up today another victory to Montreal and after as he returns to Montreal Maxie engaging his Montreal rival, Maxie Berger, here last night. Judges took an unquestionable 10-round decision from Berger before 5,000 spectators in a match that had no knockdowns. Castilloux weighed 142 1-4 and Berger 142 1-2.

Castilloux started throwing a left jab in the first round and kept it up right through the fight to pile up many points. He never was in serious trouble and the few times Berger had him in a bad spot Castilloux worked into a clinch or weaved and bobbed until he was in the clear.

The Canadian Press gave Berger only two rounds, the second and seventh. Castilloux taking the fourth, fifth, sixth, eighth and ninth. The first, third and tenth were even.

Castilloux' footwork had Berger throwing punches over his rival's shoulders on many occasions. The champion boxed cleverly and piled up punches on his fighting. There was little heavy fighting in the ten rounds.

Johnny Greco of Montreal, came back strong after having trouble with George Tweedie of New York City to win a six-round preliminary by a technical knockout in the final round. Greco weighed 138 3-4 and Tweedie 137 1-2.

FIGHTERS END TRAINING GRIND FOR N. Y. BOUT

Louis is Favored to Win Over Billy Conn and Retain Heavyweight Title

40,000 EXPECTED

By GAYLE TALBOT
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, June 17 (AP)—Their training completed, brash Billy Conn and big Joe Louis are scheduled to take things mutually easy today, merely fiddling around and resting up in preparation for tomorrow night's championship battle at the Polo Grounds.

Billy, who surrendered his 175-pound title let order to get a crack at Louis' unsmirched crown, is down for a limbering-up session in a New York gymnasium, while the negro champion lounges at the coot of his training camp at Greenwood Lake. They will both meet until the weighing-in tomorrow noon at the offices of the Athletic Commission.

Both appear to be in excellent condition, geared for a fast and furious tussle. Business is booming at Promoter Mike Jacobs' ticket windows, with the veteran Jacobs Mike to predict a crowd of 40,000 and a gate of $467,000, the second against Conn winning remain at 13 to 5, about what they were Monday.

Most of Conn's backing seems from sentiment and the fact that Billy as a former middle and light heavyweight turned in a brilliant 4-out unbroken string of victories. The hard truth remains that tomorrow night's fight brings together a fine little man, whose ability to stand against the best of the division heavyweight has yet to be proved, and a great, big man who for four years has slaughtered all comers.

Build-Up Amazing

The build-up for this bout has been an amazing thing. Last summer, when Conn was the light heavyweight, Johnny Ray, first began talking about fighting Joe Louis. Conn's were good for many a laugh around fight headquarters here.

Then Billy became personally attached to the handsome boy from Pittsburgh and he adopted him. Billy frequently was Mike's front man in the deal and he have convinced the crusty old promoter that he was going to be as commercial as a bill collector, that he really had a chance to whip Louis. He was going to train down to fight the man-killer and he isn't a petiter pugilist although he now was a year ago.

Approximately a third of the country's leading fight authorities, including many who have seen Louis in the hardest at Johnny Ray last summer, are picking Billy to win. I don't think he lasts three rounds it will be astounding.

LACROSSE TEAM FINED

Montreal, June 17—(CP) — The Quebec Lacrosse Association has fined the Lachine-Ville St. Pierre team $10 Monday for being late for a game in Cornwall last Friday.

"Senior group games must all start on the hour," said the league secretary, much stiffer fines will be installed in future," said Association President Joe Mortier, announcing that the fine will be imposed.

The action was believed to be the first of its kind ever taken by the association.

YESTERDAY'S STARS

GOSSIP & COMMENT

When Billy Conn, Pittsburgh's pride for a world heavyweight boxing title, enters the ring at the Polo Grounds versus the Detroit Conn will be the eighteenth challenger Louis has met since he knocked out Jimmy Braddock, Cinderella-man and then the world's heavyweight champion, in Chicago's Comiskey Park, Chicago. The oddity of the whole Conn-Louis setup is the vast difference of opinions ranging in the whole sporting report classes of newspapermen. Recently one widely known writer has openly stated that Conn would be a cinch to be on the floor at the end of the third, while another boldly predicts Billy Conn is the only man, who has a chance to win over Louis, via the boxing route. Uncle Mike Jacobs has planned Conn's entrance to the heavyweight picture with shrewd candor and a build-up the like of which pugilism has not seen since Georges Carpentier was imported to fight Jack Dempsey and it was later revealed the Frenchman only weighed 171 pounds at ringside.

It must be remembered that Joe Louis has only been knocked out once and that Max Baer knocking needed 12 rounds with a trip hammer right hand to dispose of the then youthful Louis. Their next meeting finds no one except to the least-informed fight fan, if Conn owned a good right hand punch he might command greater support. But unfortunately, Conn, like Tom Heeney again or not. Yesterday's win was the eighth in succession for Cy Yankees, but had the Cleveland inner-works held collapsed in the ninth, may-be 'twould have been another story. Over 100,000 fans saw the three-game week-end series between these two clubs at the Yankee Stadium.

SPORT SALAD—The "fight mob" moved in on Broadway today all agog over the Louis-Conn fracas Wednesday night....The Wrigley estimate a crowd of 40,000, Mike's average a ten-spot each at the turnstiles....There have been 10,000 tickets sold for the Washington-Redskins pro football games already.... Dan Portman, manager of the Chicago Bears' football squad, is an Interne in a Detroit hospital....Stan Amo, who was forced out of the early part of the local softball wars, turned up with the Reliance "plane-makers" in their little one-game, Monday night, but can beat Reliance Friday night, the Marden-Rankin boys will have a trounced every team in the league twice..... Give him lotsa time.

Believes Wavell Seeks to Learn Axis Strength

(By KIRKE L. SIMPSON.)

Washington, June 17 (AP). — Although Axis officials describe the British offensive in Libya chiefly as a "major" operation, it appears so far to be only an offensive-defensive move.

General Wavell's main purpose probably is to feel out Axis strength. Unless the resistance is so feeble as to indicate no substantial Axis reinforcement on that front via the Sicilian Straits in recent weeks, a British attempt to retake the Libyan coast line seems wholly improbable.

Nevertheless, the British offensive, whatever its strategic or tactical purpose, is definitely important. It confirms Prime Minister Churchill's recent report to Parliament that General Wavell now felt himself stronger in Egypt.

One purpose of the British foray west of Sirtis may be to determine the composition of Axis forces in that area. While Nazi air and land forces have been withdrawn from Sicily, from Greece and presumably to some extent from Bulgaria and elsewhere in the Southern Balkans, there has been no intimation that any have been removed from Libya, Middle East Strategy.

Should it develop that such a transfer has been made, that only a thin screen of German troops and specialists remain in Libya and that the bulk of the Axis army there is Italian, it would alter British strategic conceptions.

For one thing, it would be unchallengeably evidence that the Nazi High Command is eyeing some other main route eastward to break Britain's hold on Egypt, the Suez Canal and the Near East generally. With only an Italian army concentrated in Libya, even if reinforced with Germans, the Italianized Wavell could be virtually certain that he would not encounter that his greatest danger lies.

It is a reasonable guess that half or more of the British force of some 300,000 men under Wavell's command is concentrated for defense of Egypt proper. There is no reason to doubt that it could deal effectively with any Italian army not heavily reinforced with Nazi blitzkrieg units. Experience of the British Command with the huge

ATTACK BOMBERS ROLLING OFF ASSEMBLY LINE BY THE SCORE

Aerial weapons for America and Great Britain—not singly or by the dozen, but in scores—are rolling out of the doors of the Douglas Air-craft plant in Santa Monica, Calif., countless others already in service with the United States and Great Britain. and futile Fascist Army lead by Mussolini, formerly Italy's No. 1 Socialist, and of the Greek army with Italian forces of Albania, sufficiently proves Italian military ineffectiveness.

Primarily a Reconnaissance

London would have small concern over the situation in North Africa if it were not for German forces sent to retrieve Italian disasters in Libya. Until they have definitely just how much the Axis Army now there has been recently reinforced and to what extent those reinforcements are German rather than Italian the British Command must regard that flank as its greatest danger point.

All of which invites satisfaction of the British North African offensive as primarily a reconnaissance in force. There would seem to be no point in a British attempt to retake Libya, thus more widely dispersing British forces already scattered from the Libyan-Egyptian border to Syria, while the next Nazi blitzkrieg objective in the Near East is unknown.

London's doubts that the German-Russian crisis will lead to Nazi-Soviet hostilities still seem justified. There is no certainty, however, that Germany will not also be an objective of Nazi political-military maneuvering. The Germans may desire access to Turkish bases on the Mediterranean coast close up to Cyprus.

Cyprus would be the logical stepping stone for an air and sea-sea borne invasion of the Levant States, for which Germany's capture of Crete paved the way. Without air bases in Turkey, however, capture of Cyprus would be a far bigger job than was the taking of Crete.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was taking a walk with pop for his appetite and asking him more questions than he was answering, and we started to go passed a news stand and I said, May pop, there's the new number of Kolinsal Komics Magazine just out, will you get it for me, pop, wont you, pop?

Do you think you would derive any useful or elevating information from it? pop said, and I said, Sure pop, G, it's the only way I can find out the end of The Hunted Hunchback. In the April number he obducted a lot of kids by promising to lead them to fame and fortune and show them all kinds of wonderful and mysterious sites, and he took them to his deserted cabin in Haunted Hollow and tortured them with all different kinds of torturing machines because he likes to hear kids yelling and see them make peaceful faces and in the May number Colonel Keen, and his mounted men rescue the kids after different adventures in Haunted Hollow, but they couldn't find the Hunchback and they're going to find him in the June number and that's going to be the end, so G wiz-kickers, pop, I dont want to miss that, do I? I said.

Why not? pop said, and I said, Well holey smokes, pop, I mean G roosten, I just told you. And besides that, the Hooded Scorpion invented a machine to blow up half the world in the May number, so how am I going to find out if it worked or not? I said.

If you have a sufficiently imperative urge to learn, you'll save up your own pennies to find out, because you've got going to find out with my hard earned money, pop said.

Meaning darn if he was going to buy me the magazine on account of it not being useful or elevating. Which maybe it's not.

The Stars Say

BY GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Wednesday, June 18

A FAIRLY active day is read from the prevailing planetary influences although on the whole they may not be interpreted as giving great assistance to promote the affairs in hand. There are several angles for duplicity, fraud, misrepresentation and intrigue, especially as concerns travel, writings, all forms of communication, whether directed toward business ends or in relation to social, sentimental or household associations. Things of a high order in art, poetry, music or any creative expression are fortified.

Those whose birthday it is may have a fairly active and lively year, but one not free from disappointment, treachery, intrigue and peculiar dangers. These are subtle as well as grave, unless complete discretion and vigilance be exercised in all manner of contacts, both business and intimate. Travel, correspondence and contracts of all natures call for wariness. Romantic intrigues may present peculiar stasis. The most propitious rule is concerned with higher aspects of creative art, drama, beauty, mysticism or idealism.

A child born on this day may have energy and initiative although its trends will be in the higher forms of art, music, poetry, drama, romance and idealistic aspirations. It may encounter more social relations.

An inventor has combined in one device a soldering iron and blow torch that can be heated by gasoline, benzine or denatured alcohol.

Egg Storage Shows Large Decrease

Toronto, June 17.— Fairly good demand on the Toronto open produce markets yesterday with butter and egg prices on a firm basis.

The egg market remained in a strong position as a result of declining production and slow storing operations. With the exception of pullets, prices to shipper on all grades advanced 1c-2c today, while the retail section held firm at unchanged levels.

The Dominion Department of Agriculture expresses disappointment over the fact that storage stocks of eggs are 1,200,000 dozen below a year ago at 5,814,720 dozen, and the department points out that in order to meet up fall export requirements, a considerable quantity of eggs will have to go into storage during the present month. Lighter stocks were attributed to the large export of eggs during May.

Reports indicate recent heavy marketings of fowl, with the possibility that many of these are now 2-year-old, inasmuch as there was a large surplus of pullets last year. Systematic culling is desirable, the department says, but the present situation does not appear to warrant heavy reductions in flocks. It is, therefore, suggested that the trade urges producers to retain for laying purposes all birds which are physically fit and in such condition as to ensure a maximum egg production during the next three months.

Forward buying kept offerings on the butter market moving fairly well and prices on the Ontario product rose 1-4 cent a pound. Early sales of No. 1 grade creamery solids went through at 31 cents a pound, with later business reported at 31 1-4 cents.

Canada Must Do Her Share If Britain is to Win the War

William Strange in Address at Victory Loan Rally Says Britons Are Undergoing Terrible Experiences but Canadians Can Help by Providing the Cash for Ships and Weapons

AT CRITICAL PHASE

"The Battle of the Atlantic was brought to the attention of every government sponsored radio commentator connected with the "Carry On" campaign, as the most critical phase of the Battle of Britain, as he spoke before a Belleville audience at a Victory Loan rally held in the Collegiate auditorium on Monday evening. Mr. Strange has recently returned from England where he was given every opportunity to see conditions as they really are. Referring to the Battle of the Atlantic, he said, "We need ships to bring over the supply now urgent and mounting. If the supply is cut off, the Battle of Britain is lost and if we lose that battle, the battle of Canada, of South Africa and Australia will never have to be fought."

Tells of Air Raids

Mr. Strange gave a vivid firsthand account of the terrific pounding which Britain took during the month of April last when, what he termed the "Battle of Britain" was at her height. "Five hundred planes dropped nearly one ton high explosive bombs and 100,000 incendiaries in a concentrated area which lasted almost to dawn", he said. "London, a very large city, however, and the enemy came with bombs right after night before set, the scars are visible. Those scars are visible now," stated the speaker, "but the spirit remains unbroken. A air -raid sirens is an indication that planes are near but it does not mean that the city will be bombed and no notice is given to people until the terrific noise of the anti-aircraft batteries gives warning that the raid is becoming local. Mr. Strange described the results of a number of air raids where about after street of houses had been reduced to rubble, leaving only a few high-explosive bombs which he termed as "terrible devastating and wicked."

"The people of Britain are taking it", assured Mr. Strange, "they are leading history every day but when looking back they are overwhelmed by bombs one wonders where they get courage.

"They are not all killed, thank goodness, but they lose their all, either moved away to another district or have their homes razed. We have moved five blocks down, but they are now on working for victory where they were before."

Takes Courage to Stay in Bombed Areas

"It takes a great deal of courage to remain living in a bombed area which has been razed with bombs during which is in constant danger of repeated raids but the people of Britain have learned to worry about their lives about their property and money The only thing they have which had been taken away from them is take to deal with Miller and give him the greatest courage they are receiving. "How soon will we be able to help Britain and Canada is not what the people of Britain are thinking", said Mr. Strange.

The speaker asked the audience to "Think of Britain and the people of Britain and the part they play in the Battle of the Atlantic, which is the battle for the supply ships with the Allies." This did not mean, that the allies were losing ground. They are gaining ground, he said, but two ships are being sunk for every one which can be built by the combined resources of Britain and the United States.

Ships Urgently Needed

"We urgently need ships to keep the supply line open, to feed the people of Britain who are fighting the Battle of the Atlantic, for the sides of the Atlantic, people who are living in little houses, workers in factories, and they are the ones who are making the munitions they really need", stated the speaker. "Of course the people of Britain can take it" he continued, "but why should we sit back when by sending our purses we can make it possible for them to have to do only what is for long. We must make up our minds to do something a little more definite than merely read the accounts in war by in the newspapers and say 'We are going to win'. "What have we done?" he asked.

"The whole thing boils down to this. We can have every cent we've got to get into the war—have got to put into it. We have to be responsible, no safe or intelligent escape. No one observant would be to deceive the people in the front line to whom we have looked to as our support—if that promise is going to be kept, we are receiving."

"Those are the facts and we must deal with the facts as they are. Britain is fighting for her life against the strongest military force the world has ever known. Now that we are not yet sufficiently realizing the seriousness of these matters except that the thing must be stopped or the aggressors brought to book."

Must Give to Limit

"So," concluded Mr. Strange "when we are asked to give money we must give to the limit. If not, we are failing. Britain and the rest country may go down in history as the people who failed to save and our children may be sold into bondage. We must not fail, we will never do."

Has Bays $154,000 Worth of Needs

Prior to Mr. Strange's address, an announcement made by Campbellford, Chairman, Judge Cameron, stating that Mr. Tom Reid, President of Bata Shoe Company, Batawa, had subscribed Victory Bonds to the extent of $150,000, brought a storm of cheers and applause from the audience. Mr. Reid is a resident of Batawa and received the official thanks of Judge Cameron for the generosity of his contribution for victory.

Mr. Boyce, Chairman for the evening, introduced Mr. Strange, president of the Hastings Victory Loan Campaign, and the Belleville Municipal Band for the assistance which had been given in the campaign and also to Mr. Jack Deacon who had entertained during the rally favored with a number of solos. The announcement was also made that two of the songs which were sung by Belleville residents were composed by with a tremendous ovation. Mr. Reid's songs are "Britain Will Stand and Face the World Together" was written by Mrs. Reid and "Britain and the Ontario Intelligencer, with the Allies" by Jack Deacon with Mr. Reid, while his second number, "We'll Do the Job for You" was written by Mrs. was also written by Mr. Carver, with Reg Hinchey writing the music.

Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne, in a recruiting address, stated that there was an urgent call for men in the active service forces and appealed that while there was still opportunity for voluntary service for Canada's young manhood to enlist with their country's active forces.

Production Pace For Cargo Vessels To be Speeded-up

Washington, June 17 (AP)—A United States shipbuilder will without the Maritime Commission's 312 emergency cargo ships in less than about three months faster than the speediest construction record established during the First Great War, J. E. Schuyler, Director of the Commission's Emergency Ship Construction Division, reported last night.

And the new "ugly duckling" ships, all but a few of which are Liberty ions displacement, will be larger than most of those built in 1917-18, he added in an address before the Society of Professional Engineers.

"Our present production pace is a maximum tige of four months on the ways, with the stock material delivery of seven months from keel laying until delivery of the completed ship. "And we seriously anticipate that we may be able to reduce the time on the ways to three months and another 1½ to 2 months in the west basin, which means a total elapsed time of 4½ to five months from start to finish."

ing, companies, "Spies" some fallerings, some shortcomings and some failures, we have each in our own way sought to establish the worth of the common man, the dignity of human labor, the sacredness of human humanity, the sacredness of human life and the exaltation of our christian faith.

"Perhaps we have gained most previous things in peril. They would change faith, truth and religion, liberty and justice into infidelity, faith, falsehood, darkness, despair and slavery."

Ever since a cloud "as large as Hitler's hand" appeared on the European horizon, thoughtful men of this continent feared, if they did not see, the coming of the storm and the need of barbarism.

Will Continue to End

"From the first moment of tragic conflict, Canada, of her own free choice, took the hard road of sacrifice," Mr. King said. "With all Britain in the vanguard of liberty and free men, Canada will continue to the end whatever be the cost."

It was surely the simple truth that there is more true peace before the universities of North America were the trustees of man's liberties. It is the duty of colleges to see that no matter what happens elsewhere, truth cannot be silenced or proclaimed on this continent, bravely resisted. Universities are not only of learning but of man himself, flower in significance and splendor."

"As I stand here today and gaze into the faces of those who are about to leave Princeton. for the university of war, I cannot but recall the other free institutions of learning and enlightenment on this continent which, in this fateful hour, will be no betrayal of that high trust", said Mr. King.

Honored Canada by Presence

"As I look upon you and see the gift which I have received at your hands, I cannot but feel that in honoring you also for the gifts which you have bestowed upon one who, an exile from the land of his birth, honours Canada by her royal presence. She honours herself and honours in the purity the sorrow, of her own homeland, Britain, by the presence of the citizenes of Canada to this continent, which owes so much to the motherland. Let me say, Princeton, on the behalf of the people of the country to which I belong, how much I value

"The name of the Crown Prince of Canada, of the Hereditary Prince will have an abiding place in the chapter of Canadian history which will record the struggle for liberty in this war. Canadians will be proud today that the Crown Prince of Princeton has made her royal name a part also of American history."

Regina $600,200, $0 per cent; Sydney $896,200, 44.8 per cent; Sherbrooke $1,000,000, 50 per cent.

To encourage ratepayers of the town to help Canada to their utmost, the Victory Loan Local Council has decided to make all subscriptions payable in cash or non-taxable for municipal purposes. The town itself has already invested $100,000 in bonds.

The City Treasurer of Brantford, Chas. E. A. Gordon, is particularly eager to help the loan over the top. He arranged a plan for financing investment requirements to the end of the year, he has been able to underwrite the $100,000 over the Victory loan. This is an increase of $75,000 over the investment originally planned.

Almost Quadrupled

Victoria County, N.B., reports one dollar for one subscription campaign—with an objective of 15,000 bucks. The county quota has been met with $55,600. This big oversubscription was instrumental in putting the Victoria County Council of Edmundston, town of selling ships and Canada, Bonaventure county home of the famed champion fishing resort, Restigouche, with 6,000 people, bought $450,000 worth of bonds, an average of $150 for every man, woman and child in the town. Lunenburg's objective was $250,000 but they have been passed by nearly 50 per cent.

There was a public appeal was made for the co-operation of life general agents in reaching the campaign objective, a spontaneous response was the result. There was disagreement however, as to identifying marks on the wheeler, Mundy said a red bull's head was painted on the control tower. Second mate Robert Taylor said he saw under the bull's head the word "Taurean"—French for bull. Another crew member said the legend painted there was "La Touche."

90 Minutes to Get Into Lifeboats

Crew and passengers were given 30 minutes—extended grudgingly to 90 minutes—to get into lifeboats, it was stated. A torpedo was fired into the engine room of the ship and detonated the front pages of British newspapers.

South African airmen were taking part in the operations, ranging from the Mediterranean to units and blasting at Axis defences.

Aircraft Factory Breaks Record for Delivery in May

San Diego, Calif., June 17 (AP) —Army bombers and naval patrol planes with a total of $10,450,000 were delivered by the Consolidated Aircraft Corporation during May, breaking all previous production records, Maj. R. H. Fleet, Consolidated president, announced today.

The May production included P-38 fast pursuit planes, long range land bombers for the United States and Great Britain; PBY and Catalina naval patrol planes for the United Air Force and the United States Navy; PBY-5 amphibian patrol planes for the navy.

The six-month production total established in May surpassed the previous record of the company for the entire year of 1940, which was $10,000,000 the first quarter of 1941. During 1940 Consolidated planes worth $9,349,550 were delivered.

A record army order for $236,000,000 worth of supercharged high altitude bombers of the B-24 type brought the Consolidated backlog of orders to $685,000,000, a record.

MAJOR OFFENSIVE 14 NAZI AIRCRAFT

It was believed here that Nazi troops also had been thrown into defence of their positions in Halfaya (Halfiya) Pass, key position leading to the Egyptian frontier, post of which has changed hands many many times.

May be Ready for Showdown

Whether these operations were the beginning of a full-scale offensive was not clear, but observers to observers that Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell might be ready for a showdown with the forces of Rommel, Nazi leader in the North Africa.

In Berlin, the Nazi commentary Dienst Aus Deutschland said that the strength of the forces Britain was employing in the Sahara region included a major battle was under way. This source expressed belief British troops might be trying to break through the Axis lines to reach their garrison at Tobruk, 75 miles west of the Egyptian frontier.

The Berlin radio claimed to have destroyed 89 British tanks yesterday and announced that the fighting dominated the front pages of British newspapers.

In the 13 days that followed, until rescue June 1, Mrs. Robin McCullough, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Cullough, Toronto, was the only one who enjoyed himself. He liked the "long boat ride," and thought the "flying fish" were "swell fishes"—sharks which followed the lifeboats constantly.

Two-Year-Old Enjoys Hardtack.

Mrs. McCullough, on the hardtack, pork, part of the meagre rations allowed the lifeboat. In a hotel room here last night the young mother still clutched a dried biscuit and Robin, chewing hardtack, said to Mrs. Cohen, M.P. of New Haven, Conn., "Hey, look, I'm two (years of age) an American-owned theatre, Mrs. Cohen, chewing on a hardtack interjected, "I'm two and a half."

The submariner took complete charge of the passengers when they returned from his futile effort to capture the schooner commander from sinking the Robin Moor.

Chief Officer Copied Chart

"We had no sea chart in our boat," Mundy said, "but the mate made a rough copy of a chart the chief officer had and we used that while the two craft bobbed up and down beside each other in the rough sea.

"The chief officer had been carefully plotted our course and when we were finally reached the captain of the Robin Moor he took the type and examined Mundy's chart and found he was less than two miles off his final position."

Mundy said he saw the submarine's blinker light shortly after 10 a.m. May 31 and answered, identifying the ship as a motor vessel steamer, Robin Moor."

The submarine ordered a boat sent. Mundy injured his ankle dropping into the boat which took him to the submarine. He said unable to speak German, but understandsa bore German translations.

Tells Heroic Destruction of Robin Moor

Washington, June 17 (AP)—Philip Williams, third secretary of the United States Embassy at Rio De Janeiro, arrived here today to deliver with detailed eyewitness accounts of the destruction of the United States merchantman Robin Moor by a German submarine of her destruction by survivors.

Williams carried the depositions made by the 10 members of the crew and the one passenger who reached Recife, Brazil, after they were landed at Capetown, South Africa, yesterday by a British rescue ship.

Yet this change in the situation, it was said, will have small effect on the State Department's plans for a vigorous protest. The view was that it was not necessary to wait any old given by the submarine that no lives were lost.

Unofficial reports indicated that the Australian and Free French forces still were ten miles from Damascus, capital of Lebanon, and five miles from Kiswe, junction on the road joining Syria.

The Allies said they were making progress on both these fronts, although resistance has been stiffened by detailed report from the 35 other survivors of the Robin Moor, who were landed at Capetown, South Africa, yesterday by a British rescue ship.

Repair Ship Delivered to U. S. Navy

Camden, N.J., June 17 (AP)— The repair ship Vulcan, a $14,000,000 ocean going "floating machine shop" was delivered to the United States navy yesterday by the New York Shipbuilding Corporation here.

The 9,100-ton craft is slightly smaller than a cruiser and is the first such vessel built for the navy since the last of the 8,236-ton Medusa was laid 20 years ago.

Equipped with more than $1,000,000 worth of machine tools, 500 machinists is trained to do quick repair work on naval craft, vessels say.

Honeymoon Gold

by PEGGY DERN

CHAPTER EIGHTEEN

"HOW LONG does one wait for the Halcyon boat?" asked Natalie.

"It seems there's another couple going over and their train doesn't come in until 11. It's that now, so I imagine they'll be here soon," answered June Heath, making room for Natalie and Brooks on the bench.

They talked the polite, meaningless conversation courtesy demands between people who are strangers and who are not yet sure that they want to be anything else. Brooks found himself liking Donald Heath. It wasn't going to be half bad to spend 30 days on an island where there would be at least one man he could enjoy talking with.

The four of them looked up at last when a taxi stopped at the pier and a man and a woman came toward them, escorted by the porter.

"New England schoolma'am," said Natalie under her breath. "Don't tell me people like that go on honeymoons."

"Don't be a snob, darling," said Brooks, and Natalie felt as though he had slapped her.

The two coming toward them certainly looked strangers to anything soft or sentimental. The woman was in her early thirties, the man a few years older. He was the neat, almost prim features that go with mouse-colored hair and eyes that are no particular color; her skin was muddy, as though from lack of air and exercise and proper diet. The man was thin, rather gaunt looking, and as he took off his hat the others saw through his rapidly thinning hair his bean carefully brushed in the fruitless hope of concealing a bald spot.

The porter said that you were waiting for the Halcyon Island boat, he said politely. "Therefore, how I be sure you are to get to your neighbor's there, I'm Orwin Littlefield, and this is Lucy, my wife."

Donald Heath shook his limp-looking hand and performed the introductions. The women eyed each other curiously, with that almost hostile look with which women greet new acquaintances and wait to find out whether or not they are going to be friends. And all were politely relieved when the motor-hugely moved up to the pier and they could climb aboard.

Natalie was then settled down for the run to the island, that Lucy Littlefield, a faint unaccustomed blush staining her sallow cheek, had slipped her hand in Orwin's arm to Natalie, carefully avoiding the eyes of the others, shouldering Natalie's bag, and hurrying in the wake of his wife.

"I hope you got that, my lamb—'DEAR little Mrs. Forman' — will you?" he asked.

"YOU drown her, or shall I? . . . It would be a pleasure!" said Terry firmly.

Bill said airily, "Listen, angelpuss, do you want a sock in the jaw—or would you rather behave yourself?"

Terry stared at him, affronted. "Well, for Pete's sake," she gasped, outraged. "I was just taking up for Betsy. Betsy's my friend. If a gal can't take up for a pal—"

"A gal could wait and see whether or the pal needed help," suggested Betsy gallly. "As a matter of fact, aren't you the one who needs help? Seems to me you're letting the lady get under your skin."

"You need only to look at Mrs. Edmonds and know her for the man-killing type — even though a little long in the tooth, wouldn't you say?" suggested Donald cheerfully, sorting his and June's bags from the Littlefields.

Lucy and Orwin looked at each other swiftly, almost as though appalled. And Betsy, reading the look said quickly, "I'm sorry. I'm afraid we're all rather unforgivable. None of us knows anything unkind Mrs. Edmonds is—well, she's really pathetic, and we mustn't let her bother us. I'm sure Terry doesn't mean more than half he says."

"You're being conservative. She doesn't mean a tenth of it," said Bill sternly.

Terry caught the tone in its voice and blinked like a startled child. She made a huskey, shaken apology. Don't mind me — anybody. I talk too much anyway. It's only that I just don't like the clinging vine type."

ALTER NATIONAL STRUCTURE FOR WAR PURPOSES

Australian Prime Minister Declares Too Many Men Now Engaged in Production of Non-War Articles

CIVIL PRODUCTION

Canberra, June 17—(AP)—Prime Minister Robert Menzies of Australia said today that "the national structure must be altered to become primarily for war".

In a radio address broadcast throughout Australia and carried by short wave to the United States and Europe, Mr. Menzies said that steps would be made to see that reserved employment is effective only in industries directly related to the war effort.

The Prime Minister said that the government will not hesitate to enlist the services of women in appropriate ways at the appropriate time in clerical and other suitable occupations. He said that too many men now are engaged in production of articles not related to the war effort.

Review Civil Production

The achievement in production of munitions, Mr. Menzies said, already is great but there is a shortage of machines, tools and skilled workmen. He proposed to create authority which will drastically review civil production.

The government is maintaining a voluntary system of enlistment in the armed forces, the Prime Minister said, but any obstacles to this must be removed.

Mr. Menzies said that unessential imports will be cut to the bone by rationing or prohibition. He said he proposes to appoint a supply minister lasting two present supply minister, Peter McBride, in charge of munitions. Directors will be appointed for armored vehicles production and another as director general of supply.

To Break Growing Shortage of Tankers

Existing manpower and organization, along with the co-operation of the United States, the Prime Minister said, will be used to break the growing shortage of tankers.

Average pre-war consumption of gas was 30,000,000 gallons monthly. This now has been reduced, Mr. Menzies said, but must be lowered to a maximum of 12,000,000 monthly for the internal combustion privately.

The government has decided to completely control the use of government coastal merchant shipping which will be requisitioned immediately, Mr. Menzies said. Incentive authorities will be appointed to railway and road transport systems. They will not control systems but will make sure that priority is given to the movement of vital materials and munitions.

Control Food Production

At commission will be appointed to control production, distribution and supply of coal. Mr. Menzies said a greater output of coal is required.

The Prime Minister said that soon after the outbreak of war all Parliamentary parties were summoned to approve the establishment of adequate industrial machinery, ensure that labor matters were investigated and redress made. He thought it incredible that some people now are interrupting munitions production and holding up erection of a gun cotton factory, military hospital and other factory extensions.

This stoppage sabotaged the nation war effort, he said. It resulted from subversive action those concerned would be in danger of treachery. Courts had been fully empowered to take vigorous action against persons responsible for strike situation. Similar action to be taken against employers interfering with the nations production and the government was hopeful of success.

THE WAR TODAY

By DON GILBERT
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Marshal Petain, who a year ago surrendered himself to the role of savior of France and betrayed Great Britain by treating with the enemy, has found it necessary in an exclusive verary broadcast to the French people to deny they were "sold out."

The old marshal, who had depended on a quick German victory for justification of his decision to break the French alliance with Britain, could only offer the French, after a year of hardship and humiliation, more suffering — "you still suffer for a long time because we have not finished paying for all our mistakes."

Yet he claimed France is better off today than a year ago, despite the food scarcity, the suffering under German occupation and the absence of freedom of speech and movement, and the low morale of people.

He based this claim on the increased industry now cultivated and the rebuilding of factories. He did not add that French industry is turning again in order to feed the German war machine and that a large part of any increased agricultural output will be subject to German requisitioning.

The first anniversary of the French defection, which is also the anniversary of General Charles de Gaulle's Free French movement, finds Petainists and de Gaullists alike in Syria and Lebanon, with British forces aiding the Free French.

The danger of a German attempt to capitalize on any delay of the British advance in the Levant states has been offset to some extent by the new British thrust into Libya, which appeared to be designed to sound out the strength of the Axis forces preparing for an invasion of Egypt.

The British mechanized forces advanced 40 miles across the Libyan sands yesterday, and the German radio admitted that under the pressure of the British drive the Germans were falling back in the sector of freedom of speech and movement, and the low morale of people.

This enemy assertion finds no confirmation in London or Cairo. There is indicated the plans of the forces under Lt.-General Sir James Marshall Cornwall envisage the defensive nature of the resistance encountered in the first stages of the incursion.

that a fully representative trades union panel will be established to advise on industrial matters.

Tribunals will be empowered to award preference to the union if it is warranted.

Mr. Menzies announced that assistant minister to administer Civil Defence, including A.R.P. will be appointed. Another committee will be appointed to investigate the question of war profits.

GERMANY DENIES CLAIMS

Berlin, June 17—(AP)—The German government today claimed today that "after the most careful, most meticulous investigations," it finds no evidence proving that German planes dropped bombs on Dublin. (The government of Eire charged June 2 that bombs which killed more than a score of residents of Dublin May 31 "were of German origin" and demanded reparations from Berlin.)

JAPAN AND N.E.I. FAIL TO AGREE ON TRADE PACT

Negotiations Are Abruptly Broken Off by Japan in Effort to Get More Oil, Rubber

(By Reuban Merin)
(ASSOCIATED PRESS DIARY WRITER)

Batavia, Netherlands East Indies, June 17—(AP)—Japan abruptly broke off economic negotiations with the Netherlands East Indies today, but both governments announced jointly that their failure to agree on a trade pact would lead to "no change in normal relations" between them.

A joint communique stated that the long conference at which Japan had been seeking the larger shipments of oil, rubber and tin "unfortunately failed to reach a definite accord."

Observers interpreted the Japanese action as indicating that Japan for the present was abandoning economic penetration of the Indies, rich in raw materials vital for war, despite efforts to obtain these commodities through Japan was considered likely.

At the 11th hour Kenkichi Yoshizawa, head of the Japanese delegation, asked the Netherlands delegation to reconsider Japan's proposals.

Japan had termed this reply "unsatisfactory". It rejected a Japanese request for larger shipments of the strategic raw materials than previously had been purchased and refused to grant Japan special privileges for economic development of the Indies.

The Governor General declined to reconsider his decision, based on his position of June 6, Yoshizawa then requested he had been instructed to withdraw his delegation. The joint communique followed.

SALICA'S PLAN IS PROFITABLE

Bantamweight Champion Scores Decisive Win Over Tommy Forte

By TED MEIER
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Philadelphia, June 17 (AP)—Crafty, cagey Lou Salica of Brooklyn still is bantamweight champion of the world because he had a plan and stuck to it.

On the verge of losing his 118-pound title to Philadelphia's Tommy Forte for the second time in six months, Salica got from behind last night to gain an unanimous 15-round decision over the challenger before 14,500 at Shibe Park.

Before entering the ring an 8 to 5 underdog because of Forte's excellent showing against him in January, Salica said he planned to win with a jab. And that's exactly what he did.

Right from the start Forte found Salica's left stuck in his face. For five rounds it didn't slow up the challenger. But in the sixth Salica's plan began to work. Forte's stamina and especially from the eighth through the 15th as Ducats Ducats Ducats

Crops Suffering From Dry Spell

Pt. Traverse, June 17 — For the first time in almost six weeks rain fell on this drought-stricken area for a short duration Friday night. It was not particularly heavy but is hoped that it came soon enough to partially save the situation.

The record dry spell, unlike last summer, has done much damage to the hay and grain crops. Pastures are parched by the heat and the ground on heavy land is becoming baked from lack of rain.

In some districts where haying is in progress, farmers have taken advantage of the dry weather, which has been ideal for curing and harvesting.

Cool and wheat crops will be poor and the straw from these grains will be short and scarce unless beneficial rain is in the offing.

Democratic Way of Life Endangered by Cynicism Kiwanis Convention Told

Atlanta, June 17.—Delegates from 2,175 Kiwanis clubs in the U.S., and Canada, were asked today to unite all groups and organizations in their home communities for an all-out effort for national defense and aggressive participation in public affairs.

Charles J. Griffin, of Beverly Hills, Calif., U.S. public affairs chairman told Kiwanians assembled here for their 26th annual convention that the threat to democracy came from cynicism, doubt and disillusionment."

He said that pre-1929 soft living, followed by ten years of depression and unemployment, are the reasons why democracy is being challenged today.

"Let those of us who have not been called into military service acquaint fellow Americans with their citizenship responsibilities," said Mr. Griffin. "This educational work is just as definitely a part of the program of national defense as is the expansion and the training of our army and navy. We must protect our institutions and our way of life."

Urban-Rural Relations

Charles Dilley, of Port Arthur, Ont., Canada, urged a campaign for better understanding between rural and urban people. He said rural folk have effective national unity until farm and town people are made to realize their problems are mutual. All groups are involved in the social structure of our society. The problems of the farm are not the problems of agriculture alone, who must discover new domestic and world markets to find a substantial for consuming our surpluses.

The agriculture leader suggested Kiwanis bring more town and country groups together for discussion of their problems and to prepare for post-war world conditions. He said that already 1500 clubs are taking constructive steps to increase better cultural, civil and economic relationships between these groups.

Combat Subversive Activities

"We need to prepare now for the time when once again the democracies are victorious," Dilley said. "There will be a bruised and bleeding world to seek to restore order to normalcy. We must be able to give peace, food and shelter to the war-torn countries. In so doing people of the world will see that Canada and the U.S. have proved that their democratic system and their way of life are best.

"Destruction of subversive and un-American activities were demanded by Mr. Griffin, whose public affairs committee submitted a 7-point program:

1. Opposition of fifth column activities.

2. Community councils for cooperation of all forces for civic and patriotic work.

3. Citizenship education for young people.

4. Assistance for naturalized citizens.

5. Conservation projects, flood and fire control.

6. Foster spirit of good will between U.S. and Canada.

7. Presentation of western hemisphere problems of defense and cultural relations.

Total of Restricted Foreign Funds in U.S. $7,000,000,000

Washington, June 17 (AP)—John W. Pehle, Treasury Department controller for foreign funds, estimated today that the approximately $2,500,000,000 in cash and other securities frozen by President Roosevelt's order "freezing" the holdings of Germany, Italy and other countries had been gathered in the United States.

Previous freezing orders had put $4,500,000,000 of foreign assets under his control, making the total of restricted foreign funds here approximately $7,000,000,000.

Pehle was unable to say how much of the new frozen funds belonged to Germany and Italy, but other sources indicated that probably most of the $2,500,000,000 caught by last Saturday's order belong to Switzerland and other countries.

To ferret out reportedly large sums hidden under "dummy" names by the Axis, however, he revealed that Ferdi May, formerly Treasury Attache in Berlin, has been appointed to head a special investigating staff.

Junior Farmers Hold Field Day And Judging Contest at Stirling

Women Judges Rank High With Men in Judging Holsteins

SPORTS PROGRAM

Stirling, June 17 (Special)—Lady judges ranked high with the men in the judging competitions at the Stirling Agricultural Grounds on Saturday afternoon, Miss Catherine Conver of Dartford was high lady judge in fair judges with a total of 142 points, which was also the total scoring points scored by Mr. Lawrence J. Bloomfield. Mr. Wesley Finch of Campbellford ranked third in the judges' division with a total 133 points. These judging competitions were highlights of the Holstein Breeders' Association field day held for the first time in Stirling. It was a inter-county event, that included the counties of Hastings, Prince Edward, Lennox and Addington and Northumberland.

Miss Conver was chosen in the judges' competitions in which contestants matched their skill in judging fine cattle from the farms of the following well known breeders. C. Ketchenon, Holloway; Jamie Mackie, Bellrock; Herb. Wait, Foxboro; Earl Burnside, Madoc; Geo. Burnside, Madoc and Philo Harris, Madoc. Ladies and gentlemen took part in the ladies' section of the competition, and also in the junior, the senior section and 13 junior farmers in the boys' section.

Brief Addresses

Brief addresses by prominent cattlemen of the province were heard at the lunch period with C. D. Graham B.S.A. Chief of the Ontario Holstein Field Service division and H. M. Hobby Field Secretary as the chief speakers. Mr. Philo Harris, President of the Hastings County Holstein Breeders' Association, acted as chairman and Mr. R. L. Fair B.S.A., County Representative of the Department assisted in various parts of the day's program.

Breed Build and Maintain Herds

C. D. Graham in his address emphasized the need for building improving and maintaining good herds. "Breed to the best" was the slogan of the speaker. "Now is the time in spite of the many demands made upon us as agriculturists, that we must for the sake of those to come after us work for the steady herd improvement. This is a time for post-war effort. When finally peace is restored and dairying resumed in the countries of Europe there will be a great demand for pure bred cattle. Canada's good herds as they start at the very beginning of the war, will be the ones from which they will turn for this help. A help, that will be unable to give unless we continue along the path of steady progress we have established by the European farmer."

Mr. R. M. Holtby, veteran Holstein breeder pointed out that British demands for higher production in the various branches of the dairy industry will be aided considerably by the pioneers already achieved in the organized herd improvement projects. Good herds make for higher production, lower feeding costs and steps in securing higher herd quality is building future security.

A period of sports events under the supervision of Ken Caskey with races for boys and girls and interesting contests for older folk was thoroughly enjoyed.

Britain Stops Granting Navicerts for Ships Bound for Petsamo

London, June 17.— (CP)—Informed sources said today that Britain had stopped granting navicerts for ships bound for the Finnish Arctic port of Petsamo because "several German divisions" are stationed in Finland.

(Finland has an agreement with Germany permitting Nazi soldiers to travel across the country to and from Norway. She has denied, however recent reports that large, fully-equipped contingents of Nazi troops have entered Finland.)

Ships attempting to reach Petsamo this source said, will be intercepted and detained by the British sea blockade. The decision to stop cargoes to Petsamo was said to have been made two or three days ago.

Virginio Gayda Says Economic War Declared

Rome, June 17 —(CP)— Virginio Gayda, Fascist editorial spokesman, asserted today the United States economic and financial measure against Italians and Germans constituted "an open declaration of economic war against the Axis powers" which may lead to actual war.

"The American measures "define themselves," the editor said in Giornale d'Italia, "as a new and important step in the march of American hostility along the road that leads to war."

Gayda estimated American investments in Italy at fully $146,000,000 against some $60,000,000 to $65,000,000, Italian investments in the United States.

"The balance is in Italy's favor," Gayda said.

Installment Plan Advised for Those Short of Cash Now

Measured by all the tests of sound finance, Victory Loan Bonds provide an investment of great attraction. The security is that of a country whose present wealth is being amplified in its resources. The interest yield is fixed in relation to similar securities, while the redeemed Victory Bonds are marketable. There should be no hesitation on the part of Canadians to invest in this investment for liberty.

To the small salaried man and wage earner Victory Bonds provide the most convenient opportunity of their financial needs, but to do this bit as well.

The installment plan provided by the government gives every man, especially those who have no immediate bank account, and five on the "pay as you go" basis will be paid. Some sacrifice in comfort and luxuries will be necessary.

For instance, those desiring to purchase a $50 bond can do so with a down payment of five dollars. In July and August payments of $7.50 can be made and in the three succeeding months the bond is paid for with payments of $15 each. On November 15th, interest at the rate of 3% will be paid. Those of higher denominations call for payments commensurate with the size of the fifty dollar bond.

There are only a few days left in which Hastings County can go over the top of its quota of the national drive. Approximately two hundred thousand dollars is the task. Everyone must do his and her best to see that this county is achieved. Five dollars will buy a bond, and help the Empire to victory. BUY IT NOW.

R. A. F. 'Drones' Out Sound of Derby Hoofbeats

Newmarket, England, June 18—(CP)—The Royal Air Force took no chances of a German bombing or strafing attack today on the 60,000 spectators at the derby, one of the greatest sports assembled in England since the war.

It put every kind of plane in the air and the roar of their motors drowned out the hoofbeats below.

There was only a single attempt by a few planes, but the duty flyers drew the biggest patrol since aerial warfare started in earnest last July.

Voluntary Evacuation Said to be Completed

Transfer U.S. Tankers to Guarantee Increased Oil Supply to E. Coast Area

Washington, June 18 (AP)—In its first positive action to pull more oil into the East, threatened by submarine warfare, Interior Secretary Ickes announced today a rearrangement of a ship tanker service to increase the United States Atlantic coast supply by 210,000,000 gallons annually.

After conferences with officials of the Sun Oil Company and the Standard Oil Company of California, Ickes, who is Defence Petroleum Co-ordinator, announced he had made recommendations whereby three huge tankers now engaged in routes between California and the east coast would be pulled out and switched to runs from gulf ports to the east coast.

The co-ordinator emphasized that this increase in the east coast supply did not greatly lessen the danger of a prospective shortage, in the Pacific area, where he has said restrictions on civilian use of automobiles appeared inevitable.

"Many additional steps must be taken," he said, "if a serious east coast shortage is to be averted."

A remainder granted by the Sovereign is considered an even higher honor than the original title and has been granted only a few peers in the last half century, notably Earl Kitchener and Earl Roberts.

Say Russia Must Decide Soon to Fight Hitler or Yield to Nazi Demands

London, June 18 —(AP)— Basing their declarations on a flood of reports and political speculation from European capitals, observers in London today said that Russia soon must choose whether to fight Germany or yield to humiliating demands involving considerable tangible loss.

Alleged 'Price of Peace'

Usually authoritative sources here said Germany would make these demands on Soviet Russia as a price of peace:

1. Full control over all the rich oil and agricultural lands of the Ukraine.

2. Right of passage for German troops through the Iran-Kirkasian Corridor, a route that would by-pass Turkey and lay Suez open to attack from the east. This route would also bring the Germans into the oil fields of Iran and Iraq.

3. Right to establish war industries in Soviet territory beyond the range of Royal Air Force bombers.

4. Placing of Russian Baltic Sea shipyards at Germany's disposal.

5. Demobilization of the Soviet Western Army.

See Eye With Germany Inevitable

Advices, from Ankara, Turkey, a clearing house for political rumor on the Continent, indicated the informant connected with the Soviet Embassy as saying Russian officers were openly asserting that war with Germany was inevitable.

FAVORITE ALSO RAN

Newmarket, England, June 18—(CP)—Mrs. R. MacDonald-Buchanan's colt Owen Tudor, an outsider at 25 to 1, today won the second wartime running of the Derby—the 261st renewal of the premier classic of the turf.

Owen Tudor won cleverly over the 1 1-2 mile course by a length and a half. It was the seventh Derby win for his trainer, Fred Darling.

The race was run at Newmarket instead of Epsom on account of war conditions.

Perfect June weather warmed the 60-guinea Newmarket course for the running of the classic.

Owen Tudor's time was two minutes, 32 seconds.

BRITISH STRATEGY BARES STRENGTH OF AXIS IN LIBYA

Withdraw to Forward Positions to Avoid Encircling Movement by Enemy

TAKE MANY PRISONERS

Cairo, June 18 —(AP)— The Middle East Command announced today that the British advance forces withdrew yesterday to forward positions in the Libyan front to avoid an encircling movement by German reinforcements because "we had accomplished our objects" of forcing the Germans to disclose their strength.

Capture of "several hundred German prisoners" and the destruction of large numbers of Axis tanks and guns was announced.

"Yesterday, after we had repulsed several attacks," the communique said, "the enemy brought up fresh forces with which he attempted an encircling movement against our forward troops. As we had accomplished our objects of forcing him to disclose his strength and inflicting heavy casualties on him, we withdrew slowly to our forward positions.

The frontier battle had seemed to be developing as a British manoeuvre to isolate the Axis spearhead at Sollum, just as the British garrison of Tobruk was encircled in the April's eastward drive of the Axis.

As is usual in opening phases of a desert campaign of rapidly-shifting fronts, communiques issued by days of suddenly-intensified fighting remained obscure, but British and Imperial troops apparently still were on the offensive.

Activity along the front said last night a Scottish regiment had won the legend of Halfaya (Hellfire) Pass—gateway to Egyptian Sollum from the encampment to the south east, while other forces pushing across the Libyan border took Bir Sofafi and Fort Capuzzo.

London, June 18 (CP)—Lord Beaverbrook's Evening Standard today predicted editorially that Germany's invasion of Britain will be attempted by Germany within 80 days. It said September 20 is the likeliest month.

Coupling its invasion prediction with reports of Russo-German tension, The Standard said Adolf Hitler must attack Russia lies prostrate or after Russia lies tamed."

Air Protection for Ships Crossing Atlantic is 'Ideal' to be Attained

Ottawa, June 18 (CP)—Air protection across the Atlantic of ships carrying Canada's war supplies which may be attained some day, the Hon. Norman Rogers, Minister, William Bowhill, C.B., former commander in charge of Royal Air Force coastal command, said in an interview today.

Visiting Canada and the United States on a special mission, Air Frederick Bowhill, who knows the strength of Britain's air effort, the limitations of patrols over waters the United Kingdom, the effectiveness of convoys, the danger presented on Germany and his appreciation of Canada's importance as "the finest material we can find."

Under his command came the flying boats which travel long distances to and to keep watch over vessels carrying vital supplies to Britain.

"I believe in night patrols as well as those in the daylight hours," said Air Frederick. "Submarines like twilight, circling a convoy of ships in the night hours may spot a submarine through its movement on the surface. On a moonlight night, its periscope shows with the improvement in visibility."

Navy Needs Men

Many skilled men were needed to ensure sufficient radio locator stations to operate, the next proposition of German night raiders, Air Frederick declared. The means of these devices depended on intelligence and skill.

On one of his last periods of duty, Air Frederick was chief of the coastal command, Air Frederick said the weather coast.

"Our reports showed that we put over 1,000 torpedoes into her," said Air Frederick. "She didn't get her fuel but suffered severe damage and was stopped. Among the prisoners taken from her were many Scots who knew a ship can hide in the fjords and hoped to get her into one of these."

Stream of U.S. Planes Assists RAF To Challenge Nazis

Cologne and Duesseldorf Principal Objectives in Germany, Seventh Consecutive Raid

MANY DOGFIGHTS

London, June 18 (CP)—Strong forces of British bombers, smashing at Western Germany for the seventh consecutive night, set many fires and caused widespread destruction in the industrial cities of Cologne and Duesseldorf, the Air Ministry announced today.

Bolstered apparently by new American aid, Royal Marine, British airmen smashed also at Nazi shipping and the occupied ports of Rotterdam, Ostend, Boulogne and Cherbourg in a night sweep of the North Sea, English Channel and coasts from France to the Netherlands.

These raids, described officially as "subsidiary" were made not only by the usual bomber and coastal command squadrons but also by planes of the fleet air arm. One report said 150 aircraft struck against the Ruhr-Lippe region in the evening.

Night operations cost British only one bomber and the German, in air attacks localized on the east coast, were reported authoritatively also to have lost one bomber.

The attack on Bethune, occupied France, during Tuesday's large scale daylight offensive, the Air Ministry said a fuel and power plant supplying the occupying forces, was set afire.

Straddle Industrial Plant

The Air Ministry news service said the daylight attack over Bethune was made without the loss of clouds. A pack of bombs dropped straddled an industrial plant fetched fires and smoke shot into the air.

"As I watched the smoke curling up I imagined there would be no more to see," said one observer. "Evidently the great tonnes of chemicals because there were sudden, bright explosions. They must have struck instructions to the curious, onion-shaped cooling towers. For these began to emit immediately increased and thick smoke."

Fighters protected the bombers throughout the sailing and met swarms of Messerschmitts (German fighters) and bringing the bombers back to their bases. Five Nazi planes fighter pilots reported that between 40 and 50 Messerschmitts attacked his squadron for half an hour.

Pointing at Boulogne, bombers detected shipping there, but no fighter planes smashed at their objective in the midst of dogfights in which 12 Nazi planes were destroyed as against the loss of 10 British planes.

POLICE SERGEANT DETAINED IN DOUBLE SHOOTING

Well-to-do Merchant and His Wife Shot in Their Home at Glace Bay, N.S.

ON DUTY AT TIME

Glace Bay, N.S., June 18 (CP)—A city sergeant of the town police was held on an accusation of double murder today after the shooting of an aged, well-to-do merchant and his wife in their home just off Glace Bay's chief business street.

The charge was laid against Sergeant Timothy early this morning, a few hours after a neighbor had entered the blood-spattered dwelling of Hyman Brody, 75, to find him dead of several bullet wounds and his 65-year-old wife dying a few feet from his body.

Authorities ascribed no motive for the shootings immediately. Sergeant Timothy was taken into custody about a half hour after the discovery of the double slaying late last night. The 50-year-old officer, on the police force since 1913, lived about 50 yards from the Brody home in a house owned by the Jewish merchant's real estate business.

Frost was on duty at the time of the killings.

Installment Plan Advised for Those Short of Cash Now

Measured by all the tests of sound investment, Victory Loan Bonds provide an investment of great attraction. The security is that of a country whose present wealth is small compared to its resources. The interest yield is fixed in relation to similar securities of other democracies. Victory Bonds are marketable. They should be no hesitation on the part of Canadians to invest in this investment for liberty.

To the small salaried man and wage earner Victory Bonds present an opportunity for systematic investment of their financial savings. Let us do their bit as well.

The installment plan provided by the government gives everyone, especially those who have no immediate bank account, and five on the "pay as you go" basis, an easy method of payment.

For instance, those desiring to purchase a $50 bond can do so with a down payment of five dollars and ten monthly payments of $7.50 can be made and in the three succeeding months the bond is paid for with payments of $10 each. Compound interest at the rate of 3% will be paid. Four or higher denominations call for proportionate accumulations with those of the fifty dollar bond.

There are only a few days left in which Hastings County can go over the top of its quota of two million dollars. Apparently two hundred thousand dollars more is needed. Everyone must do his or her part to see that this result is achieved. Five dollars will help, and help the Empire to victory. BUY IT NOW.

Bennett Title May Become Extinct When He Dies

London, June 18—(CP Cable)—The title bestowed on Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett likely will become extinct when he dies.

Without direct heir, the only way the title could be continued for the former Canadian Prime Minister's next of kin would be by "special remainder"—a rarely granted honor by which the title would be inherited by indirect heir or heiress.

A remainder granted by the Sovereign is considered an even higher honor than the original title and has been granted only a few times the last half century, notably Earl Kitchener and Earl Roberts.

R. A. F. 'Drones' Out Sound of Derby Hoofbeats

Newmarket, England, June 18.—(CP)—The Royal Air Force took no chances of a German bombing or strafing attack today on the 50,000 spectators at the derby, one of the biggest crowds assembled in England since the war.

It put every kind of plane in the air and the roar of their motors drowned out the hoofbeats below.

Sports events are often "covered" by R.A.F. planes, but the derby drew the biggest patrol since aerial defence started in earnest last July.

Transfer U.S. Tankers to Guarantee Increased Oil Supply to E. Coast Area

Washington, June 18 (AP)—In his first positive action to put more oil into the hands threatened by a petroleum famine, Interior Secretary Ickes announced today a rearrangement of a ship, tanker service to increase the United States Atlantic coast supply by 210,000,000 gallons annually.

After conferences with officials of the Sun Oil Company and the Standard Oil Company of California, Ickes, who is Defence Petroleum Co-ordinator, announced he had made recommendations whereby three huge tankers now engaged on routes between California and the Atlantic coast ports would be switched to run from gulf ports to the east coast.

The co-ordinator emphasied that this increase in the east coast supply did not greatly lessen the danger of a prospective shortage in that producing area, where he has said restrictions on civilian use of automobiles appeared inevitable.

Ickes added other supplies could be "eken," Ickes said, if a serious east coast shortage is to be averted."

Say Russia Must Decide Soon to Fight Hitler or Yield to Nazi Demands

London, June 18 —(AP)— Basing their declarations on a flood of reports and political speculation from European capitals, observers in London today said that Russia soon must choose whether to fight Germany or yield to humiliating demands involving considerable tangible loss.

Alleged 'Price of Peace'

Usually authoritative sources here said Germany would make these demands on Soviet Russia as a price of peace:

1. Full control over all the rich oil and agricultural lands of the Ukraine.

2. Right of passage for German troops through the trans-Kukasian Corridor, a route that would by-pass Turkey and lay Suez open to attack from the east. This route would also bring the Germans into the oil fields of Iran and Iraq.

3. Right to establish war industries in Soviet territory beyond the range of Royal Air Force bombers.

4. Placing of Russian Baltic Sea shipyards at Germany's disposal.

5. Demobolization of the Soviet Western Army.

BRITISH STRATEGY BARES STRENGTH OF AXIS IN LIBYA

Withdraw to Forward Positions to Avoid Encircling Movement by Enemy

TAKE MANY PRISONERS

Cairo, June 18 —(AP)— The Middle East Command announced today that the British advance forces withdrew yesterday to forward positions in the Libyan front to avoid an encircling movement by German reinforcements across "we had accomplished our objects" of forcing the Germans to disclose their strength.

Capture of "several hundred German prisoners" and the destruction of large numbers of Axis tanks and guns was announced.

"Yesterday, after we had repulsed several attacks," the communique said, "the enemy brought up fresh forces with which he attempted an outflanking movement against our forward troops. As we had accomplished our objects of forcing the enemy to disclose his strength and inflicting heavy casualties on him, we withdrew slowly to our forward positions.

The frontier battle had seemed to be developing as a British manoeuvre to fathom the Axis strength at Gazala, just as the British garrison of Tobruk was encircled in the April's eastward drive of the Axis.

As it stood in opening phases of a desert campaign of rapidly-shifting forces, the situation after three days of sudden fighting remained obscure, but British and Imperial troops apparently still were on the offensive.

Reports from the front said last night a Scottish regiment had won the name of Halfaya (Hellfire) Pass—gateway to Egypt—after from the escarpment to the southeast. The Germans were driving across the Libyan border south Sir Walter, just south of Fort Capuzzo.

Air Protection for Ships Crossing Atlantic is 'Ideal' to be Attained

Ottawa, June 18 (CP)—Air protection across the Atlantic of ships bound for Britain by the route which may be attained some day, Air Vice-Marshal C. Frederick William Bowhill, C.B., former commander in chief of the Royal Air Force coast command, told a press interview today.

Visiting Canada and the United States on a special mission, Sir Frederick said the growing strength of Britain's air effort, the creation of air forces throughout the United Kingdom, the effective bombing of new British air bases and the appreciation of Canadian airmen as "the finest material we can find."

Under his command came the flying boats which travel long distances to sea to keep watch over vessels carrying vital supplies to Britain.

"I believe in night patrols as well as those in the daylight hours," said Sir Frederick. "Canadian planes circling in convoy at night in the night hours may spot a submarine through its movement on the surface. On a moonlight night, its visibility is increased with the improvement in visibility."

Skilled Men Needed

Many skilled men are needed to ensure sufficient radio locator stations to safeguard the coast, position of German night raiders, Sir Frederick said. The operation of these devices depended on intelligence and skill.

On one of his last periods of duty as commander-in-chief of the coastal command, Sir Frederick stayed up all night receiving reports of dealings with attack on a German pocket battleship off the Norwegian coast.

"Our reports showed that we put two aerial torpedoes into her," said Sir Frederick. "She didn't sink but was suffered severe damage and was subsequently sunk by Norwegian coast there are many fjords where she could hide, and no doubt they hoped to get her into one of these."

UNUSUAL PHENOMENON IN MIDNIGHT SKY

An unusual phenomenon in the midnight sky was noticed by chance sky-gazers on Tuesday evening when shortly after eleven o'clock a large circle of white light, reaching from horizon to horizon appeared in the northern sky. According to those who saw the strange sight, the light resembled somewhat the rays of searchlight but instead of sweeping in a straight line, circled from the north-western horizon almost to the zenith and then back to the north-eastern horizon.

Considerable excitement was aroused as to the origin of the phenomenon, the slight haze that formed that suggestions of it being merely a strange quirk of aurora borealis or northern light were described Brilliantly outlined against the sky, the almost complete circle of white light was still visible after midnight.

DRY WEATHER PARTLY SOLVES FARM LABOR SHORTAGE IN DISTRICT

The 1941 farm labor problem which during April and early May was getting more acute with each passing week, has just about solved itself.

An abnormally dry May and just a dry a month height of June has entirely changed the complexion and weight of the season's work and instead of the anticipated wagon loads of hay that were visualized during early spring, a considerably less than normal crop is being harvested with present indications point to a grain crop that will also be below normal.

Farmers lacking help early in the spring were wondering just how the harvesting was going to be done. Nature seemed to be piling up work and apprehension and many worried eyes about in search of farm help which could not be secured. Dry weather has greatly affected crops however, and has done much to solve the farm labor problem, by way of decreased crops.

Kiwanis Club Holds Meeting At County Club

"Mechanized War in Canada" was the subject of an interesting address by Lt.-Col. Bell, editor and publisher of the "Garage Operator" magazine, at the weekly luncheon of the Kiwanis Club held at the Bay of Quinte Country Club on Tuesday. The members enjoyed the delightful surroundings of the Country Club and the excellent meal provided by the steward, Bill Little, and his staff. Golf was not the feature ing but due to the house committee having the foresight to see that members had to sing from memory and not read a word, the fine fare was also forgotten and the members spent a very delightful hour the expense of the president but their wings will shortly be clipped at a subsequent meeting.

O. W. "Ollie" Duff had a Kiwanian luncheon and was ably introduced by Albert Jones, Locomotive Foreman at the C. N. Shops, who gave the highlights of a career on the railways, that led from a dispatcher in 1908 to Superintendent in 1920. Bill Howell won the prize donated and it was presented in absentia. The speaker "of the day was introduced by Jack Trinder and Kiwanian appreciation was expressed by Bob Gordon, who thought the address should be the basis of some action by Kiwanis Club.

Faced With Vital Problem

The address centred around the sentence: "The Nut on the Steering Wheel" and showed that Canada was faced with a vital problem in reducing the loss of life caused by accidents on the highways. He showed that in a ten year period from 1930, 5,046 had been killed, 87,760 injured and the damage at age of $10,881,000 caused and remarked that this figure was much too high and that some system of education should be established to reduce materially the death list. He asked the members "what are we doing about it?" especially to ask motorists to drive carefully and pedestrians to walk carefully. He explained the causes as motorists driving regardless of any conditions, those who know rights and demand them and those physically and mentally handicapped to act in any emergency.

Shoot Disease Children

The speaker stated that the world was on wheels and children should be taught from infancy to protect themselves and their fellow children. He said that the obtaining of a driver's permit was entirely unsatisfactory and inadequate for no test was made of the driver's ability to act in an emergency. Mr. Whattam showed how the garage operators as a whole were taking hold of the question because they believed that the driver was not always entirely to blame for the accident but that some mechanical defect might be the direct cause and they were urging that legislation be passed for a strict mechanical examination of the motor vehicle be made every so often. The speaker showed that in a voluntary test of cars out of 30,000 inspected seventy per cent had some mechanical defect and could contribute to an accident. A representative stock apprentice, system of the Garage Operators and showed that men working on the floor should have some knowledge of the mechanism of the vehicle and also to what that trouble. $25,000 Purchase Of Victory Bonds Made by City

There was a glint of pride in the eyes of Alderman H. J. Clarke, Chairman of Finance, for the city of Belleville, this morning when he affixed his signature to a cheque for $25,000 for the city's contribution to the Victory Loan Campaign.

"This is one of the proudest moments of my life", Alderman Clarke smiled as his pen scratched the surface of the cheque affixed to the application form. "This money came from the city's sinking fund, and I speak for the council of this city, when I say we are proud to subscribe this amount to the Dominion Loan. This Empire" Mayor Glen E. Thompson, echoed Alderman Clarke's words. "Belleville is proud and proud" he said, "Proud that we are able to contribute this amount to the Empire and sorry that we cannot give more. This amount which has been taken from the city's sinking fund, was done so at no loss to the taxpayers—it is a ten year period margin of profit".

The mayor urged everyone to do his best in contributing to the Victory Loan.

"I am proud of what residents of this city have done thus far, but I feel that more can be done and there are only a few days left, the chief magistrate said, "and I am sure that this city will take its place with those communities which have signified their loyalty and willingness in all the Empire by going 'over the top'."

No Definite Proof of Cause Established in Girl's Death

Enquiry Into Death of Miss Merle Groves Concluded by Jury

DOCTORS TESTIFY

The jury impaneled to look into the death of the late 19-year-old Merle Groves, Stonetile, who died in an apartment at 227 1-2 Front Street, on May 3rd last, was unable to determine the cause of the woman's death in their verdict rendered by the police court room before Chief Coroner Dr. J. J. Robertson at the adjourned inquest which concluded today.

"This is the first inquest I have ever sat upon where no definite proof of death could be established, even by the expert medical practitioners", stated Dr. Robertson as he summed up the case for the jury this morning. The brik of the evidence in the matter, at which 15 witnesses were heard, was presented last evening, the proceedings then being held adjourned until this morning.

Dr. J. B. MacKay, pathologist at the Belleville General Hospital, who conducted a post mortem in the case following the death of the late Merle Groves, stated that no anatomical or chemical explanation of the cause of death had been demonstrated in this particular case.

Mrs. K. Cleeton, in whose apartment the deceased died at 227 1-2 Front Street, on May 3rd, told the jury last night that she had only met the deceased once before the day she had collapsed in her apartment.

Vomited Very Tired

"She came to my apartment at five o'clock in the afternoon and looked very tired. As she entered the living room she collapsed. We tried to revive her with a glass of water, but she commenced to chew the glass and called Dr. Brebner", stated Mrs. Cleeton in describing the girl's actions as a fainting spell. Dr. Brebner was then called about the lips and lower part of her body."

"She spoke thickly and later vomited in the mouth", concluded Mrs. Cleeton.

A number of girl friends and employers of the late Miss Merle Groves was a domestic.

Ethel Mae Groves testified that she had appeared to be in excellent health on the afternoon she died. No evidence as to her actions, between the hours of two and four o'clock was available, however.

Today Detective Fred Isard, who investigated the case, stated he had taken charge of her personal belongings after the woman had been pronounced dead by Chief Coroner Dr. Robertson on May 3rd. Detective Isard produced a scrap of paper which was found in the girl's purse at the O.S.D. and upon which was written Mrs. Cleeton's address and telephone number.

"Did you subsequently investigate the poisonous purchase of drugs by the deceased?" asked Crown Attorney S. G. Robertson.

"I did not", replied the witness.

"I checked all drug stores in Belleville, Trenton and Madoc, and found nothing to indicate the deceased had purchased drugs or poison", replied the witness.

Organs Sent to Toronto

The stomach and abdominal organs were sent to Toronto, where Dr. Rogers, Provincial Pathologist, conducted an examination and in his written report he stated there was no trace of poison found.

"It is unfortunate we have not been able to bring the actual cause of death before you. The pathologists have been unable to find any trace of poison. Such a condition might have been brought about through a heart condition but the symptoms point to strychnine. However, there has been no trace of poison found during the post mortem and we have no definite proof of death", stated Dr. Robertson in summing up the matter.

The jury found that "Merle Groves came to her death in Belleville, on May 3rd, 1941 and from the medical and other evidence adduced are unable to determine the cause of death".

The jury impaneled by Sergeant Arthur Harman was composed of Messrs. G. C. Scott, J. Boak, Geo. Taylor, J. Lafferty and Ed. Gartley.

Grand Knight George Lee thanked the members for the confidence shown in him and promised to make the next year a bigger success. He also promised to call on a few speakers in the fall. All officers spoke briefly expressing appreciation in connection with the Grand Knight. At this point Mrs. Clifford A. Wills, Mrs. Greenberg, Penn., Council No. 1484 was introduced to members by Grand Knight George Lee. Bro. McKeown, who is president of Stirling Council, spoke of travelling through Canada in the interests of his council, and of his visit to Belleville during Europe twice and has visited many councils in Ontario including Belleville Council as one of the finest, outside of Toronto, in the United States. He also congratulated the officers and members on their dignity while conducting their business. Sister Knight Mrs. Nicholson was called on for a few words. She congratulated the council and wishing the officers every success.

Library Re-Decorated

At this point all returned to the library reading room which has been recently re-decorated. Rev. Mgr. Nicholson opened the library for the use of the members again, speaking very highly of the efforts and members in their accomplishment of the re-decoration. Bro. A. B. Collins paid special tribute to the late Bro. Bill Bowen, former Secretary of Canadian Army Overseas Committee, who took an equal part in Westminster Cathedral, where the body lay in state over night, guarded by Knights of Columbus uniformed. Cpl. Brown died suddenly May 15th.

"Representatives of Canadian military and Canadian Auxiliary War Services attended the service at which Hon. L.-Col. Rev. F. J. McCarthy officiated, assisted by Hon. Lt.-Col. Rev. N. O'Neil and Hon. Major Rev. Eugene Cote, Lt.-Gen. G. A. McNaughton and Major-General P. J. Montague, senior officers Canadian Military Headquarters were represented by Brig. J. M. McQueen and Brig. P. P. Church Filled

After the service the coffin was carried from the church by Major J. M. Humphrey, assisted by Recteur Chevrier, Canadian Legion, and staff officers. The church in which he had received his papal honor, Knighthood of St. Gregory, for meritorious service to his God and fellowmen, was filled with representatives from civil, fraternal, political, educational and military organizations, each of which had benefited by his interests and had been helped by his efforts. Mgr. Mayrand paid fine tribute to Col. Bowen, stating that he had worked for those he loved—his fellowmen. He was honored by the Pope with the Knighthood of St. Gregory, by the King with the Order of the British Empire. He gave the last years of his life making life more agreeable for young men in the army." The meeting was closed with refreshments being served and by singing the National Anthem.

Japan Determined To 'Participate' in N.E.I. In Aviation, Shipping

Tokyo, June 18 (AP)—The Japanese Government today voiced its determination to attempt to participate in aviation, shipping and communications in the Netherlands East Indies on an equal footing with the United States and Great Britain after acknowledging a breakdown in the present negotiations with the Netherlands Government.

Koh Jabil, Cabinet Information Bureau spokesman, read a statement in which he said Japan "cannot remain indifferent to a spread of the European war to the South Seas" but added that stalemated negotiations with the Netherlands do not affect normal relations with that government.

The United States and Britain were named specifically in the statement.

RALSTONSTRESSES NEED FOR MEN AT OTTAWA MEETING

Ottawa District One of Four Lowest in Dominion in Matter of Recruiting

FULLY DISCUSSED

Ottawa, June 18 (CP)—The Defence Minister, Hon. J. L. Ralston, addressed members of the Citizens' Committee formed to aid recruiting in the Ottawa area last night and stressed the present need of the army for more men.

"We have not pressed the need for men, but it is here now and it is an 'urgent need,' he said. "Money without men is not going to be much good in helping win the war.

"This district has not done as well as it should, not by any means and is one of the four lowest in the Dominion. It is not good for the capital and we are not reaching the young men as we should."

Col. Ralston made his remarks at a meeting held in the House of Commons and called by George McIlraith, Liberal Member of Parliament for Ottawa West and J. A. Pinard, Liberal Member of Parliament for Ottawa East.

The meeting was told that the recruiting objective of Military District No. 3 (Kingston, Ont.) of which the Ottawa area command is a part, was 2,300 men.

Half Number Required

Something less than half this number had so far been enlisted.

Various members of the committee brought up the different aspects of the campaign.

W. H. Munro, chairman of the Ottawa branch of the Engineering Institute and a committee member suggested more should be done to approach youth personally.

"Get around to the factories where blase youths are smoking cigarettes at lunch time and get some action," he said. "Let's spend some money on tough recruiting sergeants with imagination."

Too Much Waiting

M. R. Hooper, speaking for the Canadian Legion, said he thought the prospects of too much waiting around without getting immediate action was deterring many youths from volunteering.

Col. Ralston saw the time coming when there would be casualties and said the men now being asked for were required to round out the formations pledged to Britain. "Twenty thousand men were needed for armored units and in addition monthly quotas were necessary to meet wastage.

The Defence Minister said also that wherever possible the Department was trying to use girls for office work and do away with permanent "cushy" jobs for enlisted men.

"We need more men, particularly in connection with our armored units where skilled mechanics are in demand," said Col. Ralston. "The man with the machine is essential. A division in the First Great War required 3,500 horsepower and now 186,000 horsepower is required and an armored divison on the road stretches out 200 miles."

Little Benny's Note Book

After supper I remembered my other chockin mushmellow, only I couldn't remember exactly where I left it, and I was looking all around the living room on account of that being the last place I was with it, and pop was smoking to himself in his red dressing gown, and I thought, O, wunckers, now I remember the last place I had it, I was sitting in pop's chair, holey smokes.

Meaning pop must be sitting on it, and just then he said, What the dooce are you looking for? If it's anything of vital importance please dont relax your tigerish activity, but otherwise I wish you'd change your imitation of a bloodhound on active duty to an imitation of a clam offering passive resistance, he said.

Meaning to sit down and take it easy, and said, O well, I guess it's not so important.

Everything is relative, I understand, pop said.

And he kept on smoking to himself and I thought, G, if he's only sitting on half of it there still might be enough left to rescue.

And I said, Hay pop, if you were sitting on a sourball do you think you could feel it? and he said, Well, I may not be as sensitive as the princess in the fairy tale who felt the rose leaf under her mattress, but I'm so sure that I'd be annoyed by a sourball under my carcass that I'm not even going to look.

Well how about a chockit mushmellow? said, and he said, Yes gods for Pete's sake, and this dressing gown just came from the cleaners.

And he started to jump up and then I remembered where it really was, saying, Aw heck, now I know where it is, aw heck that's the worst place it could be.

What, even worse than under a near relation? pop said, and I said, Sure, holey smokes I ate it.

Wich I had.

VICHY CLAIMS SUCCESSES

Vichy, France, June 18 (AP) — Dispatches from Syria Tuesday claimed a counter-attack had driven the Allies out of the town of Mardjayoun, which was captured by British forces a week ago.

(The British Middle East command in Cairo acknowledged strong counter-attacks by Vichy troops at both Mardjayoun and Kuneitra, about 40 miles southwest of Damascus.)

$5 STARTS A

Bond for Victory

YES, it's just as easy as that!

Canada asks you to buy Victory Bonds to speed the work of winning the war, to provide our gallant lads in the army, navy and air force with all the things they need in their great fight for freedom from aggression—for the right to maintain our way of life.

You can do even more than you think by buying bonds on the instalment plan. Pay only 10% down:

$5	on a $50	Bond
$10	on a $100	Bond
$50	on a $500	Bond
$100	on a $1,000	Bond

and pay the balance in easy instalments.

Victory Bonds are one of the safest investments in the world. Every dollar put into Victory Bonds in the last war has been repaid to the investors.

Remember, you are making the safest possible investment when you buy Victory Bonds.

If, as a result of unforeseen contingencies, you are unable to meet the instalment payment, a loan may be arranged with your bank, with your Victory Bond as collateral security. Dominion Government Bonds have always enjoyed the highest degree of marketability and there never has been a time when they could not be readily realized upon for cash.

HOW TO BUY

Telephone your local Victory Loan Headquarters and an authorized canvasser will call upon you immediately, or place your order directly with your bank or trust company. Don't delay. Go to the telephone now and call your Victory Loan Headquarters.

"Our most dangerous enemy on this side of the Atlantic is the idea that we have plenty of time," said Hon. J. L. Ralston on his return from England.

WHAT VICTORY BOND IS

A number of motives must prompt the wholehearted support of the Victory Loan. First comes the appeal of patriotism. Something of the spirit of the enlisting soldier should go into the placing of the individual's money at the service of the state, especially when the state is Canada, which is proud to be one of the world's democracies.

Then there is another appeal. The loan is not a gift to the state. It is a loan, will bear interest and will be repaid. In these days no such substantial security can be found as the guarantee to pay made by Canada. How many men and women have after experience in various investments been heard to say that if they had the investing to do over again they would buy mainly government bonds for the maximum security. Now is the time to do so.

It must not be forgotten that in case of necessity these bonds can be negotiated for cash as easily as, or more easily, than any other type of security.

These bonds bring more than double bank interest. Now is the time to place savings in a government security bearing a good rate of interest and at the time when money is needed for carrying on war.

Canada has to fight to preserve the way of life we know—the only way which means liberty. One reader suggests the motto "Bonds or Bondage," for the campaign. The Victory Loan bond sums up everything with which the Canadian people are associated in their development of democracy. Canada do not know bondage, they know of it only through the evidence which a sad Continental Europe has given where the aggressor type of rule is in sway. And they want none of it. So to the Canadian and the Briton and Allies, the war means a fight until victory.

But nobody wants bondage—everyone would resist it to the death for loss of victory would mean slavery of the awful Hun kind.

These bonds are as good as the foundations of Canada, the first and best security we know. They are a mortgage on Canada and upon everything which Canada has developed or will develop. Anyone who realizes what a treasure house or strongbox of resources Canada is and how the very freedom which Canada represents is reflected in the spirit of her people, will not hesitate for one moment before buying these notes on the Dominion.

Buying of such bonds will strengthen the financial structure of Canada for Canada in this war is following a very sensible course and trying to pay as much of the war costs as possible during the war.

Purchase of these bonds are not only helping the Canadian boys who are at the front in Britain to do their part and encouraging them, but it will help the people of Britain too, those heroes and heroines who have become the admiration of the world, the people of the British Isles, who have been bearing the burden of a world.

Sentiment has a place in the purchase of these bonds of one's country. And let there be plenty of sentiment for it all helps.

Many motives and appeals call on every Canadian to buy bonds and to support his country and the brave men who bear the burden of civilization. No one who can possibly buy a bond can refuse.

Our Country Calls on Us to Lend.

BILL OF RIGHTS FOR NATIONS

Sunday was the 726th anniversary of the signing of the Charter of Liberty, Magna Charta.

Last week representatives of Great Britain and the Empire and of nations now under German oppression met and affirmed their undying resolution to fight to the end for victory, which will be marked by peace and security and co-operation of peoples.

This affirmation of democratic peoples' representatives was a declaration of another liberty, of freedom for the world of nations from the aggression of any nation or any group of nations. It was a new bill of rights for mankind, pledged in the midst of the greatest struggle which has ever been known to man.

British merchants now sell hose by the bottle. Bare legs can be clothed with a liquid preparation that is practically indistinguishable from silk stockings. It does not spit or rub off and you can even bathe with it on, yet it is not harmful and can be removed with soap and hot water. If you are clever, you can even draw a stocking seam up the back of the leg with an eyebrow pencil or with the special seam pencil.

OURSELVES AND THERS...

BY Goodeve

The husky young soldier stood by the side of the highway. He was a long way from his destination, and had but a short time in which to get there. Fortunately a car driven by an ex-mayor of this city happened along at that moment, slowed down to a stop and picked up the young man.

He proved to be a French Canadian with a smattering of the English language, and was an amiable youngster who had given up a good job to do his bit for his country. He had not sufficient money in his pocket with which to pay his fare, and consequently was forced to take to the highway "Via Thumb" to get to his destination.

He is one of thousands of such young men. While civilians, or any class of people for that matter, cannot change the laws of the land, they can at least alleviate the troubles of the country's fighting services by giving them much appreciated lifts along the highways.

It isn't much to ask. Oftimes there is room in that back seat of the family car. You may be going a mile or two, and disdain to stop because you may think the soldier would not appreciate such a short lift. Don't believe it. The laddies in khaki, blue or the air force uniform appreciate any sort of assistance along these lines.

Remember, these boys get only $1.30 a day. Many of them have given up better jobs than the supercilious motorist who passes them with heads turned the other way. A generous government gives them a one-way fare, but when that fare totals all, and in many cases more, than the soldier receives for two weeks' service, they are forced to rely upon the generosity of the travelling public. So, the next time you see a soldier laddie, a Jack Tar or an air man, standing at the roadside and you have room in the car, pull up and give him a ride. You will be more than repaid by the appreciation your act will bring.

"And when the cannibal chief discovered that his wife had eaten the whole sailor by herself, what did he do about it?"

"He got mad and knocked the tar out of her."

HEARD OUTSIDE LOCAL MOVIE:

"It certainly is wonderful how pictures have advanced these last few years."

"How come?"

"Well, first we had the silent pictures, then came the talkies, and now this one smells."

VERY FIRST

That night under the stars he swore eternal love.

"But how can I be sure that you are sincere?" she said. "I expect you deceive all the girls."

"Oh, that's an awful libel," he exclaimed. "You're the first really."

THINGS ENDURING

Much man gathers slips away.
Heartless rogues are Time and Fate,
Highwaymen by night and day
Prey upon hearts elate;
Pleasure calls, not long to stay;
Loss for all men know.

Few when all is gone and said
Are the gains a man can hold,
Love to share what lies ahead,
Sorrow that, than yellow gold;
Memories of loved ones dead,
Precious always to the old.

Joys that were and still may be,
All man has of art and skill,
Love of earth and sky and sea,
These outlast the dollar bill.
Time and Fate have taken
Always have and always will.

Anniversary

New York, June 18—The German at every step by the Gestapo, the armies marched into Paris just a year ago. No it might be well to take up the balance sheet of twelve months. How do things look for Britain? How for Hitler?

* * *

A year ago Hitler swaggered and announced that the war was over. At the very latest it would be over in September. There were reasons for his confidence. Britain had no army except the one evacuated from Dunkerque. Her air forces were completely undefended. The air force was inadequate, and the Islands had no home guard.

In order rapidly to build up production Britain was dependent on the United States. The United States was on a cash and carry basis.

* * *

Hitler, on the other hand, was in control of all the Continent of North Europe, had a pact with Russia which protected his back, and was in control of the economic control of the Balkans.

Mussolini had a considerable fleet and air force, and was in a position seriously to challenge the British in the Mediterranean.

Now, after a year, let us look at the picture.

Hitler failed in an attempt to get control of the air over Britain in September.

Hitler is still in control of the Balkans, but the fighting in Albania, Yugoslavia and Greece has disrupted the economic life of those countries and seriously deranged the German system which the Balkans, as a source of foodoil and metals, are to be mainly valuable extent, as of an asset to Hitler than they were a year ago.

According to plan, the Italians should have conquered Egypt during the winter and had actually prepared a huge force for a two-pronged attack from Libya and Ethiopia. Instead, Italy has been eliminated by the Greeks and the British as a fighting force. More British as a fighting force. More than one-half of the Italian navy has been destroyed. Her air force is demoralized. Italy has been an African empire has been conquered resisting colonial forces to deal with an attack from Syria. Britain has also reconquered Iraq from an enemy government and possibly in a week or two will be in control of her hands with the help of General de Gaulle.

* * *

Hitler has promises from Stalin that will be reaffirmed over and over again and not kept. Even if the Germans go into the Ukraine to organize it, what they will get will be of doubtful value for a time.

In this respect, the experiences of the last war must be taken into account. Then also Germany held the whole Ukraine. But she was never able to bring order into the Russian chaos.

The political situation in Europe is dreadful.

The German armies have looted Europe once. They cannot do it twice from Norway to the Iberian Peninsula the hatred of Hitler is bullies. It affects the work capacity of the population. Though treated like the worst coolies and watched

FIFTH COLUMN

The phrase "fifth column," a new name for an old idea, originated with the charge of being a permanent contribution to the language.

It originated during the Spanish civil war of 1936-1939.

The loyalist forces in Madrid were virtually besieged by the armies of General Francisco Franco for two and a half years.

General Emilio Mola was in command of the Franco forces operating against the Spanish capital during the early stages of the war.

After the fall of Toledo, September 23, 1936, General Mola made a boast publicly about a fifth column, in which he said in effect:

"We have four columns marching against Madrid, and inside the city we have a fifth column."

He referred to Franco sympathizers among the Republicans who would rise at the proper time and aid the rebels in capturing the city.

But the mere fact that General Mola used "fifth column" would not have been enough to make it a current phrase.

It so happened that Ernest Hemingway, the American author, went to Spain in 1937 to cover the civil war for the North American newspaper Alliance.

The journals in Madrid held out against the insurrectionists until April 1, 1939, and naturally Hemingway heard about Mola's reference to the fifth column within the city.

In 1938 Hemingway published his play, "The Fifth Column and the First Forty-Nine," and it was the wide publicity given to this book overnight that popularized the phrase "fifth column" in the minds of any subversive and treacherous undercover activities within a country threatened with attack by an enemy.

The presence of disloyal elements within a country and cooperating with an attacking enemy is an old story in history.

Nebuchadnezzar and his Babylonians were enabled to capture Jerusalem 1,300 years ago largely because of the fifth column within the walls.

schedule.

She is building a fantastic air force, and in heavy bombing planes is probably the equal of the best in speed and accuracy.

And despite Communistic calls and Nazi sympathizers, the people of this country are behind Roosevelt. At not one point has he been seriously opposed.

Hitler has a doubtfully benevolent and economically stagnant Russia. Churchill has a genuinely benevolent and fantastically productive America.

* * *

When one considers that a year ago Britain was looked upon as lost except to the almost idiotically sanguine, the gains of Hitler in twelve months are relatively trifling compared with the gains of Britain.

* * *

True, they have been accomplished with a heroism in suffering on the part of the British people that has no parallel in human history.

Britain has shown herself and shown the world that a great people does not simply drop out of history. Britain is where she is today only because the people of Britain have prepared themselves to be unconquerable by terror.

From the unevacuated childprincesses, one of them heir to the Throne, to the last Cockney warden, they have demonstrated the sort of heroism that one warpeck of the kingly.

The balance sheet is of June 1941 compared with June 1940.

It would be fatuous to pretend that the balance may not be swung in a worse direction tomorrow—by some fiendish new type of all-out attack on the British Isles.

But on the anniversary of the fall of France, one can still lay a bet on the triumph of Freedom.

Accused Testifies He Agreed to Give Up Wife to Earl

Nairobi, Kenya Colony, June 18 (CP) Sir Delves Broughton testified today he had tentatively agreed to give up his wife to the Earl of Errol, whom he is accused of killing.

Broughton testified that because of circumstances the marriage could not take place for three years.

Lord Errol answered, "Well, that can't be helped," the defendant said.

He testified that he then told Lord Errol that the situation put Lady Broughton in a "very involved" position, with the Earl having taken her away from her husband but not being able to marry for three years.

Lord Errol was said to have replied: "There's a war on."

Then everything was settled, Broughton said, except "financed and where Lady Broughton would live.

He explained that the agreement was that he was to go to Ceylon for three months, then return to Nairobi and go back to England. He denied he ever had bought any black powder ammunition, such as that which killed Lord Errol.

The Earl, hereditary high constable of Scotland, was found shot to death in his automobile near here Jan. 24, a few hours after dining with Broughton and Lady Broughton.

Action Stations Are Thrill For Writer in Hour of Dawn

Every Man Aboard U. S. Ship in British Service at His Fighting Post At Sunrise off Eastern Coast

This is one of a series on the entry into the Battle of the Atlantic of an American vessel transferred to Britain under the Lend-Lease Bill.

By MORGAN M. BEATTY

Associated Press Staff Writer

ABOARD H. M. S. ——, AT SEA (AP)—A British sailor in dripping oil skins thrust open the door of my cabin, snapped on the light. "Your A. M. sir. Action Stations!" And he was gone.

In a few moments I heard the clatter of running feet on deck; muffled orders.

When I reached the bridge, I saw nothing unusual in the murky darkness. It had been raining, but now it was clear and dark. Nobody spoke. All eyes were fixed about. Just tense silence, as if we were waiting for something. In a few moments a sun still invisible cast a pale glow over the sea water to the east. It happened quickly as if a giant curtain had been raised. The first rim could see clearly to the eastward. Back of us to the west, it was still black — blacker by night by contrast.

On the deck below, I could see the crew of our ship. Every man aboard was on duty at action station, ready for immediate action. I was to learn soon what this all meant. But I understand from what I saw how the Hood and the Bismarck could have hit each other in a five-minute action at sea in the murky light of the dawn.

As soon as it became light, and the sun climbed to the horizon, the crew retired, some to dutles, some to sleep. The tension lessened, except on the watchful bridge. All seemed to be normal once more.

Destroyers Sun-up

"What," I asked our commander, "is this action stations business?"

"Dawn," he replied, "is the most dangerous moment. In every 24 hours at sea. It lights the eastern sky for you in a matter of seconds. Objects at sea suddenly become visible. Our ship and the enemy might be cruising within a few hundred yards of each other all night, without spotting each other. But we would be revealed to each other at the break of dawn. The crew with their hands on the trigger is the crew that survives, much as your wild westerners survived because they were fast on the draw. It's a common practice in all navies in wartime."

I was learning things about navies aboard this land-lease craft I had boarded the night before in New York. I had learned that warships not only have automatic blackout systems, but use canvas to double their protection against a chance peep of light. And soon I was to understand how they were ever alert, yes, even when they were observing the English ritual of tea.

Officers' Impression

Below in the ward room we were soon comparing notes and customs. A British officer, with a handsome chiselled face, and keen eyes, was pouring coffee with enthusiasm for American women, for Philadelphia and New York.

"Ah, your women," he said. "And New York. Clean. Beautiful. On my last day in New York I had a long, long look from one of your tall buildings with a tall girl on my hand."

Above decks, all was business. Constant oiling, cleaning, investigating. One day I ran across the executive officer with a big ring of keys around him. "We've never fired these American guns," he was saying, "so I'll explain."

After 10 or 15 minutes demonstration and discussion he asked if there were any questions. There were none. A gun crew stepped forward. Communication answered "Ready! Fire!"

Several times in quick succession our British crew let go with an American big gun they had never seen before, and quickly as if they had been doing the job all their lives. Then they closed up and let again, oiled her some more, with all the care that Mrs. Smith would give her pet pekinese.

An officer explained one of our three-inch anti-aircraft weapons. "Nice gun," he volunteered. "We want to be there when she cracks a Jerry bomber on the nose."

They Like Their Work

Our senior officer present put the question directly to all the gunners he could think of. Within 24 hours, our engineer knew what his power would do, and how it would do it. Gun crews, depth charge crews, seamen, electricians knew what all their new gadgets would do and where every one fell, every speakline tube.

The engineer, for one, was amazed at the speed he could get out of a single engine. The communication officer was enthusiastic, too.

"Top line, these ships," he told me.

Black is Black!

Science continues to achieve new wonders and last month a chemist man cannot hope to keep up with the bewildering progress. He has heard a great deal about the marvellous new plastics being manufactured from coal, limestone, salt, air, water, and what have you. He has seen the beautiful fabrics fabricated from these ersatz cobwebs. But, nevertheless, the news of this spun moonshine properly moulded by an Edinburgh chemist-cum-feminine gam, man is prone to reflect that he has reached a decade of science than upon the shapely ankle of Mademoiselle Nylon it enhances. His mind, quite finally, is far removed from consideration of the new cloth for the full of sail, a few gallons of H2O, and the world has been sailed has accomplished.

But the miracle of miracles is yet to come. The last word in synthetics is not Nylon, Orlon, or the fashion magazines, are "sheer as smoke" and — believe it or not — black.

Not for 20 years has a self-respecting female deigned to drape a shinbone in chen gossamer. Black went out in the 'Twenties, and succeeded by nude, sun tan, beige, sand, and a bewildering assortment of shades whose inspired nomenclature was the despair of those with the ephemeral threads from which they were spun. For a time there was no surgical — a few timorously did—that a bit of sheer black chiffon, properly lined, could not be improved on from the aesthetic viewpoint, as it is now almost irrevocably as a relic of the horse-and-buggy age.

Black was out for 20 years. Nobody would think of being seen in public in a pair of the unspeakable things. Now black is back. Truly science achieves miracles. Chicago News.

MACARONI AND MINCED HAM SUPPER DISH

LINE a deep pie dish or casserole with alternate layers of cooked macaroni, minced ham and tomatoes. Make top layer macaroni. Sprinkle with chopped parsley; dot with little bits of butter. Mix a tablespoonful of H. P. Sauce in a cup of water or some of the pour over. Bake in moderate oven. Grated cheese can be used in place of tomatoes. You will find when you serve this dish that the H. P. Sauce has enriched the whole combination. This extra touch of flavour makes all the difference. Be sure to use it. So keep H. P. in mind and use it as a flavouring and seasoning agent for supper dishes of all kinds; for meat loaf, gravy, stews, soups, fried meats, fish, etc. H. P. is the rich, fruity sauce from England.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Perplexed By Wedding Plans

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. I am perplexed by the plans that I am expected to make for my attendants' dresses for my wedding. Will you help me with your advice?

A. I want their dresses made to a certain pattern. Do I have all the expense of buying the material and having the dresses made? Or do I get the material and let each girl have her own dress made? Or can I expected only to select the pattern material, or perhaps only one buy her own?

2. Is it customary for the bride-elect to give each attendant a small gift after the ceremony?

3. And about the flowers: does the groom buy only the bridal bouquet, or does he pay for all the flowers used in the decoration?

My wedding is to be held in my home.

B. B.

1. It is the bride-elect who chooses what her attendants are to wear, but each attendant pays for her own costume. It is considered the bride tries not to choose clothes that will be too expensive for the purses of her attendants. All the dresses are to be bought ready-made from a recommended shop or specialty shop, the bride chooses the model and the colors and the forms her attendants about them. If the dresses are to be made by a dressmaker, each attendant pays for the material for her dress, and the bride goes with the attendants while the dressmaker she has chosen does the fittings.

A. Yes, it is customary for the bride to give a gift to each of her attendants. The bride is on the most convenient time before the ceremony. The bride or her family also supplies the flowers for the attendants.

3. Customarily, the groom buys his bride her bouquet and sends a corsage to her mother and to his mother, for them to wear to the wedding. But the flowers used for decoration, either at the church or at the bride's home, are supplied by the bride's family.

Dinner In Her Honor

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

For several years I have been a member, and am now an officer, of an organization. This organization is now planning to give a dinner in my honor, and that probably means that the dinner chairman will propose a toast to me. I have always been uncertain as to what one should do when a toast is proposed in one's honor. Will you tell me the procedure?

Marion

When the toast is proposed, do not rise and do not lift your glass. After the other guests drink to the honoree, then it is courteous for you to rise and thank them. If you wish, you may add a few words of appreciation of the honor they are showing you, or perhaps something about your deep interest in the activities of the club, and of your hope to take part in these interests and activities for many years.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Do Men Admire Courage In Women?

Women know very well that other women can be brave.

But the question has always been: Should men be allowed to know this, too?

For, of course, women want men to approve of them and love them. That's the way the world is run. But what lies of themselves should they try to impress upon the other sex?

We shall have to face the fact, I think, that in this, as in other matters, fashion changes. Long before any of you were born, girls attracted men's attention and their love by presenting themselves as almost impossibly weak. In those days, a girl on the lookout for a beau laced herself almost to the fainting point, limited her activity to a little fancy work and hinted at dramatic insomnia.

Later, when women were out in the world to earn their livings, men found that a girl could be attractive and capable at the same time. But for romantic purposes, she mustn't be too capable. That is, it wasn't usually the forewoman or the buyer or the boss' secretary who appealed most to the sentimental male.

The current hit was often made by the brave little girl who tried to work hard and support her crippled mother, but couldn't quite make it. She had to be rescued, the pretty creature, just as she had been by her first crystal tears, and were drenching the unpaid pile of doctors' bills.

Now we're in another era. It's a warring world, and perhaps that's why the pattern of romance Girls have completely discarded all that weakness and semi-weakness that they once assumed because men liked them that way. They have now come to the point of admitting that they have nerve and muscle, of proving this publicly and of winning lovers on the strength of it. That's the interesting point, and there is the cue that many of you who may not yet have decided on the line you're going to take might well follow.

Here is Ernest Hemingway, the handsome and romantic writer of adventure books, who knows that he knows all about life and love and danger and who is said to have chosen his recent bride, Martha Gellhorn, because of her courage and daring.

Miss Gellhorn was a correspondent during the Spanish War, a few years ago. She followed to its very end an exhausting and dangerous peck trip which was almost too much for the men correspondents who also undertook it. Watching the cool way in which she met this ordeal and triumphed over it, Hemingway is said to have exclaimed, "There's the girl I'm going to marry!" And he did. Now they're off together hunting up further dangers.

Now that I mention it, you can easily think of other cases. There's Miss Virginia Gunter, who eloped to Conchita Cintron, of Tijuana, Mexico, who is acclaimed as the boldest of bull-fighters. Her courage as a dangerous to bulls as any man could be, and she's a beauty to the animal. "Spanish style", on foot, and in the same arena with another a second one while mounted on a galloping horse. Beautiful, fearless, expert at a dangerous sport—I can imagine Senorita Cintron lacks for lovers. And her admirers are of two races, for the little senorita is half Spanish and half Irish.

These are extreme examples. If you have a good safe job, I hope you won't give it up with the idea of becoming a bullfighter. There are plenty of other ways of showing initiative and bravery. The next time you're having or motoring with your boy friend, and liked them that way. They have no be a dead weight. Help out all you can. It will impress him, and you know you're even a better girl than he dreamed.

Dr. Dafoe's Column on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Democracy In The Home Chief Solve Child Problems of Parents

Problems relating to the behaviour of children are much more troublesome to parents today than any arising from ill-health or physical development, it appears to be a consensus among doctors. My Mailbag indicates this, too.

Nearly every week I get a letter from a distracted mother reading something like this: "I have done everything to train my boy, but it's no use. No matter what I say to him, send him to bed without his supper or try to be kind to him, he still acts as if he never wants to realize he is wrong, and resents any kind of punishment...."

Child training is largely a matter of well considered discipline started in babyhood and kept up constantly. All too often parents spoil their children in babyhood and don't start to train them until there are bad habits and attitudes to overcome. Or they think, discipline means whipping the child. Yes, too many fathers and mothers are mistaken practitioners of "Spare the rod and spoil the child."

Use against whipping children for several reasons. There are better ways of disciplining them, and the whipping is usually done by parents when they are angry and consequently are likely to make spectacles of themselves. They go to pieces, so to speak. Many a child, observing things a parent does and says under such circumstances, feels a sort of power over the parent because he has been able to produce that state of affairs by quite important. Whatever effect the whipping is intended to have is lost when he feels that way, obviously.

There is another reaction in his mind, too. If he sees his mother lose her self-control and temper over some prank of his, his respect for her is diminished. After a repetition of such incidents, he obeys her only because she is bigger and stronger than he is. Whether he is punished, he resents it and feels he is the victim of injustice. When he grows strong enough to avoid her chastisement, she loses control over him completely.

I remember reading in the works of some philosopher a pithy line: discipline is only the art of making children do what they ought, or of saying it's the art of leadership. Leadership is what is important in raising children properly.

The discipline we have in homes shouldn't be restricted to that which will make the child do this or not to do that. It should be all part of a plan to develop the child into a man being who can get along with other human beings.

I have found that when children and parents can't get along, it often springs from the fact that the parents aren't close enough to their children. They don't have good times together, they don't understand each other. Generally this is because the parent doesn't try to understand the child.

Sometimes, when children seem most unruly and disobedient, it is really guidance he wants. He wants to be regarded as an individual, but he needs someone to tell him how and what to do. His disobedience arises from conflicts and resentments he finds—often in his own home.

If parents could learn to sit down and talk to a child, they might learn a lot about obedience and discipline. Making a child just do as he is told does not get down to the true sense of the word. Making a child do something against his will, something he doesn't see the wisdom of will often do far more harm than good.

Home should be a small replication of what we are fighting for today—a democracy. You know the old definition of a democracy: the greatest good for the greatest number. Homes should be run on that basis, and once a child is grown that this is the pattern, then half your troubles will be over.

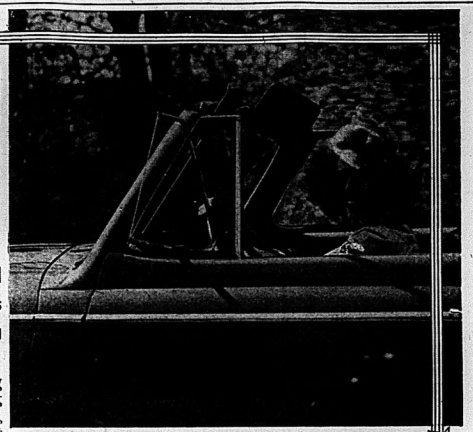
Beauty ON THE GO

Protective measures will preserve your good looks when you take that outing



Headed for a day in the country? Go ahead and enjoy yourself, but be sure to take along the proper beauty aids that will protect your good looks. You'll have to guard your skin against sun and wind burn to prevent damage to its smoothness and good appearance.

By Delight Dixon

GOING away just for the day? Going to get away from it all and commune with nature? Well, take care that the day's outing doesn't catch you unprepared and play havoc with the fine complexion you have been pampering for the past 364 days.

Even if you haven't a single beauty problem, it's wise to use protective measures in order to preserve your good looks. And if your skin is on the verge of being perfect as a result of daily pampering, it's doubly wise not to let up on its care for a single day. Use protective measures to guard your skin against sun and windburn, and to prevent damage to its smoothness and fine looks. Take care, too, that legs are protected against sun and windburn and roughness.

Today's suggestions have been especially designed to meet the needs of those of you who flee to the country every chance you get. These one day outings or picnics are often the beginning of, and are responsible for, beauty troubles that may take weeks, often months, to correct. Change your daily routine to meet your out-of-door needs, and be prepared to safeguard your appearance wherever you go.

Pack all of your beauty essentials in a little kit. You'll find the assembling of your aids interesting. You may have to add other items to those I've grouped together, but for the average person, I suggest the following in the first-aid kit to beauty: A jar of vanishing cream, a jar of cold cream, a bottle of skin freshener, a jar of anti-perspirant, two shades of lip rouge, a bottle of cream lotion, a box of powder, a bottle of nail polish, and, of course, cotton, bobby pins, comb, mirror, tissues and whatever other aids you wish to have with you.

The breezes and sun are all part of the scheme to make the day's outing perfect but take care that these elements don't harm your skin. If the drive to the country has been windy and hot, you'll want to refresh yourself before relaxing or exploring the camping grounds. It's then you'll dive into your beauty kit with joy.

Use the cold cream for cleansing your skin. Use two or more applications, tissuing off each, to make certain that your skin is clean. Then give yourself a soothing-protective facial right out here in the country. You can accomplish this in just one minute. When you have cleansed your skin and removed all cream, smooth on a heavy coating of vanishing cream. Make the application heavy, let it remain on for exactly one minute, then remove all of the snowy white mask. The cream dissolves little dry, rough bits of skin, removes any flakiness, and leaves the skin smooth.

A pad of cotton moistened with skin freshener may be used after the vanishing cream mask, or, if you prefer, forego this step until you start back to town. At any rate, a light film of vanishing cream either left on, or freshly applied, will serve as protection to your skin and act as a make-up foundation. This light film of vanishing cream will give the skin a soft finish, and can well serve as your only all-over facial make-up. If you do use powder, it should be of a dusk rose shade to harmonize with your skin. This shade can stand the glare of the sun without giving the skin an appearance of being heavily powdered or made up. It's an ideal shade of powder for out-of-doors wear.

Liprouge plays an important part in every make-up. Since the formal use of eye make-up is not a part of today's plan, however, you will want to emphasize the color of your lips in order to brighten your entire make-up. To bring out the golden tone of your complexion, by all means use a honey-red liprouge. It will accent even the slightly-tanned skin and remain on. It gives the lips a youthful lively appearance. The second lipstick in the kit is for evening wear, when you stop at the club or restaurant on your way back to town. It's a vivid and lively red, and is more flattering after the lights are on.

During your day's outing, you'll want to protect your legs against roughness and help them brown naturally. Here's where your bottle of cream lotion comes into your out-of-doors picture. The lotion is fragrant and creamy and is cooling to the skin. Pour some of the lotion in the palm of your hand, then rub it lightly over your legs. Use it on your arms, too, if there's the slightest danger of roughness.

Moist hands are a bugaboo no matter what the situation and they can and should be prevented. Let a good anti-perspirant keep your hands comfortably dry. A little of this aid to daintiness and comfort, applied to the palms of the hands, will keep them dry and lady-like. If you're driving a car, this is doubly appreciated.

The bottle of nail polish will come in handy if you want to patch up a previous application of enamel or if you want to reinforce a nail which is on the verge of splitting. Use a tan the shade of butterscotch if you want to emphasize the tan of your skin and have it blend with your out-of-doors liprouge. But if you want to accent the pink tones of your skin, use a violet-toned shade. These are new finger-tip shades for the season's complexion and facial make-up.

Going away just for the day? Have fun and relax. You will if you know you have all of your essential aids to help you cope with and prevent damage to your nice appearance.

A vanishing cream mask applied on clean skin will prove soothing and protect face against roughness.

Cream lotion smoothed over the legs and arms protects the skin and enables them to brown naturally.

The use of an anti-perspirant over the palms helps to keep them dry and avoid that big bugaboo to fastidiousness, clammy hands.

You will want to use liprouge whether any other make-up is used. To bring out the golden tone of your complexion, use a honey-red liprouge. It will accent even the slightly-tanned skin and give the lips a lively appearance. A second lipstick in your kit is for evening.

Nail polish will come in handy if you want to patch enamel, fix a split nail.

Delight Dixon Says:

A GRAND new cream, created by a salon which specializes in blending and combining beauty aids and make-up for the individual, has recently perfected a new texture cream. This cream is the combination of medicated ingredients which heals as it corrects blemishes, enlarged pores and pore impurities. Among other ingredients its formula includes soothing camphor combined with a beneficial base which acts as an astringent. Directions for using this texture cream on the various types of skin accompany each jar and, let me add, it is as beneficial on the robust, masculine skin as it is on the fine, feminine complexion. Here's a cream that gets to the root of trouble and soothes as it corrects.

Want to be drenched with the fragrance of mountain laurel, tropical spice, or natural, the true essence of the out-of-doors? Then use your choice of these new eau de cologines for enveloping you in a fragrant aura. Atomize the air around you and walk through the perfumed cloud, letting it enfold you like a mantle of fragrant dew. Moisten a pad of cotton with any of these three fragrances and place it in your purse or spin it to your slip at the point of decolletage. These are all invigorating fragrances that brave the spirits no matter how tiresome or willing the day.

In these enlightened days, when a good deodorant has become as intrinsic a part of civilized living as a bathtub, and as necessary as a toothbrush, every woman should consider the regular use of such an aid for fastidious grooming. The newest of these products is a wonderful, fully perfumed cream which, after all, is the simplest form to keep on hand and the easiest to apply. This cream should be used every third day, or more often if necessary. It works instantly and will not harm the most delicate clothing. Its vanishing cream base means that the application vanishes immediately and does not leave a greasy coating to be wiped off of the skin.

A pleasantly scented depilatory cream answers a long-felt need. It's a white cream that spreads smoothly and evenly and points the way to hair-free skin without fuss and long preparation. Just smooth it on evenly with the little wooden spatula that comes with the tube, let it stay on 10 minutes or longer, depending upon the coarseness of the hair, then wash it off with lukewarm water.

MISS DIXON will be happy to answer questions on beauty upon receipt of a three-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply, sent in her in care of this newspaper.

YOUR PROBLEMS

MAY I please have your reducing plan? I want to lose between 15 and 20 pounds. I am in very good health.
IRENE MILLER.

I regret that you did not send me a three-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope. If you will do so at once, I'll rush my leaflets of suggestion to you.

Can you suggest a remedy for and tell me the cause of nails splitting and peeling cross-wise in layers?
M.S.P.

Nails splitting and peeling cross-wise may be caused by harshness to the nails themselves, keeping the hands too long in water that is too hot and too soapy, or some systemic deficiency caused by wrong eating habits. If you want to correct the condition, do both of these: First, use a good nail and cuticle lubricant every morning and every night, massaging the corrective aid well into and around the nails. Every time you use a manicure buffer on the palm of your hand and buff your nails once or twice each day. The latter will stimulate circulation through the fingertips which, in turn, will help build strong nails.

In one of your recent articles you referred to little gadgets used in the ears for shutting out all sound. I'm a very light sleeper and feel that this sound-proofing system may be the answer to my troubles. Will you please let me know what they are and where they can be purchased? Also, are they safe to use?
Mrs. H. J. PARKINSON.

The little ear stoppies referred to in one of my recent articles may be purchased in most drug and department stores. They offer a splendid sound-proofing method while sleeping, reading or relaxing, and are absolutely safe to use. I cannot give you the name of these aids here, but if you will send me a three-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope, I'll be ever so happy to forward the desired information to you.

I have an extremely sensitive skin and although I have not been out in the sun very much, my skin is already showing signs of sunburn. Do you know of an effective sunburn preventive?
GRETA Z.

There are a number of excellent protective aids for sensitive skin. If your druggist cannot supply you, send me a three-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope. Be sure that you follow the directions accompanying the package of sunburn preventive you buy.

I am seeking your help in a little plot to help my daughter reduce. She is 15 years years old and about 18 pounds overweight. She is not particularly interested in sports with the exception of bowling. She has never really bowled but has many times expressed a wish to join her friends in their bowling leagues, but has held back on account of her size. Would bowling help her reduce? Have you any suggestions on bowling which might prove helpful and encouraging to her?
Mrs. PHILLIP H. DANIELS.

Bowling would be a splendid figure-trimmer for your daughter, and I'm sure she would find it interesting and fun. Send a three-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope and I'll forward you a complete set of bowling leaflets.

American League Schedule Gives Indians a Real Break On Their Jaunt Through East

Do Not Have to Meet Yankees and Red Sox in Succession

GAIN FULL 9 GAME

By JUDSON BAILEY

Associated Press Staff Writer.

This is the only eastern trip all season in which Cleveland Indians do not have to tackle the dangerous New York Yankees and Boston Red Sox in succession.

The schedule for this particular jaunt into the tribe travelling from New York to Philadelphia to Washington to Boston and Manager Roger Peckinpaugh is mighty happy about it today.

The Indians lost three straight games in New York to the Yanks, saw their American League lead shaved to a single game, and were staggering on the rim of a precipice when they left. They probably wouldn't have been any classy for the roaring Red Sox.

Instead they got a breathing spell against the Athletics last night, and although it was only enough to be termed a short breath, they came out with a 5-3 victory and gained another full game on the Yankees, whose eight-game winning streak was snapped.

The Indians wormed they way from behind in the seventh when Phil Marchildon wild pitched the winning run across the plate. The A's both runs came in the first, when Bob Johnson belted his 14th homer with one on.

Bigney Pitches Last Game

The defeat of the Yankees was no 4-7 decision handed out by Chicago White Sox. They started Johnny Rigney on the mound for his farewell pitching appearance before being inducted into the army Friday. He made three hits himself and held the Yanks to three in the first six innings but fell apart to give up five runs in the seventh and eighth innings. Finally he had to be removed with the score tied and Jack Kramer received credit for the victory.

Boston Red Sox and Detroit Tigers divided a doubleheader. The Red Sox scored eight runs in the seventh inning to take the first game 14-6 and Detroit retaliated with two four run frames in the nightcap to win 8-5.

Eagles Winning Stride

Mort Cooper regained his winning stride after his sub par performance as St. Louis Cardinals pummelled the Phillies 11-3, thus maintaining the Red Birds' firm hold on the National League lead in spite of a 7-6 10-inning victory by Brooklyn Dodgers over Chicago Cubs. The Dodger triumph came on a three run homer by Jim Wasdell in the first half of the tenth.

Carl Hubbell coasted to a 7-2 victory over the Boston Braves when the wildness of Rip Sewell helped split his offering in the five-run lead in the first three innings.

Cincinnati Red hopped on Art Johnson in the first inning for a run, added another in the third inning and gave Paul Derringer easy sailing to a 3-3 verdict over the Boston Braves, although he gave 10 hits.

Lefty today

With Connie Mack

His famous arm

Bought by A's—1934

Robert Moses "Lefty" Grove, one of the greatest lefthanders of all time, indeed, has reached his goal of 300 victories in the Major Leagues. When "Lefty" recently set down the Chicago White Sox, he recorded his 297th win. Grove, now 41, first came into the majors in 1924 when Connie Mack purchased him from Baltimore Orioles for a reported $106,000. It was not until 1927 that Grove really began to click. He won 20 for the A's that year and followed with six more of 20 or more victories. Grove's best record is 31 won and four lost in 1931

SYRACUSE CHIEFS RUN WIN STREAK TO SIX GAMES

Defeat Montreal 7-2 With Tom Sunkel Allowing Only Eight Hits

LEAFS DIVIDE

(By The Associated Press)

Like the little girl in the nursery rhyme, when Syracuse Chiefs are good "they're very, very good".

The Chiefs have gone from one extreme to the other since the International League baseball season started, winning and losing games in bunches and today find themselves back in the .500 mark with 26 victories and as many defeats.

The latest winning streak reached six straight last night when they trounced Montreal Royals 7-2 behind lanky Tom Sunkel.

Sunkel kept eight hits well-spaced, while his mates banged three pitchers for 11 blows, to chalk up the seventh triumph of the year. A three-run homer by Goody Rosen in the seventh touched off a five-run explosion at the expense of Charlie Gassaway, who was making his first start of the year for Montreal.

It was a bad night for the leaders all around, with each of the First Division Clubs going down to defeat.

Bears Split Twin Bill

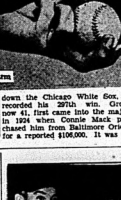
The league-leading Newark Bears split a double-header with the last place Toronto Leafs, winning the opener 2-1 and losing the nightcap 9-5; Jersey City shutout the second place Rochester Red Wings 2-0 and Baltimore swamped fourth place Buffalo 13-3.

Ken Richardson held the Leafs to four hits in the first game at Toronto, which went two extra innings.

Toronto overcame a 5-3 deficit in the eighth frame in the second game, scoring seven runs off three Bears hurlers.

Rookie Rube Fischer blanked the Red Wings for the Jersey City Giants their second straight victory over the champions. Ed Gorman's two-base hit with two on in the first provided the Little Giants with their lone run.

Baltimore got off to a six-run lead against Buffalo and were never headed. Bob Beck homered for the Birds with two on in the fourth and also had a pair of singles in six trips to the plate.



RIVAL MANAGERS

Manager Bill McKechnie, LEFT, of the Cincinnati Reds, and Manager Rogers Peckinpaugh of the Cleveland Indians, shake hands before their teams started an exhibition game at Cooperstown, N.Y., birthplace of baseball. The Reds defeated the World Champion Indians 2-1 in six innings.

'Slamming Sam' Snead May Give up Golf Until Back Heals

Richmond, Va., June 18.—(AP)—"Slamming Sam" Snead, the Canadian Open Champion, has decided to give up tournament golf until he can get some relief for that now chronic back ailment.

One specialist has advised a major operation, but, says the Hot Springs, Va., swimmer, "I want to be certain there is no other way out before I let them cut into my back". The operation would keep him off the golf courses from three to six months.

BIGGEST CROWD IN THREE YEARS TO VIEW FIGHT

Joe Louis Ready to Defend His Title Against Billy Conn

15-ROUND BOUT

By GAYLE TALBOT

Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, June 18 (AP)— The biggest, richest prize fight crowd since the second Jack Dempsey-Gene Tunney battle three summers ago will surge into Polo Grounds tonight to watch Louis defend his heavyweight championship against clever Billy Conn of Pittsburgh.

The big negro's 12th defense of his title promised to draw more than 40,000 and to gross approximately $400,000, as compared with the $1,500,000 that flowed into promoter Mike Jacobs' treasury that night Louis crushed Schmeling, the man he hated, in less than a round.

The most popular opinion was that something much like that is due to happen tonight to Conn, though the 23-year-old challenger had plenty of supporters. The odds against the former light-heavyweight king were lengthened steadily in the Broadway marts. Last night it was possible to get odds of 7 to 5 against his winning.

Billy will square off for their 15-rounder at about 10 p.m. EDT, in the outside event of such they will put it off until tomorrow night. A good guess is that Lee Cavanagh, West Point boxing instructor, will be the referee.

Broadcast of the bout scheduled this afternoon, was expected to reach radio packing an audience of approximately 25 pounds. There was some accidental wagering last night that Conn would scale under 175.

The Bomber has been on edge for several days, anxious to get at the boy he thinks "talks too much". He expects to slop Billy in two or three rounds.

By DUKE MORAN

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Pittsburgh, June 18.—(AP)—Far from the ringside where Billy Conn meets Joe Louis for the heavyweight title tonight, a sweet-voiced woman will be undergoing a more critical test than any the exuberant Irishman has put on.

Mrs. Margaret Conn, 41-year-old mother of Billy Pittsburgh's challenger, is too ill to listen to the broadcast of the fight in the Conn's comfortable Fifth Avenue home here. But as soon as the fight is over—win or lose for Billy—she is to be told what happened.

For nearly two years Mrs. Conn has been battling a lingering disease which physicians say is incurable. Yet she always has managed to muster up a smile for Billy.

A few weeks ago when attending physicians believed a serious relapse might cause her death she gained.

"Don't tell Billy I'm so sick. It might divert him and bother his training."

SWACO LASSIES SOUNDLY TROUNCE DEACONS 25 TO 12

East-End Girls Advance Into Sole Possession of Second Place by Win

LUSTY HITTING

With hits, runs and errors being about equal on the scoring sheet, the SWACO lassies soundly trounced the Deacon gals 25 to 12 in an abbreviated seven-inning City Girls' Softball League game played at the Armouries last evening. In winning Skipper Ken Waite's "east-end" gals advanced into sole possession of second place in the league standing, while the loss pushed the Deacon girls into the cellar slot.

Lusty hitting on the part of the SWACO batters, coupled with some weird fielding by the losers forced the winners to ease off in the latter stages. At the end of the fourth the count stood at nine-all, with the edge in favour of the SWACO, but an eleven-run splurge in the sixth turned the tide of battle into a rout for the SWACO's favour.

"Danny" Sirad, elongated SWACO hurler, went the route for the winners and allowed but 12 hits, of which only two were for extra base nature. Jean Cornwall ascended the hilltop for the Deacons but was given ragged support in the field and walked or gifted in four runs. Miss Conrad was replaced by Wanda Matthews in the fifth, but the Deacons continued to boot the ball about for glaring errors, which let in seven runs while the speedy pitcher had and without feeling. Miss Sirad also led the table of runs, hits and errors.

—GOSSIP NEWS COMMENT—

We have a letter from J. S. Stevenson, Secretary of "Dirt Clap" Hastings softball team, inviting a Belleville team to compete in a softball tournament to be held on the Victoria Recreation Park. The tournament is for war charity purposes and teams from Oshawa, Peterboro, Trenton and Lindsay have been invited to participate. Walter Stevens, manager of Corby A.C. or Reliance as the clubs they would prefer from the Belleville Association. Oddly enough, the Belleville Softball Association is staging a similar tournament here in July 1st also and an invitation was supposed to have been extended from our local association to "Dirt" Clappers Hastings team to compete here. It is most unfortunate that something went amiss with these arrangements as Gerald Barrage is going right ahead with the local plans and already invitations have been extended to the Air Force and Trenton to participate in the local tourney. Last year the Belleville district led the province in softball war work on a per capita basis.

DID YOU KNOW Earle Combs and Art Fletcher, New York Yankee coaches were guests at a recent Major Bowes radio program? . . . Bob Feller's pitching arm-in-plaster will be placed as permanent display in the Cleveland Health Museum, the Cleveland baseball star broke his right arm and hand while holidaying in Canada. . . . To date there 45 league games this year the Yankees used 25 pitchers, an average of more than one per day. . . . Efforts to bring the world championship Canadian girls' softball team, starring the Lyn Greenacre girls, to Belleville are in the making. . . . Ralph Anderson, starry leftwinger with the Reliance last season, is not expected to return to Belleville for another season. . . . Luke Appling, White Sox shortstop, hit safely against Cleveland for the past week. . . . It was Appling's first batting slump since Aug. 24, 1940, although he has been a consistent .300 hitter all that time. . . . Corby A. C. would like to have Bruce Hamilton, caverlng around at first base.

Do you remember when Pancho Villa was the world's leading boxing championship by knocking out Jack Johnson, Negro title holder, at New York 18 years ago tonight? The Filipino put on a terrific two round show to knock out the English champ in the Manhattan Casino. Johnson, former 15-round bout. Villa died two years later.

All arguments as to which is the best baseball city in the country are settled as far as Jimmy Wood, sports editor of the Brooklyn Eagle, is concerned. He's one of the city's enthusiasm. In following years, the Cubs made Chicago the hot town and then the Yanks went one ahead in attendance figures with the Dodgers a close third.

"Detroit seemed to have the edge for a short season there, Black Mike Cochrane took over, but right now we hazard the guess that Brooklyn is the winner, although the recent escalations for customers at Ebbets Field is far short of the Polo Grounds or Yankee Stadium.

Boxers Kingston Jape crowds are being entertained at baseball every Saturday in the Interprovincial League. Kingston Limestone City team is leading by a substantial margin. The following is some of Scribe Bill Washer's comment pertaining to last Saturday's game, which should be of interest for local consumption. Bill says:

"Shades of the old Kingston Ponies in the C.O.B.L. were evident on Saturday in Kingston's win over Hull Volants with former members of the once power team of municipal ball fame, in succession in the batting order in eleven hits and seven errors. Stan Scrutton led the heavy hitting quartet with three for four, Joe Corkey got two for five, one a double. Tex McQuade got two for three and also included a run scoring double, while Bob Elliott went in as a reserve for the injured Justin Sullivan and drilled out two for three. Four veterans got nine of Kingston's eleven hits and scored six of the eight runs but their younger mates were also prominent in the play with Jake Edwards getting a good account of himself in limiting Hull to eleven hits and driving in three when the Volants threatened."

Tony (he-should-know) Galento, says Joe Louis will "beat Bill Conn at the Polo Grounds tonight, to which we add an amen, especially as Referee Arthur is the best thing man in the ring. The experts are leaning about Conn's chance his way to victory over Louis. Well you can't knock a heavyweight down with light left jabs in this day and age, despite Conn's record with Jack Sharkey contends. The only thing Conn has over the champ, is youth. Louis is 27 and Conn 23, therefore Louis will perhaps outweigh Conn nearly 30 pounds he stands taller and has a longer reach, so it's Louis by a mile, in the opinion of this scribe.

SPORT SALAD—The White Sox snapped the Yankees' current streak of eight, while Pale Hose winning a thriller 8-7 yesterday. . . . Shades of 1938, the Indians won a nocturnal game with the A's and new Roger Peckinpaugh pilot of the Tribesmen can breathe a little easier. . . . All the 1941 league-leaders are seen in the National League yesterday and today with Brooklyn a ball game. . . . Tonight will see the Cubberoonies defense of the world heavyweight championship at last. . . . The fight will go on the air at 10 p.m. Eastern Daylight Time. The Quinte Tennis Club spilt in two evenly matched teams when the West End Club last night and failed to defeat its weaker opponents by a single game. . . . The league-leading Quinte netsters..... "Boiler" Lloyd is seeking a half a dozen additional entries for the Kinsmen Soap Box Derby in an effort to bring the entry list up to 70 on Derby Day (June 28th) . . . . The league "Danny" Stead laboured on the hilltop for the SWACO gals in the girls' softball league. It's a hockey player at the G. C. Scott's, congrats, "Scottie" aid boy.

Tennis

Concluding their match play last week, the Quinte and West Side tennis clubs divided the two sets of men's doubles played, as the latter left the Quinte courts at the result of these matches the tournament is now completed with the Quinte Club four matches to two, the Quinte players winning second place in the league standing, now to be headed by Jimmy Brunett and Dawson Maclean (Quinte) who were over Shaw and Bill Colclough (West Sides) 6-1 and 6-3 while Dave Holland and Murray Clare (West Sides) defeated Bill Reid and Ml Wickerton (Quinte) 6-2 and 6-2.

IPSWICH BISHOP DIES

Horsted, Norwich, England, June 18—(CP)—Right Rev. Walter G. Whittingham, 80, former Anglican Bishop of Ipswich, died yesterday.

In another phase of the air war, the Admiralty in a statement said the aircraft carrier Illustrious came near destruction when attacked by Nazi dive-bombers in the Mediterranean Jan. 10. Work of the engine room staff and repair parties "saved the vulnerable ship after severe damage and in difficult conditions," a report to the Admiralty said.

Cut in Behind Nazis Force

The French drive through Merdjayoun, Kunaitra and Ezraa was said to have been carried out by a mobile column which cut in behind the main Allied force pushing toward Damascus.

Merdjayoun is about 40 miles southwest of Damascus and Ezraa is approximately the same distance due south of the Syrian capital, almost on the border of Jebel Ed Druz. Kunejtra is about halfway between this two towns.

Though the Vichy assault on Merdjayoun apparently was carried out in some force, with armored units and Druz cavalry participating, British sources said it had not interfered with the general scope of the operations against Damascus.

Allied troops were reported in possession of hilly overlooking the city and moving slowly down into the plains.

British sources said however, the Vichy forces showed no disposition to give up the fight and declared the Vichy Air force had been strengthened by between 40 and 70 planes in the past 48 hours.

Many of the planes are mostly fighters—six of German make bet bear French insignia.

An announcement last night disclosed that Gen. Jean Hergerst, Vichy Air Minister, had arrived in Beirut to inspect air units there.

The Allied column striking up the Lebanese coast toward Beirut was reported to have made further progress beyond Sidon the situation there was described as "reasonably secure".

Reports from Cairo said the Royal Air Force and Australian aircraft were giving constant support to Allied ground troops both in Syria and Lebanon.

Alexandria, June 17.— (Delayed) —(AP)—Units of the Mediterranean fleet bolstering the land drive into the Levant flashes ever considering heavy shelling of shore batteries and mechanized columns with "effective results", naval officers said today.

Officers of one cruiser returning to base after patrolling the Lebanese coast said: "considerable damage" had been inflicted on French supply bases and truck and tank units.

One column of mechanized reinforcements moving south from Beirut yesterday was "completely routed and allied aid forced to retire in disorder", it was said.

BRITISH STRATEGY

A communique said British forces penetrated to the fort, an Axis base for the drive into Egypt, and withstood repeated counter-attacks.

British sources said seriousness of the position of the Axis advance which already partly encircled the Salum area, caused the Germans and Italians, to rush up reinforcements from the vicinity to Tobruk, 90 miles farther west.

United States-built fighter planes used in increasing numbers, were credited with holding Germany's dive bombers at bay. Pilots using these planes described them as "peerless" and said they were shooting up "very well" against new Messerschmitts the Nazis had brought to North Africa.

OWEN TUDOR WINS

Trainer Darling had counted on Mercgore to give him his seventh Derby victory and when Owen Tudor closed in to take the race from his stablemate he expressed astonishment. Owen Tudor carried the lightest of his mates.

The successful jockey was N. Nevell, who was given special leave from the army to ride. It was his first victory in the Derby.

Lambert Simnel finished fifth.

Field of Twenty Started

Mercgore was given two lengths ahead of Pirone Din. A field of 20 started.

Mrs. MacDonald-Buchanan had picked her second entry, Thoroughfare, to win. Thoroughfare, however, was not in the running. She became the third woman to run the Derby. Lady James Douglas won a previous wartime running at Newmarket with Gainsborough in 1916, while Mrs. G. B. Miller won with Mid-day Sun in 1937.

It was the second Derby win in a row for Trainer Darling. He was both owner and trainer of last year's winner, Pont L'Eveque.

"REFUSED PAROLE"

Dannemora, N.Y., June 18—(AP)—Fritz Kuhn, former German-American Bund leader now serving a 2 1-2 to 5 year prison term for stealing money from the Bund, was "unanimously" refused parole today by the Parole Board sitting at Clinton Prison.

CHAPTER NINETEEN

"THIS PLACE is so very lovely," said June Heath after a moment, "and it was so kind of Mr. Markham to make it possible for us to come here for a honeymoon. I know we will all remember as long as we live. It seems rather a shame to start bickering the moment we set foot on the island."

"Terry didn't mean it when she referred to Mrs. Edmonds as the clinging vine type," began Betsy loyally. Terry flashed her a grateful glance.

"Personally, the Edmonds woman looked to me like a woman who would create trouble, wherever she went," said Lucy Littlefield, a trifle plumply. "I've seen the type at summer hotels along the Maine coast —and, frankly, I don't like 'em."

Terry gave a little crow of delight, cried, "My pal!" and flung herself on Lucy with a childish, bear-like hug. Lucy flushed pinkly, looked pleased, and tried to break through her usual restraint to make some return of Terry's warm friendliness.

An hour later, when they had all been assigned to cottages, Betsy and Tom stared at each other as they stood in the patio.

"Well!" said Tom, and ran his fingers through his crisp red hair. "I'd say, from where I stand, that it looks like we're going to be here days ahead!"

Betsy nodded soberly, her smoky-gray eyes troubled.

"Mrs. Simpson is beautiful, isn't she?" she mused. "And mysterious, don't you think?"

"Mysterious?" Plainly Tom did not care for the word. "What's mysterious about her? Alluring, I'd say—fascinating, even—"

"Oh, you would, would you?" Betsy snapped, her eyes sharpening a little. "Well, I'll call her mysterious. She's supposed to be a girl who works for a living in an office, isn't she?"

"Good Lord, NO!" Tom couldn't believe it.

"Take a look at the office records, me lad," said Betsy. "She's supposed to be about 18, I think—supposed to be about 18 for a couple of years at least, sewing overalls. But did you ever see such beautiful hands? Her nails are so long and smooth and shiny—several facets to my eye!"

Tom was studying her curiously. "Meaning you think she's putting one over on us, by suggesting that she do YOU think?"

Betsy was almost belligerent.

Tom shook his head. "I think they're our guests for the next 30 days and that we should forget everything but that — don't you? And now what do you say to a swim before dinner?"

Betsy set her teeth for a moment, and then she lifted her shoulders in a little expressive gesture that dismissed the thought of the burdens they had been supporting.

"I say okay, mister."

Brooks stowed the cheap new suitcase in the cottage's one bedroom. Natalie was standing looking about her, taking in the soft gray walls, the silvery woodwork, the cool green draperies with the big splashy lemon-yellow flowers scattered through them, . . . colors that had been borrowed from the framed picture above the mantel — tall, long-legged, blue-gray herons feeding in a marshy pool against the lemon-yellow of a sunset sky.

"This is rather charming," said Natalie.

"But there are complications, wouldn't you say? After all, there IS only one bedroom."

Natalie laughed and her color deepened a little.

"But of course. What would a honeymoon couple want with more? Darling, I'll take the narrow bed, and did not quite meet his eyes.

Brooks left after a moment. "Whoever furnished the cottage had an understanding streak," he said. "That divan looks amazingly comfortable."

"Yes, it does, doesn't it?" agreed Natalie. "Now, then—"

"And now — what about food?" Brooks said briskly. "Does one go to the Hacienda for one's supper? Or is there a restaurant hidden in the jungle, or what?"

Natalie walked across the living room, through the arch and into the low kitchen, with its shining tile, its mechanical ice box and its gas range. Above the stove there were built-in shelves, one corner of which revealed a great stock of canned food. The ice box proved to be well supplied.

"And you were talking about a restaurant!" she scoffed. "One of one's bride is expected to provide one's husband with a meal. I quite one's husband with a meal. I quite corner and read that newspaper you brought along, while I get into a more practical garb and see what can be done toward preparing a meal."

Brooks stared at her, then grinned. "Darling, you're in a startled frown. "You're not going to tell me that you can cook!" he marveled.

"Certainly not! I'm going to let you wait and find it out for yourself," she assured him coldly. "Idiot! I had two years of domestic science. And I spent eight weeks that time you thought I was racing about gathering up trousseaus!"

"Good grief!" said Brooks. In simple astonishment.

"Run along and read your paper."

"I'll go for a walk on the beach and see if I can find signs that the island is inhabited—Robinson Crusoe stuff," said Brooks. "Only don't DON'T walk toward Gray Gull cottage. I'm scared Mrs. Edmonds is a dangerous woman," laughed Natalie.

"Oh, definitely she is dangerous," Brooks agreed, and went out.

In the bedroom Natalie opened the suitcase and unpacked swiftly. She had had fun shopping in Jacksonville's smartest shops for what the suitcase now held; the modest, pretty printed garments that Mrs. Simpson would have chosen. And she dressed with a good deal of pleasure, a pale pink linen frock partly covered by a fluffy organdie apron that was as bride-like as a wedding veil.

When she had finished, she leaned close to the bureau mirror and studied herself carefully; she WAS beautiful. She would have been a fool not to have known that, she was so prepared for her husband. And she let the long breath with which she heard Brooks' footsteps on the little veranda and entered the living room.

Brooks watched his wife as she spread a delicious-looking meal on the little oak table in the dining nook.

"Gosh, but you look pretty," he said involuntarily. "Natalie darling, I've never seen you!"

"That's because I'm preparing food for you," said Natalie. "It's almost ready now, you can help me."

She placed a steak, a crisp salad of romaine and lettuce on the table, and brought in a slate of biscuits, golden brown and grisby hot. There was a vegetable that had come out of a can, and there had been a chocolate cake and an iced dessert in the ice box.

"It's very simple, of course. I'll do better tomorrow," she promised him.

Natalie was standing looking about her, taking in the soft gray walls, the silvery woodwork, the cool green draperies with the big splashy bronze-yellow flowers scattered through them, colors that had been borrowed from the framed picture above the mantel — tall, long-legged, blue-gray herons feeding in a marshy pool against the lemon-yellow of a sunset sky.

"This is rather charming," said Natalie.

"But there are complications, wouldn't you say? After all, there IS only one bedroom."

"But of course. What would a honeymoon couple want with two bedrooms?" she answered lightly, and did not quite meet his eyes.

Brooks said after a moment, "Whoever furnished the cottage has an understanding of comfort. That divan looks amazingly comfortable—"

"And now — what about food?" Brooks said briskly. "Does one go to the Hacienda, do you suppose? Or is there a restaurant hidden in the marsh—or what?"

Natalie walked across the living room into the neat green and yellow kitchen, with its shining tile, its mechanical ice box and oil stove. Above the stove there were built-in cabinets whose opened doors revealed a great stock of canned food. The ice box proved to be equally well stocked.

"And you were talking about a restaurant!" she scoffed. "I'd say one's bride is expected to provide food. Open you all in a quiet corner and read that newspaper you brought along, while I get into a more practical garb and see what can be done toward preparing a meal."

Brooks stared at her, his eyebrows drawn together in a startled frown. "You're not going to tell me that you can cook?" he marveled.

"Certainly not! I'm going to let you wait and find it out for yourself!" she assured him airily. "Until I had two years of domestic science. And I spent eight weeks at the girls' school—part of the time you thought I was racing about gathering up a trousseau!"

"Good grief!" said Brooks, in sincere astonishment.

"Run along and read your paper—"

"I'll go for a walk on the beach and see if I can find signs that the island is inhabited—Seminoles, Crusoe stuff," said Brooks with a grin. "But I WON'T walk toward Gray Gull cottage. I'm sure Mrs. Edmonds is a dangerous woman," laughed Natalie.

"Well, definitely she is dangerous," Brooks agreed, and went out.

In the bedroom Natalie opened the suitcase and unpacked swiftly. She had had fun shopping in Jacksonville between trains for this, and the suitcase now held; the modernistically priced garments that Coralie Simpson would have chosen. And she donned with a good deal of pleasure, a pale pink linen frock partly covering it with a fluffy organdy apron that was as bride-like as a wedding veil.

When she had finished, she leaned close to the large mirror and studied herself carefully. she WAS beautiful. She would have been a fool not to have known that. Yet —Brooks was not in love with her. That seemed a bit odd. she told herself; not with conceit, but because other men had seemed to find her lovely and desirable. Yet of all the men she had ever known, Brooks alone had touched her heart. Why must he be the one man she had wanted — who didn't want her?

She turned away from the mirror and went swiftly into the small, compact kitchen. It was fun, she told herself gleefully, as she selected from the supplies the first meal she was to prepare for her husband. And she all but held her breath when she heard Brooks's footsteps on the little verands and entered the living room.

Brooks watched his wife as she served a really splendid dish on the little oak table in the dining room.

"Gosh, but you look pretty," he said involuntarily. "Prettier than I've ever seen you!"

"That's because I'm preparing food for you, and you're hungry," Natalie teased. "It's almost ready to serve, you can help me."

She placed a steak, a crisp salad of tomatoes and lettuce on the table, and brownit in a plate of biscuits, golden brown and piping hot. There was a vegetable that had come out of a can, and there had been a chocolate cake and an iced dessert in the ice box.

"It's very simple, of course. I'll do better tomorrow," she promised him.

CARI BOO PAY DIRT AIDS WAR EFFORT

Responding to the appeal to aid the nation at war, W. J. Corrigan, prospector and placer miner at Abbotsford, British Columbia, sacrificed the greatest part of his supply of coarse gold directly to Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King.

Ottawa, June 18 (Special)—An outstanding subscription to the Victory Loan 1941 has come from a British Columbia placer miner. J. J. Corrigan, who did not have even five cents in money, but sent along a gunny sack containing raw gold to Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King for which he received a Victory bond.

The gold meant a grubstake, flour and beans and other supplies for Corrigan's trek back into the hills, but Corrigan felt that the country needed it more than he did at the present time.

The Prime Minister sent a personal letter to the placer miner in which he said,

"I thank you very much for your letter and for the fine example you have set in the matter of patriotism. I have received the phial of gold which you forwarded to me from your last year's work as a placer miner in the Cariboo district. It has been assayed, its proceeds will be used to purchase a Victory Bond in your name.

"I am deeply touched by your belief and generosity in your patriotic action. They are both typical of the splendid qualities of the Canadian people. The news of what you have done and the way you have chosen to help your country will be an inspiration to all who learn of it. I thank you for the greatest of all causes. I notice that you propose to be back in the placer digging out more gold. May I express the hope that you will "strike it lucky."

With instructions that it be sold and the proceeds used to purchase a war bond, Corrigan sent the 20 gram-fringed miner as he posed in the back yard of his one acre plot of ground in the Victory Trench, evidence that he has purchased a Victory Bond. The Victory Bond shows the miner in conservation with Harvey Henderson, district loan captain of the Abbotsford Victory Loan committee, while the top right shows an assistant to the Royal Canadian mint proudly displaying the phial of gold on a plush pillow.

You certainly deserve to do so.

—With kind personal regards,

Yours sincerely,

(Signed) W. L. Mackenzie King."

Mr. Corrigan, now of Abbotsford, British Columbia, wrote as follows to Mr. King:

"Please excuse the liberty I take but my heavy pay dirt is now in money and being anxious to do my bit, I am sending you the balance of my last year's work placer mining in the Cariboo as I want to invest every cent of it in Victory Bonds. Knowing my object will you do me this favor and I know the little vial contains more than the price of a $5 dollar bond. Thanking you in anticipation and hoping soon to be back in the Cariboo again digging out more.

Yours respectfully,

Signed) W. J. Corrigan."

Toronto, June 18.—(CP)—Dear Mr. Editor: For the first time in our lives we have had serious sickness and heavy medical expenses. Naturally we should be glad of the use of your paper to express our appreciation of all who had anything to do with us at this time. I do not think we could have had more correct diagnosis or skilful surgery. The nurses could not have rendered better service or been kinder. The hospital accommodation was splendid and we are profoundly thankful that the regular bills have been so satisfactory.

While I have mentioned the heavy medical and hospital expenses I wish it clearly understood that they are not overcharged for anything. The hospital could not have given us free accommodation and charged less. The nurses, I feel sure, were not overpaid when the time they put in and the care they are like. One would like to know what the Canadian Red Cross nurses' salaries nurses is. I know it is too little. The doctors were very reasonable and I have no fault to find with either the service or the cost. I have been intimately associated with doctors for many years and no body of men in any other profession do so much for nothing as they do many times their charges are modified when the necessity of the patient calls for it.

Notwithstanding all this I believe the time for the socialization of our medical and hospital services is long over due in Ontario and in this city. As I recall the many I have ministered to in our hospitals I would say that nearly all large an income as I have, and who have had as great and in many cases far greater expense, I am deeply grieved. It will be years before some of them have his indebtedness discharged. The burden does not fall so heavily on the wealthy or the indigent, but it is often cruel on Ell the group of ordinary citizens, hard working, thrifty and independent, who want to pay their own way, and who sometimes see lifetime savings swept away with a single sickness. This often takes place when they are about to retire or are retired and when they so much need their financial reserve for their own old age when power ceases. The fight against our common foe disease and death is a tragedy for many.

We believe the time has come when, as a community, we should be a unit in bearing burdens in this regard. We already do so in many other things. We share the cost of building school education, our road building, our waterworks, our fire protection, our lighting and police, etc. I do not think our most extreme individualist would wish these to go back to private ownership in these things. Is there any reason why it is important as the education of the mind? I do not hear that there is any complaint regarding or lack in efficiency because they are thus handled.

Whose duty is it to plan a greater degree of socialization of these services? Surely it is the duty of the medical profession who are responsible for the health of the community. The duty of the clergy for our doctors to begin de novo in this respect. It is long past the time to remove the needs of this community. Why should it be confined to the city of Toronto in this matter? I understand an effort was made a short time ago here. Why did it fail?

In discussing this the other day a gentleman said to me: "It's coming. Have patience. It requires a lot of education first." I told him that it was not patience but impatience we needed; not education but a plan and action. Let our doctors submit their plan and see how eagerly the community will receive it.

RIGID TIGHTENING OF IMMIGRATION CONTROL PLANNED

U.S. Gov't. Bars Departure of 330,000 German Nationals Living in the Country

BOARDS ESTABLISHED

By LLOYD LEHRBAS
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Washington, June 18 (AP)—Sharper control over immigration into the United States is to be established before July 1, authoritative sources said today, a few hours after the government had frozen the departure "pending further instructions" of any of 330,000 German Nationals now living in this country.

To effect the strict control over movements of aliens, boards of review will be established to pass on all applications for immigrant visas, after each application has been investigated.

The State, Justice, War and Navy Departments will have one representative on each of the five boards of review to be set up in key seaports, with the possibility that the Federal Bureau of Investigation, a special immigration investigative agency also will be represented.

The army and navy representation on the boards, it was learned, is particularly designed to prevent Fifth Columnists or subversive agents of other governments from entering the U.S. in the guise of refugees.

The order issued yesterday to the Customs and Immigration services in Mexico and German Nationals from leaving the United States was further tightened today and characterized as one more move in the "gradual" tightening control over 5,000,000 aliens in the U.S., as well as over the movements of 130,000,000 more, many of whom describe themselves as refugees from Nazi-occupied territories.

At the same time, it was pointed out in official quarters, the new restrictions make it possible for the U.S. to block the movements of Nazis into Mexico and other Latin American republics where such persons have been active in subversive activities on behalf of the Axis powers have been reported.

Brenda Frazier, Heiress, To Wed John Sims

New York, June 18 —(AP)—Brenda Diana Duff Frazier, New York society, Glamour Girl No. 1, and her $40,000 dowry, is going to marry.

Her mother, Mrs. Frederick N. Watriss, announced today the engagement of the "glamorous" debutante daughter to John Sims (Slip-per) Kennedy, athlete, ex-pro football player and one-time part-owner of Brooklyn baseball Dodger team.

The wedding will be held in the Crystal Room of the Ritz-Carlton some time before July 1," Mrs. Watriss said.

It was expected to be small, limited to the families of the couple, and a shock to the dark-haired beauty's debut at the same hotel when 1,200 guests crowded the ballroom and it seemed an estimated $1,500 worth of the champagne was to be consumed.

Although the heiress to a $2,500,000 fortune has been reported engaged in the past to many of society's eligible bachelors, from Prince Serge to Kelly came as no surprise to members of cafe society, who have been watching developments for months.

Miss Frazier, who once said romantic matrimony was her main ambition, met Kennedy at a party which she was reported to become custodian of her fortune. Kelly is 30.

Miss Frazier is the granddaughter of Sir Frederick Williams-Taylor, prominent Montreal banker who now lives in Nassau, in Nassau, the Bahamas. Her mother was born in Montreal. Her father, Frederick Duff Frazier, an officer in the United States Air Force during the first World War. They were divorced in 1926.

Children Fly To Visit Father, A Ferry Pilot

Chicago, June 18—(AP)—Three British children were flying today to an eastern reunion with their father, ferry pilot in 11 months with their father and uncle, who crossed the Atlantic to see the United States-made bomber to Britain.

It was the first visit last night for Commander Roy S. Dartshire of the Royal Air Force, whose family he telephoned Mrs. J. C. Hormel of Austin, Minn., and whom only two hours the children were packed on a plane for Minneapolis. Then they changed planes here.

The children, Nadia Darbishire, 11, Jocelyn Darbishire, Callum, 17 months and Gillian George, 3, have been living with the Hormels since last July.

The curly-haired Gallium sobbed on his nurse's shoulder when the plane departed from Minneapolis today. He was only six months old when he left his parents for England.

Nadia, happy at the thought of seeing her father, was excited but sleepy. Gillian attempted to quiet Callum.

FDR Intimates U.S. Ready to Arm Merchant Ships

Washington, June 18 (AP)—President Roosevelt left no doubt today that the United States is ready, if necessary, to arm American merchantmen to meet the threat of submarine warfare.

Whether such action would be taken, informed sources said, probably would depend to a great degree on the attitude which they said when Berlin receives the state department's forthcoming protest over the sinking of the American freighter Robin Moor by a submarine in the South Atlantic.

Well - informed congressional leaders already were predicting that arming of the ships would be accomplished by executive order, to avoided comment.

The question of arming the merchant fleet was raised at Mr. Roosevelt's press conference yesterday. The President was asked whether any thought had been given to the subject after the torpedoing of the Robin Moor.

Mr. Roosevelt replied that the United States had plans ready for arming her merchantmen—and had had them ready since 1918.

"Have they come out of the safe yet?" a reporter inquired.

Mr. Roosevelt said not at his request, but he did not deny it.

Answering another query, he said he did not know whether congressional authority would be needed to order the arming of the merchant marine.

Britain Expects New Onslaught By Axis Soon

(By Kirke L. Simpson)

Washington, June 18—(AP)—Britain a year ago today Prime Minister Winston Churchill declared, "we will defend ourselves to fight on alone—a decision which now has the backing of Premier Stalin.

It was voiced to Parliament and to the world the following day, by quarters of overseas army moved to the battle zone where the Nazis and Germans actually were invading the south. Only Churchill's statement from his Mansion House for the first time since it was established in the early summer and a few hours after the general staff had moved troops and troops captured the old headquarters.

Quick Thinking Save O.C.

Alert thinking by Capt. Viscount Duncannon in checking a message apparently from Major-Gen. Sir Bernard Brooke, the Commander in Chief, saved Montgomery-Massingberd's capture. The message, later proved to have been from an "enemy source," warned Brooke that Montgomery-Massingberd was to be Naughton to a rendezvous held by 500 parachute troopers.

Only a small number of troops carrying tommy guns were sent in order to test the physical condition of the men and movement without motor vehicles. Within a few days the Infantry advanced most of the way from Alexandria to Cairo, a total of 130 miles in 2 1-2 days, fighting all the way against the "first battle" of forward columns of the invaders.

In an interview with the press correspondents, the commander of the army which included the Canadian troops said:

"I think the Canadians did extremely well. They were magnificent troops and showed good training. They had the spirit which will come. I think they will be dealt with roughly and quickly".

Spectacular Action

On the afternoon of the first day the 1st Division under Maj.-Gen. G. R. Pearkes ran into a spectacular action with the 22nd British Guards' Brigade on the Mediterranean side just below Sidiward London.

The Canadians occupied a town and a New Brunswick Infantry Regiment opened a counter-attack for the purpose of taking it. Armored with Tommy guns, rifles and other small arms, the Canucks stormed through narrow streets, crept to roof tops to dislodge snipers and for hours the close-in street fight raged with a heavy blank fire blazing from houses, shops and intersections.

The Guards put up a stubborn fight and held the invaders against more attacks by western regiments. Finally a Central Ontario Regiment threw out the invaders and speeded the way to the south.

In the meantime a provost company made up entirely of Royal Canadian Mounted Police fell into a battle the Guards "got them man"—90 Mounties and their motorcycles being taken prisoner.

The whole Canadian 2nd Division was cut up by air-borne troops. All of the Division's troop-carrying vehicles were capture, so the men had to move on foot nearly 50 miles by forced marches.

By the second night the Canadians were the subject after the main attack and swarmed up the escarpment to the top of the downs and then lunged forward to Sidi-el-A. Western Brigade led the 1st Division and an Armored Brigade was at the head of Maj.-Gen. Victor Odlum's 2nd Division.

British tanks were supported by the Canadian Division in the coast, the enemy was driven to the beaches and the invaders' last stand a mile from the street. Every man fought desperately hundreds of Bren-gun carriers and a number of tanks lay stave off defeat. But R.C.A.F. and R.A.F. planes bombed these columns.

Canadian Corps Takes Part In Great Mimic Invasion Battle

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press War Correspondent

Somewhere on the English Channel Coast, June 18 (CP Cable)—Fighting an enormous mimic battle in which 100,000 troops, hundreds of tanks and 10 squadrons of aircraft were used, the Canadian Corps, with British armored and infantry divisions, attacked to the Channel over the rolling south downs to crush hordes of invaders played by powerful British forces.

For three days all Sussex and West Kent have been a battle area, for this anti-invasion tryout was the largest, most realistic, and toughest in which the Canadians ever have engaged in their long series of training exercises.

Formidable formations of tommies, representing parachute troops and air-borne divisions, harassed the defenders of Britain and strove to cripple the decisive Canadian counter-attack. Both Canadian divisions were in the field together for the first time under Lt.-Gen. H. D. G. McNaughton's command, supported by a Royal Canadian Air Force army co-operation squadron.

After faltering at the start, the Canadians hit their stride to retrieve the loss and rapidly captured one key town after another with violent fighting tactics. The Home Guard was called out and aided the Canadian attack.

Another Resistance

An encarpment 10 miles from the coast was stormed the second night. Sweeping over the downs with a British armored division and close support bombers of the R.C.A.F. and R.A.F., the Canadians and British infantry brigade smothered final resistance in hot battle on the Sussex coast.

Hundreds of fifth column and trickery were used all over the battle area. Parachute troops sprang up behind the lines. Motorcycle troops, disguised as dutch riders captured, and ingenious methods were used to create all the confusion of actual battle. Fifth columnists were busy everywhere as overseas army moved to the battle zone where the Nazis and Germans actually were invading the south. Only Churchill knows the reasons for this Mansion House for the first time since it was established in the early summer and a few hours after the general staff had moved troops and troops captured the old headquarters.

THE WAR TODAY

By DON GILBERT
Canadian Press Staff Writer.

The most important science of in war has again been illustrated by the Air Marshal Dowding case, but for a new British device, the Germans might have won the battle of Britain might have been lost."

Now Britain is developing a method of electricians and technicians by-inclined recruits to learn industry and maintain the new instrument so that night fighters can be directed to the exact spot over the coast, to the beaches and the invaders' last stand a mile from the street. Every man fought desperately hundreds of Bren-gun carriers and a number of tanks to stave off defeat. But R.C.A.F. and R.A.F. planes bombed these columns.

NAZIS ARE ANGRY OVER THE CLOSING OF CONSULATES

Sharp Protest Forwarded to Washington on Action Is Called Despotic

TEXT NOT GIVEN

Berlin, June 18.—(AP)—Political tension between the United States and Germany increased today as it was today when Germany answered an American action in the closing of Nazi consulates in the United States with a similar move in Germany.

Text of the protest note was not revealed nor would authorities comment on the statement sent by the government to Washington.

A communique announcing the action was issued last night and came as surprise because throughout the day no spokesman on the matter was being most carefully guarded and no statement would not be forced into hasty decisions.

The communique declared that the N.B., German propaganda and news agencies.

"The North American government in a note on June 17 informed the German Charge D'Affaires to direct German consular officials and their staffs to evacuate as well as members of the German Consulate General in New York, Ocean Agency and the Railway Mission in the United States.

The basis given for the request was that the Invited German officials had conducted themselves in a "manner incompatible" with their official positions. The Reich's government has rejected categorically this despotic and despotic and made the sharpest protest against the United American government's action which is a violation of agreement."

The Nazi protest came close on the heels of a state department statement that Germany had taken necessary steps to counter United States action in freezing German funds.

Newspapers as late as this morning had not received instructions for the text of the communique, publishing only the official announcement.

PRIME MINISTER

In his first public appearance in the United States since the outbreak of war, Mr. King declared Canada went to war because "we saw clearly that Canada's freedom, that North American freedom, was one with British freedom."

At the same time he replied to criticism which, he said, "been heard occasionally in the United States that Canada is demanding cash from Britain for material aid. That charge, he said, is false because it overlooks the fact that Canada's direct war effort is being financed by herself and also in addition to huge credits advanced to cover British purchases in Canada.

"We have told Britain," he went on, "not to worry about her shortage of Canadian money—that with the enemy at her gates and approaching our shores, there will be time enough to reckon costs and credits once we all know that the world is to be free, not slave."

Tire President Head

Leighton G. McCarthy, Canadian Minister to the United States, presided at the dinner and among the guests was Henry A. Wallace, the American Vice-President.

In a pointed and obvious reference to Senator Gerald Nye and Senator Burton Wheeler, the original authors of the charge that Canada is demanding cash from Britain while the United States is lending or leasing war supplies, Mr. Wallace presides over the Senate, said he never had heard American critics of Canada until he assumed his present office.

Saying that Canadians are guardians of one of the areas through which an attack on the western hemisphere may come, Wallace declared that he thought Mr. King "should have another degree, that of cash and carry, in charge of the bridge, for that is what you represent to us".

Receives Honorary Degree

During the day, Mr. King received from Princeton University the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws. Speaking on the Labrie Service Roll Hall, he declared that Canada and the United States must "forever walk together as the best of good neighbors, for "between you and us there is a community of thought, ideal and purpose".

Princeton also conferred an honorary degree of Doctor of Laws upon Princess Juliana of the Netherlands. The Princess spoke on the friendship between the Netherlands and the United States.

Before the Associated Canadian organizations, Mr. King said the Canadian people entered the war as a free people and today they are united in prosecuting it to the limit of their resources.

Believe Details to be Right

"Our people," he said, "went to war for the sake of Canada, but not for Canada alone. We went to war as well for the sake of Britain, for North American civilization, which we are resolved to defend and for the sake of that humanity which is above them all."

"We clearly saw that Canadian freedom, that North American freedom was one with British freedom.

"We went to war at Britain's side because we believed hers to be the right side. I do not hesitate to say that Britain or no Britain, Canada would have entered the war if, at the outset, our country had not seen this issue clearly for itself and believed it to be what all free people know it to be today."

Canada, he emphasized, is a united nation now — "don't let anyone dare to tell you that French-Canada is not united on the side of freedom in this war.

"Citizens of the children of New France and their English-speaking brothers which fashioned the Canadian nation remained unbroken and will always so remain."

New Super Bomber Under Construction

New York, June 18 —(AP)— The United States Army Air Corps has a new "super-bomber" in initial construction stages, the New York Herald Tribune reported today.

The plane was reported to combine the 200-mile maximum speed of the recently completed Douglas B-19 with the 300-mile hourly speed of the speedy four-engined planes, the story said.

The report declared the army already has conceded that the giant B-19 is outmoded, because its top speed of 212 miles an hour would not meet modern war's requirements.

FORD HANDS OVER YACHT

Detroit, June 18 (AP)—Henry Ford presented the United States Navy Tuesday with the 137-foot yacht Truant, which is equipped with a powerful steam engine designed by the motor car company founder. The vessel was built for service as a patrol craft in the First Great War and was used in the Atlantic Coast in 1918. It later served as a training ship for the Naval Reserve.

Picton and District
County Council Sets Tax Rate Of 9½ Mills at First Session

Picton, June 18—The tax rate for Prince Edward County was set at 9 1-4 mills at the first session of County Council. The rate last year was 7 1-2 mills and while this seems a considerable increase, such is not the case. Since the last levy the assessment of the municipalities has been lowered from 15 mills to 13 mills. The higher levy results but raises less than the levy of last year.

The 1940 rate of 7 1-2 mills on 15 million dollar assessment raised $112,500.00, whereas the 1941 rate of 9 1-4 mills on a 13 million dollar assessment will raise $111,000.00.

Expenditures in 1940 were $107,723 with those estimated for this year being $108,947. Last year, for the first time in some years, there was a surplus, amounting to $3,700. Several previous councils had believed for enough and used up a surplus of $4,000.

Council heard a delegation from Wampoos regarding the ferry connecting the mainland and the island. Council agreed to spend $400 on the ferry.

Sessions of council are continuing.

Cheese Production Up

Prince Edward County farmers have set an excellent example to the rest of the province by greatly increasing the manufacture of cheese in order that the quota for Canada's needs is supplied.

In this county 411,666 pounds of cheese were manufactured up to the end of May, compared with 249,024 pounds in the same period last year. This represents an increase of 162,642 pounds cheese.

This record is especially notable since cheese production in Ontario is 331,246 pounds less up to the end of May, 1941, compared to the same period last year.

Farmers have taken up the recommendation of the Federation of Agriculture to make possible greater production of cheese and are doing their bit toward the war effort. Victory Loan advertising and sales sources to the cheese factories and as well efforts are being made to increase milk production through better feeding and handling of the milk.

The weather at the present time is very favorable for the dairy farmer who is trying to do his best.

Even the Germans in U. S. Showed No Desire to Use Nazi News Service

New York, June 18 (AP)—The New York Herald Tribune printed today a letter it said Dr. Manfred Zapp, director of the Transocean News Service, wrote to the German Foreign Office, describing his efforts to induce the American press to accept reports of the German News Agency and complaining that his difficulties were "enough to drive one to desperation."

The Transocean News Service, German agency, was ordered closed yesterday in the Presidential order directing the German Embassy to close Consulates and other German agencies. Zapp has been detained at Ellis Island since May 7 on a federal indictment charging violation of the Act requiring registration of all agents of foreign principals.

The letter, dated Oct. 17, 1939, and addressed to Guenther Altenburg of the Foreign Office in Berlin, was among documents held by the Dies Congressional Committee investigating un-American activities.

"I offered this Transocean News to the American press only to meet with the stiffest resistance everywhere," the letter said. "Better than any other press in the world the American press is informed of foreign political affairs in Europe through its own regular correspondents, as well as through the well-known large news agencies.

"Americans hold the peculiar subjective notion that only they are objective and consequently they will not read news that does not suit under their own flag. They are avid for news but it must come from American sources."

According to the letter Zapp said he experienced almost no success in selling Transocean News even in German circles in this country and added: "If German circles show so little intelligence, what can you expect of Americans."

"Lady Eve," starring Barbara Stanwyck and Henry Fonda, comes to the screen of the Belle Theatre today, Thursday and Friday. The film, told directed by Preston Sturges, who has flashed across the Hollywood sky like a brilliant rocket in the past year, is a sample promise that the new picture is lively, witty entertainment.

Sturges, you will remember, is the writer-director who brought to the screen those two bright comedy gems of last year, "Sullivan's Travels" and has stirred even more comment than the previous two film efforts, both regarded as unusually brilliant comedies.

Changing his pace for this picture from the grimly realistic roles he has been playing for the past three years, Fonda is seen in "The Lady Eve" as a native rich young man who falls for a beautiful girl, but who is unaware that she learns she's a cardsharp. She manoeuvres later as a titled English woman, "The Lady Eve," and succeeds in making him fall in love with her all over again. Of course, Fonda doesn't know that the cardsharp and "The Lady Eve" are one and the same program.

Featured in the impressive cast of the latest Sturges picture are Charles Coburn, Eugene Pallette, William Demarest, Eric Blore, Martha O'Driscoll and Luis Alberni, in addition to many other well-known film players.

"Raggedy Ann-tics," an exceptional multiple-tinted color fun cartoon, and the Belle News of the Day complete the program.

That Body Of Yours

Jeanne W. Barton, M.D.

You Do Not Have to Be Fat Because Your Parents were Fat

I have a friend of my own height who, some years ago, weighed over forty pounds more than I did. He began to put on weight and within a few years he weighed 40 pounds more than I did. I suggested that as he was now greatly overweight he would be wise to get rid of some excess weight.

"Oh, well, I was expecting it. My father and mother were fat and became stout just at my age-forty."

I pointed out to him that his father got stout at forty because he worked less and ate more just as he was doing now. That if the tendency to excess weight were inherited, he would have put on weight when he was born or when he was at or approaching middle age.

What about heredity and overweight? There is no question but that the tendency to overweight really runs in some families. There is also no question but that certain habits—leisureliness, avoidance of work or exercise, and indulgence in the starchy foods—also runs in some families. However, when we say "tendency to overweight is inherited, it shows itself, as mentioned above, at a fairly early age, perhaps at birth or infancy, and very often between that is 12 to 14 in girls and 14 to 16 in boys. This tendency is more marked in girls and women than in boys and men. Women have even more marked in women than in men as they grow older, until, at and slightly after middle age, the tendency to put on excess fat on to overweight men is about 30 to 1.

Further, the tendency to put on excess weight comes on earlier by women than men. In the early thirties in women and the early forties in men.

The point, then, is that if you were not fat at birth or infancy or in your teens, you have not necessarily have to put on weight at middle age because one or both of your parents became overweight at that time. Far from that, 90 per cent because overweight was most likely because of lack of early habits of exercise, of eating enjoyable foods, and liquids if you find you are putting on excess weight.

Are You Getting Enough Sleep?

When you read that Thomas Edison kept well with four hours sleep a night, or that Napoleon or Wellington or Frederick the Great got along with six hours, or that Winston Churchill gets along with much less than eight hours, you may be inclined to think that you, too, can get along with seven, whereas if you resemble your father and mother you required eight hours, you are likely to need nine also although you may be over-sensitive to this rule.

Further, there are degrees of sleep and one can sleep "heavy" for seven hours may be getting more benefit than one who sleeps "light" for nine hours.

Some people find it hard to "get off to sleep", tossing about for an hour, while others seem to fall off to sleep as soon as their head touches the pillow. "Research workers tell us that it takes the average person to get off to sleep in twenty minutes.

Experiments show that if we can get our mind off things (thank), and cut off outside influences such as light and sound, sleep will come more quickly.

How are you to know whether you are getting sufficient sleep? Nathaniel Kleitman, University of Chicago, says that if you awaken refreshed, states that the outstanding effect of a lack of sleep is a feeling of a portion of the brain resulting in making a good natured person irritable and angry. Slight injuries become more painful, and there is a loss of interest, satisfactory work with the usual degree of speed and correctness.

In general, individuals deprived of sleep for short periods of time are not affected to any real extent as to heart rate, blood pressure, rate at which body processes work, appetite and richness of the blood.

Before blaming your day time tiredness or sleeplines to need for more sleep, make sure that no infection is present by consulting your physician and dentist.

Sometimes you can lower the tone of the whole body.

RUSSIA SEEN AS NEXT OBJECTIVE OF NAZI BLITZ

'HEAVY ATTACK' MADE ON BREMEN, BREST BY RAF

Demands on Russia For Oil and Grain May Cause Break

Pact Signed Yesterday by Nazis With Turkey Gives Them Strong Position

RUMORS OF ATTACK

London, June 19.—(CP)—The German-Turkish accord was interpreted in informed quarters today as virtually an infallible portent of a tremendous new Nazi military stroke, but the question remained of whether it would be aimed at Soviet Russia or Suez.

These sources asserted that the pact fits well into the now familiar German practice of isolating intended victims by cajolery or by threats against their neighbors.

"By the conquest of Crete, occupation of the Aegean Islands and domination of the frontier of Turkish Thrace, Hitler has been in a position to enforce the original heavy demands made on the Turks", these sources said.

Hitler Impatient?

"But Turkey would have chosen to fight instead and, despite the country's lack of equipment, that would have been a bitter campaign. Evidently Hitler was impatient to get any kind of an understanding so he could proceed to quick action elsewhere. Turkey believed he would be free at some later date really to make Turkey come to terms".

These sources declared that "perhaps the greatest potential menace" was Turkey's agreement to control her press and radio, both of which have been friendly to Britain and hostile toward the Axis. Ourtsider was expressed as to how they would be able now to maintain friendly relations with both sides.

The new stroke added fuel to reports of a a German-Soviet crisis and even gave rise to entirely unconfirmed rumors that Nazi troops had attacked the Soviet frontier.

Informed British circles agreed all signs pointed to the possibility of an open break between Berlin and Moscow and that the friendship treaty which Germany concluded yesterday with Turkey had placed Hitler in a powerful position to enforce his will on Russia.

They regarded with skepticism, however, roundabout reports from Turkey that Germany or Rumania had served an ultimatum upon Russia and that Nazi troops had fallen upon the Soviet border at 24 points.

Whatever the basis for the rumors, it was considered here that there was no foundation for the belief that Hitler is steadily applying pressure to Russia to gain economic concessions to help Germany's war plans.

Dispatches from Ankara claimed Nazi air squadrons along the Rumanian-Russian frontier had been heavily reinforced and Nazi circles in the Turkish capital were reported as saying that "all signs point to war with Russia." That talk might well be merely Nazi propaganda.

Buy Bonds Now, Do Not Wait To be Canvassed

The Victory Loan drive must definitely close at midnight on Saturday, June 21st, after which no loans either large or small will be received in accordance with the prospectus. There are only three days left. The danger of failure of the loan will be decided in these days. Success requires substantial oversubscription by the general public. The public in order to facilitate the efforts of canvassers and officials, and to ensure his subscription to the Loan should not wait to be canvassed. Go to your bank or to the local loan headquarters at once, or make application by letter, if necessary before midnight, Saturday. People who can and don't do their bit in the supreme hour of peril and uncertainty will surely regret it in the hour of victory.

Procrastination is the thief of time. Procrastination now is disaster. People who intend to be loan and have not as yet done so, should not put the matter off any longer. Next Monday will be too late. Good intentions, we are sorry, are bad. Dollars are needed, not promises. Go, NOW, to your bank or loan official and fill in that application. If Victory is to be assured prompt and active action is imperative. DO IT NOW.

Believed Allies Launch Attack On Damascus

Vichy Officials Apparently Have Rejected British Demand For Surrender

3 SIDES THREATENED

London, June 19.—(CP)—An authoritative source said today the British ultimatum demanding the surrender of Damascus had been received by the commander and expressed belief that Allied forces already had launched a direct attack upon the city.

Reuters news agency earlier had reported that Gen. Sir Maitland Wilson, the British commander, had broadcast from Jerusalem an ultimatum calling upon the Vichy forces to surrender by 5.30 a.m.

At noon there was no indication here that the ultimatum had been complied with.

Dispatches from the Middle East previously had indicated that Damascus was encircled by Allied forces.

A military spokesman at Jerusalem reported "a good deal of opposition" by defenders of the city and British, Free French and Indian troops closed in from the west, south and southeast.

Closest to the city last night was a column which occupied Mezze, a western suburb three and one-half miles from Damascus.

Continuous pressure also was being exerted along the front southeast of the capital at Jebel El Kelh — Hill of the Dog—the spokesman said.

Heavy Counter Attacks

Vichy broadcasts from Beirut,Syria in the central sector about 40 miles southeast of Damascus were under heavy counterattacks and the British advance apparently had halted. Allies were "meeting with some success" but there was no word of the capture of the important road junction.

Communications on the railroad line from the trans-Jordan border to Kiswe, 20 miles to the south, were reopened with the recapture Tuesday of the station, Vichy announced, and raiding Vichy parties were driven off. Elsewhere, a patrol action well behind the general Allied front was reported.

On the coastal sector, advance Australian troops were reported by Vichy to have reached village of Damascus, 13 miles south of Beirut, capital of Syria. A parallel column supporting the Australian flank in the hills 10 miles east has captured several tanks and many Vichy infantrymen, a communique from Jerusalem added.

Maj. Gen. Ali Jamer, former Syrian Prime Minister, was reported to have joined the ranks of Free Frenchmen, Vichy said in the struggle "avoid bloodshed and destruction and protect the interests of the people."

Huge Shipbuilding Plan on G. Lakes Considered by U.S. Maritime Board

Washington, June 19 (AP)—The United States Maritime Commission is considering development of a huge shipbuilding program on the Great Lakes.

Officials said today they hoped to overcome obstacles to such a program which would be designed to assure production of ocean-going vessels in large numbers for defence purposes.

Details are being worked out at conferences with ship-building interests who have suggested that extensive construction on the Great Lakes waterways is feasible.

Officials, studying reports from builders, said further discussions would be held and did not estimate the number of ships that might be built.

Meanwhile, experts said they are trying to solve the problem of how lake-built boats of customary dimensions could be moved into the Atlantic.

At present, the St. Lawrence Canal system will not accommodate ships of the size normally used in trans-ocean service; but officials suggested it was possible for shorter and smaller ones to navigate on the sea.

Others considered also the possibility that one or two of the canals could be enlarged to accommodate larger ships. It was said that usually vessels were not adapted to any kind of sea service needed. It was recalled that during the First Great War large numbers of big ships were built on the Great Lakes and moved through the canals in sections.

Hitler Neutralizes Turkey With Non-Aggression and Mutual Consultation Pact

Accord Protects German Flank in Event of Russian-German Conflict

SIGNED WEDNESDAY

By EDWIN SHANKE
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Berlin, June 19 (AP)—Hitler in the view of the neutralized Turkey by obtaining a 10-year non-aggression and Mutual Consultation Pact.

The treaty became effective when signed last night in Ankara by Franz Von Papen, the German ambassador, and Foreign Minister Sukru Saracoglu.

(Ankara dispatches said the accord in effect protects the German flank in the event of a Russian-German conflict and was reached with the full knowledge of the British and United States ambassadors, who conferred with Saracoglu.)

(Informed quarters in London, who were apprised in advance of the pact, interpreted it as an effort to be realized from increasing tension between Berlin and Moscow.)

The ratification documents are to be exchanged in Berlin as soon as possible. The pact bound the two countries to respect each other's territorial integrity, "not to undertake any measures aimed either directly or indirectly at the other treaty partner," and to settle any differences that arise by inflicting the two countries through consultation.

Coupled with it were two protocols bearing upon Germany's trade and improvement of press and radio relations. The former one was especially welcome in Berlin because Turkish newspapers have been under the agitation of the Allies.

The treaty was compared to the German pact with Russia which preceded the outbreak of war by Nazi spokesmen who claimed it would influence the course of the war just as decisively.

It was interpreted here as giving Germany a flexible hand wherever operations may become necessary in the East.

A spokesman said he did not know whether there would advance notice of the negotiations.

(The Turkish Foreign Minister declared that the pact was "other" actual and existing obligations of the two countries with Great Britain. Beside having an agreement with Russia, Britain has a non-aggression ally of Britain.

Orthodox pact with Ankara stands," the newspaper Hamburger Prenndenblatt asserted. "However, it is self-understood that agreement is no longer can be turned against Germany.")

Turkey's pact is directed entire from pages to the event and emphasized that Turkey held the "geopolitical key to protection to the exit from the Black Sea and at the gates of the Middle East."

AUSSIES PREPARE WAY TO BEIRUT

Advance Forces Drive Up Coastal Road to Within Sight of Lebanon Capital

By EDWARD KENNEDY
Associated Press Staff Writer

With Allied forces outside Beirut, Lebanon, capital of Vichy Syria, Australian troops, despite concerted fire in coastal sector, kept attack by Vichy forces in the Litani Valley 30 miles inland, have driven up the coastal road to Beirut, capital of Lebanon, to positions from which they can fire shells into the city jutting out to sea on its promontory.

These advance units were charged with clearing the way for artillery and tanks which are rolling up for the assault on Beirut. Besides, Australians have been harassing defensive positions of Vichy forces between the coast and Beirut, the capital.

Behind this attacking column, Sidon,-famed Biblical city, is reported in possession after going through five days of battle during which time one of the Australians passed a large part of the time under heavy artillery fire. Many Sidon citizens were reported killed and a few houses were damaged during the battle.

Statement on Hess Refused as Not Being In Public Interest

London, June 19 —(CP)— Lord parliamentary pressure on the government for a statement on the Rudolf Hess affair resulted today in a declaration by Richard Butler, Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs, that such a statement was not regarded "as being in the public interest."

Mr. Butler said that rumors that Hess was held at Chequers, the country home of Britain's Prime Minister were nonsense.

Mr. Butler asserted the government position that Hess "is being treated as an officer and kept in detention as a prisoner of war."

Workers in Belgium Strike for Pay and Larger Rations

London, June 19 —(CP)— A Belgian news agency report asserted today that 120,000 workers in German-occupied Belgium are striking for additional rations and a 25 per cent wage increase. The strike started with a walkout of Ghent street railway employees and has spread to textile workers at Verviers, the agency said.

BRITAIN ASKED FOR SAFE CONDUCT OF OUSTED NAZIS

U.S. Believes Nazi Officials Should be Sent Direct to Germany

REJECT PROTEST

By LLOYD LEHRBAS
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Washington, June 19 (AP)—The United States has asked Great Britain to assume "safe conduct" through the blockade of Nazi officials and officials in the U.S., it was learned authoritatively today, in the belief that in carrying out President Roosevelt's order that Nazis be deported, because of acts "inimical to the welfare of this country."

The obligations, as well as the interests of the U.S. are that the Nazis be given safe and direct passage to their homes, it was explained and not be permitted to interfere with their operations to Latin American countries where they maintained activities already exist.

Asked whether any action would be taken to prevent the ousted officials from going to other American republics, Secretary Hull replied that any movement would be in a direct return to their homeland.

Prof. Ralph W. Gerard, of the State Department's action in undertaking to arrange for "safe conduct" through the British blockade was described in informed quarters as presaging a full rejection of the German Government's appeal against the White House order.

Welles provided a broad hint yesterday that the ousted envoys would be rejected when he said he had received no instructions for the Nazi envoy, it would be given consideration.

At the same time the Undersecretary disclosed that arrangements were under way for the safe departure of an estimated 125 Consular officers and employees in 34 American cities on the ground they were being subjected to espionage outside the scope of their legitimate duties and improper and unwarranted character.

Meanwhile, the United States has notified the other American Governments of the expulsion order, Welles said, thus giving notice of applying a Pan-American resolution originating at the conference to prevent activities of foreign agents which endanger the peace and democratic traditions of America."

RESISTS DEMAND FOR OPEN DEBATE UPON SHIPPING

Mr. Churchill Does Not Feel Justice Can be Done Topic by Public Discussion

RVIEW AT EARLY DATE

London, June 19 (CP)—Prime Minister Churchill resisted demands today in the House of Commons for public debate on the gravity of the shipping situation by declaring it was impossible to state the government's position "except under the protection of the secret session."

Announcing that the governments of the U.S. and Britain had "an Atlantic at an early date, he said:

"It would be folly for us to expose to conduct discussions on these most grave matters with every word quickly known to the enemy. No justice could be done to the arguments in any other circumstances."

Hess-Belisha Asks Reconsideration

Leslie Hore-Belisha, former War Secretary, refused permission in asking the Prime Minister to reconsider, mentioning "the effect on morale of the United States when we began to publish our shipping losses on a monthly instead of a weekly basis."

Mr. Hore-Belisha said "it is most important to get the full bi-oceanic effect of public opinion in the United States in order to get further help from that country, if possible in convoying."

He asked, in view of President Roosevelt's statement that 1,000 ships were the capacity of British yards to replace them, "is it not obvious that the British losses (the facts) with candor and resolution?"

Winston Churchill, Labor, also appealed the decision, saying:

"Many conflicting and indeed alarming statements have been made by responsible statesmen — President Roosevelt, for example, the First Lord of the Admiralty and

Ottawa, June 19 (CP)—Total subscriptions to the Victory Loan now stand at $586,700,600, boosted by a $20,000,000 order from the Sun Life Assurance Company, it was announced today.

Yesterday afternoon, British Empire and Commonwealth Air Chief Sir Edward Beatty and Sir Vincent Massey, High Commissioner to Canada, who have been in Britain since the start of the war, arrived at Ottawa airport.

Yesterday afternoon, British bombers and fighters struck at Dover in large numbers and blasts from the French coast as the R.A.F. reported bombs on potential "invasion bases" shook houses on the English shore. Nazi radio stations were heard.

The Air Ministry News Service raised from 13 to 16 the number of German fighters destroyed Tuesday in the R.A.F. battle, while explaining it was "necessary to make a further adjustment in squadrons to obtain the final result in enemy losses."

U.S. Invited to Contribute Volunteers To Help Man 'Radiolocator' Device

Washington, June 19 (AP)—The United States, credited with possessing aircraft detection apparatus superior to any other, has been invited today to contribute volunteers to help Britain's latest "radiolocator" device.

Known as the apparatus, according to Brig.-Gen. George V. Strong, former chief of war plans, apparently is the most powerful and similar equipment available to any of the belligerents engaged. The aircraft spotting devices adopted by the United States, he said, "must have been told, are effective at well over 100 miles, piercing fog and darkness to give defending fighters at least 15 minutes warning of the approach of hostile aircraft.

With such devices already in large-scale production, the War Department has started construction of a string of fixed and mobile warning stations in both the United States and defence outposts.

First deliveries were scheduled to the Navy this summer of a new super-sensitive apparatus to enable ships of the fleet to detect the presence of enemy submarines or enemy surface ships even when they are far out of sight over the horizon.

The details of the British device, which has played a prominent role in discouraging Nazi raids on Britain, have been turned over to the United States long since. American technical and military experts have made reciprocal contributions.

Information on the use of the British drive to enlist "at least" 13,000 skilled American civilians for a technical corps, Air Commodore George C. Pirie, Air Attache at the British Embassy, yesterday divulged some of the details of the weapon against modern warfare.

German Military Camp in Occupied France Heavily Attacked and Many Houses Destroyed

3 SHIPS ATTACKED

London, June 19 (CP)—The Royal Air Force started large fires at Bremen and exploded heavy bombs across the docks of the German-occupied port of Brest in vigorous overnight raids, the Air Ministry News Service announced today.

The regular Air Ministry communique described the Bremen attack as "heavy." A number of bombs also fell on the Northwest Germany also were attacked.

"Bremen in particular was subjected to a heavy attack as also were docks at Brest," the communique stated. "One of the German warships still are lying," the Air Ministry said.

The warships previously were reported to be the battleships Gneisenau and Scharnhorst and a cruiser which probably is the 10,000-ton Prinz Eugen which escaped Royal Navy pursuit when the Nazi battleship Bismarck was sunk. It is believed that the Gneisenau and Scharnhorst have been struck at many times by British airmen but they are tunable to leave Brest for another haven.

Night Straight Raids

It was the fifth consecutive night in which the R.A.F. blasted at targets in Germany and along the Nazi-occupied coasts of the English Channel.

The Air Ministry said a German military camp in the Nord area was the target of the initial assault, which was accompanied by brisk fighting in which two Nazi machines fell and the R.A.F. four. Several houses, including those in the camp were destroyed.

Then a small number of German aircraft ventured over British during the night. Bombs were dropped on the Pembroke coast in Wales and at one point in the Midlands.

The British casualty was slight and no casualties have been reported in East Anglia and Kent.

Yesterday afternoon, British fighters and bombers struck at Dover in large numbers and blasts from the French coast as the R.A.F. reported bombs on potential "invasion bases" shook houses on the English shore. Nazi radio stations were heard.

The Air Ministry News Service raised from 13 to 16 the number of German fighters destroyed Tuesday in the R.A.F. battle, while explaining it was "necessary to make a further adjustment in squadrons to obtain the final result in enemy losses."

U. S. NAVY ISSUES STAND BY ORDERS TO RESERVISTS

Also Launches Recruiting Drive to Assure Adequate Strength

Washington, June 19 — (AP) — The United States Navy announced today that orders to recall its remaining reservists yesterday and launched an intensive recruiting drive to assure adequate man power for the expanding sea forces.

Officers were also called to active duty include 8,564 officers and 4,000 enlisted men.

Secretary Knox last week issued instructions that certain warrant reserve officers might now be ordered to active duty without their consent.

Since June 11 they were ordered out on a voluntary basis.

The new recruiting campaign will seek approximately 11,000 men a month, instead of the present quota of 4,000.

The navy's present strength is 160,000 officers and men and the demand for trained man power has increased greatly since 100 warships were commissioned, crews increased and the naval reserve added to the naval forces.

Capt. Abel T. Bidwell, assistant chief of the Bureau of Navigation, told reporters "we think we can get the men we need by volunteering on the selective service for reservists."

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

PARKING LINES MARKED ON STREET

Acting on a recent by-law passed by the City Council, employees of the Department of Public Works, under the direction of acting city engineer Clifford Mathews, began painting parallel parking lines on the west side of Front Street this morning. This is the second time within recent years that the parallel parking system has been adopted for Front Street, although council only went half-way in their recent recommendation and parallel parking will be in effect only on the west side with the present angle parking to remain on the east side of the street.

Complaints that parking difficulties were increased, together with the very evident fact that more automobiles could be parked through use of angle parking, led to the parallel system being discontinued some years ago. The city engineer, acting upon the thought that a larger space was needed when parking parallel, has marked cross lines 18 1-2 feet apart, one foot longer than the distance permitted on the previous occasion when the system was in effect. An area reserved for each car then being 17 1-2 feet.

HASTINGS CHEESE PRODUCTION HIGHER

Total cheese production in Hastings County up to the end of May shows an increase of roughly 300,000 pounds, according to figures released today by Agricultural Representative H. J. Pair. The total for the month itself was 1,009,903 pounds as compared to 815,153 pounds manufactured in May, 1940. Total pounds manufactured in the county this year to the end of May amount to 1,201,861 as against 926,468 pounds for the corresponding period in 1940.

Production in the province, however, is behind that of a year ago for the end of the first two months. Totals for that period this year amount to 18,726,618 as against 18,030,850 pounds of a year ago.

SERGEANTS' MESS DONATES TROPHY

So important have the members of the Sergeants' Mess, Argyll Light Infantry (Tanks) with the splendid assistance of the Girl Cadettes of the Collegiate Institute that they have donated a silver cup for the best company at next year's inspection.

BERRIES AND PEAS SLIGHTLY LOWER

Strawberries dropped to a slightly lower price level on Thursday's market but were still about twice the season when two boxes for twenty-five cents was the common asked by the majority of vendors. A few vendors, however, were asking 30 cents per box, but nothing to bear, asked skraight fifteen cents per box and for the most part previous quotations held good for eleven cents per quart. Crate lots sold for eleven cents per box.

Fresh peas also declined considerably in price from previous quotations, with vendors asking 35c per quart or 20c per pint. Increased quantities of these two items were offered for sale, but the market was slow owing to buyers not turning out in the usual manner.

POLICE COURT

A lengthy docket of traffic cases was listed for trial before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., in the Division Court held at the City Court House this morning.

Fit-Rite Cleaners, E. G. White, of the R.C.A.F., was fined the minimum amount after pleading guilty to a charge of careless driving. A motorcycle Patrolman J. H. Hatch, who preferred the charge, stated that while a motor car driven by White had passed another car south of Belleville on Highway No. 2 on May 31st last, The higher motor car was badly wrecked during the collision," revealed the officer.

R. D. Arnott, K.C., who appeared for the accused man, told the court that Fit-Rite Cleaners, White's record in the Air Force had been free from crime and his conduct perfect. The minimum fine of $5.00 and costs was imposed.

Sergt. O. Allen, of the R.C.A.P., was fined $10 and costs after pleading guilty to a charge of the illegal possession of liquor. This man merely placed a couple of bottles of beer in a friend's automobile. The charge is not serious," commented Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., who prosecuted all cases today.

Motorcycle Patrolman H. R. McKellar asked that charges of careless driving and of failing to produce a driver's permit be withdrawn against T. R. Henderson of Quebec. "We have been unable to effect service of summonses sent to Quebec Province and the man is not residing in Montreal at this time," stated the officer. He added that Henderson had given a Toronto address at the time of his apprehension three weeks ago.

A Point Anne resident was assessed $5 and costs for failing to obtain his township dog licence.

Navy League to Hold Tag Day Under Auspices St. Julien Chapt.

The Ontario division of the Navy League of Canada is holding its tag day in the city on Saturday under the auspices of St. Julien Chapter, I.O.D.E.

Since the very first day of war the Navy League, which incidentally was able to supply several thousand three - quarter trained men for the Navy, Army and Air Force immediately through its sea cadet movement, maintained in peace as well as war, has been serving the men of the Royal Canadian Navy, the Canadian Merchant Service and the Royal Navy through its "comforts stations" or hostels at the principal ports of Canada where men, straight from the horrors of the sea, find rest and boredom of daily and nightly watches, the strain of being continually on the alert, on the defensive or offensive—do find recreational facilities, places to refreshen their bodies and refresh their minds. Places where woollen garments to offset exposure, cigarettes, playing cars, music, a friendly atmosphere, a welcoming place to meet one's friends, are available twenty-four hours a day. The men in the Navy League hostels as giants refreshed when leave expires. The personnel of our naval services according to the recent announcement of the Minister of Naval Affairs has grown to ten times its original size since the beginning of war. Last year the Canadian division of the Navy League sent out $100,000 worth of knitted goods and mailing bags to our naval men. This year the demand is so heavy that goods and parcels are being sent to them in three times the volume of last year's shipments. Belleville and district are asking for more of everything. The ladies are asking for money to enable the Navy League to carry on its glorious work and linking Belleville with the Empire's war effort. It is up to everyone to contribute to this worth-while organization next Saturday.

Sidney and Thurlow Townships Exceed Quota by Over $17,000

Adding momentum to the closing drive for the Victory Loan campaign in rent Victory Loan campaign, the Sidney and Thurlow Township sub-division of Hastings County has exceeded its objective by more than $17,000 to date. The nearby townships have subscribed thus far $1,584,000. Their objective is $1,567,000.

Meanwhile the mercury on the Loan thermometer is slowly nearing the objective of two million dollars. Today the amount subscribed to the city totals $1,584,000. Exclusive of today, but two days remain in which canvassers and the public can send the county over the top. Officials urged all to buy early as the last day is always a busy one for officials, approximately 3,411 orders have been placed in this campaign.

Subscriptions to the Victory Loan, to date subscribed approximately $1,600,000 of the objective. This amount, it is pointed out, is the objective of "special areas" officials, however, are confident that a large number of city residents who have not as yet purchased bonds will come in and assist in attaining the city's quota.

Foto-Note Winners Present in Theatre When Names Called

Both persons whose names were selected for the Foto Nite presentation at the Capitol Theatre last night were present when their names were announced and a total of $280.00 will be given to two Belleville residents on the theatre stage next Wednesday night.

Miss Amelia LaPalm, 126 South Church Street, heard her name announced for the larger sum of $750 while Mrs. Woodcock, 164 Pinnacle St., was present, when his name was called for the second otter of $200. Just exactly what to do with a large amount of money, really it's nothing, is the problem now facing Miss Palm as she was presented to Mr. Ross. Manager of the Capitol Theatre, following the selection. Miss LaPalm has been a regular weekly attendant at the Capitol Theatre since the Foto Nite programme was first started to help local friends afterwards.

"Now I'll be able to buy some Victory Loan bonds", was the only comment made by Mrs. Woodcock, who also showed outward signs of excitement upon the winning of the second amount. Both prizes, whose names were selected last night, will present themselves Wednesday night at Mr. Macaro on the Capitol Theatre stage on Wednesday night, when cheques for the above amounts will be presented them.

The first time the constabulary were called for public duty occurred on Victoria Day, when they assisted provincial police in patrolling the highways of the province.

Latta Defeated Cannifton 7-1

Continuing their undefeated run at the top of the Inter-Township Baseball League, Latta defeated Cannifton in the Cannifton park diamond by a decisive 7-1 score, the homesters getting to Orval May, Cannifton hurler, for eight hits, four for runs in the initial round and thereafter were never in danger.

"Doc" Empson, Latta's playing manager, elected to start Garfield Hall, his crack southpaw, and for the last year's champion nine and twelve sizzling innings were the witness of his choice as the Cannifton lads never really got going, their best work being in the second inning as the result of an error, after base on balls, a single and a safety. May, after being nicked for four runs in the first frame settled down to pitch good ball and limited the winners to one run per inning the balance of the route.

Clayton Hall returned to the game after an absence of a year or more, was the heavy hitter for Latta, leased clouting by Gowe, Marsh, Parks and Empson. Lorne Jarrell was the receiving catcher, hitter to connect safely.

Latta—Garfield Jarrell, Rus Collins, L. Jarrell, Bert Bleckman, V. Hall, J. Smallacon, J. May and O. May.

Latta—J. Marsh, J. Orr, J. Gowe, J. Empson, G. Wagar, O. Parks, Fred Wagar, O. Hall, G. Hall and Hart.

Score by innings:

Cannifton	000 001 0 — 1
Latta	400 012 x — 7

POLICE BLOTTER

City police were called to 217 Charles Street late last night to investigate a complaint that a prowler had been seen loitering about the premises of P.C. Thomson searched the premises and surrounding vicinity, but found no trace of marauders.

From its strategic position at the upper end of Front Street, a bicycle belonging to Ralph Bridge, Station Road, was taken last evening. Later police recovered the bike abandoned on West Moira Street and returned it to the owner

Accident Reported

Joseph Cordingley, Toronto transport driver, reported an accident to Sergeant Arthur Harman at the police station about midnight last night. Cordingley told the police he was proceeding easterly on Dundas Street and was passing a parked vehicle when a motor car, proceeding in the same direction, sideswiped his truck.

The front of the car stopped, but when I got out to investigate he drove away without leaving his name or address," Cordingley stated as he accused the driver of the other car of failing to remain at the scene of the accident. Little damage was done to the truck, however.

No arrests were necessary in the city during the past 24 hours, leaving the police block available for two lone straggling transients, who sought sleeping quarters there last night.

Captain Austin Walters Writes Descriptive Letter of Trip to Devon

The beauties of rural southern England, its traditions and historical highlights are graphically pictured in an interesting letter written by Captain Austin Walters, Canadian Army Medical Corps, to Mr. Jack Marsh, of this city.

Captain Walters describes a trip through Devon and Exeter in a colorful manner, bringing out the highlights of cities and towns steeped in historical lore.

Featuring the missive is the story of the town of Barnstaple, with a population of 26,000 which has a war industry of 7½ millions of dollars. In the recent War Weapons Week campaign, Barnstaple with an objective of $750,000, raised 1.14 million dollars—something indeed for Canadian communities to shoot at.

Captain Walters' letter follows:-

Tuesday 20-5-41

Dear Silm:

As I wrote in my last hurried note have just got back from a very nice leave spent in exploring the beauties of Devon. Ted and I couldn't get away at the same time so went with a chap from our mess by name of Farmer. He had never been in Devon before, altho' he was over with the Canadian Olympic hockey team in 1936. Never knew him before he came over here, but I had watched him play hockey for the McGill team in my interne days. We certainly had a grand time as Devon is very beautiful at this time of year. Travelled by all means of transportation, train, bus, train, bus and even afoot. Bus travelling in this country is much more fun and a much more pleasant than at home. The roads are more interesting and then you can get off wherever you please and stay as long as you wish.

We started off by going down to Arisham in Kent, staying around there for almost two days. Visited the fortune, my old classmate whom I had not seen for several years. You will remember that we used to give us many a Saturday afternoon's entertainment when he was quarterback of those good Queens' football teams that used to take them all in their stride. He's put on a little weight since then—now a captain in the R.C.A.M.C. Stationed mainly interesting because William of Orange came in for his landing place when he came to chase James II (his own father-in-law) out of England. Very little fish market in the town has a neat little statue to commemorate the landing of good old King Billy in 1688. Nowadays the harbor is full of fishing vessels supplying us with a good staple line of food—a great many of them Brixhams and in the other town boats just over a year ago. The whole coast is peaceful used to be a great vacation spot, and still shows quite a bit of life that way. We eventually went on heading south to Dartmouth, little place called Totnes which is one of the oldest towns in England. Its Lord Mayor takes precedence over the Lord Mayor of London in parade and ceremonies. There is a quaint guildhall there dating back to the thirteenth century which is still in use. Totnes was a very ancient mintage centre—saw some coins minted there in 978 A.D. Saw some old posters that were quite amusing announcing parades for coronations and jubilees.

One place I went to was Brixham. From everyone did. Their mother had gone to the station to see if anymore of her relatives had come in, and left them in charge of the maid. We had some chocolate left, and gave them that, and they finally climbed into bed satisfied, as long as we stayed to talk to them. Their mother came back shortly and told us about her troubles. Their home in Plymouth had been destroyed and she had brought the children to Exeter hoping it would be quiet. Poor kids. You know how children are usually such sound sleepers, but the bombs and sirens were so firmly fixed in their minds as one and the same thing that the siren alarm was enough to awaken them up like a conditioned reflex that sent them in fright to look for the first hole they could find, so just feel comfortable that all Canadian children haven't had to learn that meaning of fear.

We came part of the way home by private car along the south coast. The distant relative of Farmer's had to make the trip, so we had been lucky enough to arrive at the right time in Exeter. It gave us a good chance to see the coast defences at first hand. Certainly hope Hitler sends them over soon, as the reception will be more than hot. Incidentally for, It has been a monotonous war for the troops, but perhaps we shall have action soon. We'll have everything for now—no more leaves until the end of the summer, and of course the Germans may interfere with that one.

Yours,
Austin.

British Forces Suffer Small Losses in Sortie at Salum

London, June 19 (CP)—An authoritative source said today British North African forces had so little interference in their withdrawal to their original positions east of Salum that "it looks as if the enemy was hit so hard by his own bombs that he hasn't couldn't in this week's desert fighting.

Another source said the British forces "got away very lightly indeed" from their successful penetration deep into Axis-held territory and subsequent withdrawal.

He added that although no definite report showed that Axis forces had been reinforced since the new attack, all information tended to show they were deployed and it seemed "quite possible" the British forces forestalled some action by them.

Commenting on an Italian report that the Duke's forces used new tanks in the battle, this source said the actual number was "much less".

BRITAIN'S WEAPON AGAINST AIR RAIDS

Not a Hun can go into the sky in darkness or clouds but the R.A.F. knows he is there, thanks to the British secret weapon, the radio wave airplane locator. And knowing the Hun is there, the R.A.F. has a good chance of knocking him down.

This is one of the great inventions which Britain has perfected. She has others to her credit, but the locator is of the greatest importance in view of the possibilities of air raids.

British science has triumphed.

The device having been perfected, Britain calls for thousands of men and women to operate the instruments.

The instrument works. It helped to decide the Battle of Britain last autumn for the British people.

Of late there has been a lull in the intensity of Nazi raids, probably due to the losses which are inflicted on the Huns by means of this device.

The principle of the electric waves which signal the location is such as to be applicable to the detection of submarines.

What must be the reaction of the enemy to this inherent threat to their bombers and fighter planes and to their sea wolves, the U-boats, lurking for cargo ships, may be imagined.

MIND OF BRITISH HEALTHY

The healthy mind of the British people is proverbial. Yesterday fifty thousand people assembled at Newmarket for the annual Derby. They enjoyed the race, even as R.A.F. planes were flying overhead to drown the sound of hoofbeats from the track, which might be picked up by the enemy and might mean a possible strafing by the Huns. There was no visit by the enemy.

These sporting events are not rare. The only difference with the Derby and other events was that its crowd and the aerial patrol were so much larger.

The ability of the English people to enjoy the thrill of a horse race in time of war proves the equanimity and the sanity of these people. War does not make them forget the things with which they have long been associated.

The health of the mind and spirit as well as of the physique of the British people remains good. They are unconquerable.

U. S. CLOSES NAZI CONSULATES

Because German agencies in the United States, including German consular establishments have been taking part in "improper and unwarranted" activities, outside the scope of their duties, the United States Government has ordered the closing of the offices.

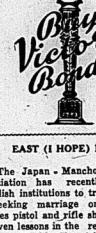
Here is seen the reaction of a free democratic state when the violent hand of Adolf Hitler has been interfering in the internal structure of the United States. The audacity of the Hun has everywhere been seen in many forms.

The Hun everywhere is callous to the rights of others and he thinks nothing of interfering. Actually he takes it as his duty to interfere in the affairs of peoples everywhere. What the Hun did in Norway in getting a Quisling to take up the Nazi cause, what the fifth column did in France and the Low Countries, is too well known.

It is on record in the United States before the entrance of that country into the World War that the German consular service in the United States was used as an instrument of sabotage, espionage and propaganda. The Times says that the Nazi Government is far more efficient than the Kaiser's Government in these matters and being essentially a conspiracy itself, it is adept in the use of conspiratorial methods.

"It has never hesitated to abuse the hospitality of nations with which it was theoretically at peace. It has prepared the ground for all its greatest victories by working in the dark to destroy morale, undermine resistance and organize fifth-column activities."

The United States is determined to protect itself against such tactics and the Times remarks, "The presumption is strong that they (the offices) will remain closed until they are reopened by the representatives of a different German Government."



EAST (I HOPE) IS EAST

—The Japan - Manchoukuo Women's Association has recently decided to establish institutions to train women who are seeking marriage on the continent. Besides pistol and rifle shooting they will be given lessons in the rearing of infants. —Japan Weekly Chronicle.

I am not what you would call a disapproving man;
Female customs I'm reluctant to disparage;
But it seems (do you not think?) that the women of Japan
Are trained a little bit too fine for marriage?

While the Oriental maiden ripens on the marriage tree
Those whose charge it is to teach her do not trifle;
For as well as infant-raising, she studies T.N.T.
—And can draw a bead on hubby with a rifle.

Now our wives in their arguments occasionally are Backed up by a rolling-pin or skillet,
But they're generally considered to have gone a shade too far
If they step up to their lesser-half and kill it.

Let's be thankful, fellow husbands, that the training of our wives
Isn't based on Short Lee—Enfields or on Mausers;
And that the only kinds of infantry to come into their lives
Are those that wear triangulated trousers.

—S.D.H.

George Beall of Detroit collects hot jazz. His record collection, one of the largest in America, includes many rare recordings.

Flora Ford of Chardon, O., collects epitaphs. Specializes in humorous lines from tombstones.

Joseph Sukey of Waltham, Mass., collects bayonets. Buys them at auctions. Prize is a two-pound bayonet with a 12-inch blade.

Walter Johnson of Cincinnati collects beetles. Has nearly 2,000 beetles, moths, and butterflies, including a baby dragonfly, black widow spider, rhinoceros beetle and Atlas moth.

Mrs. Ethel Spence of Jonesboro, Ark., collects buttons. Any and all kinds, which she sews on paper plates. During the last year she amassed 4,000 buttons, no two alike.

Ruth Carter of Washington, D.C., collects novelty pins. One made like an hour glass is designed to time kisses. Also has name pins, sailor pins and patriotic pins.

J. McLaughlin of Boston collects paper weights. Prize is tear-drop weight more than 100 years old. Has more than 200.

Sir John Dill Leads Britain's Army

(By W. J. Bentley)

Stupendous and brave actions by other military leaders have made us almost forget Dill. History is being written so swiftly now that memories are short. But the reason Dill has been touring a quarter of the globe by air is that he is the British chief of staff, the man who holds the highest military post at the War Office. His title is Chief of the Imperial General Staff, but in effect he is Commander-in-Chief of the British Army; and if you don't know how many men he now controls, well you can guess as well as Hitler!

He came and meet Dill in private life; you will be among the first to do so, for he has carefully avoided any and all publicity. Even a sermon will be preached by the Grand Chaplain, Rev. J. R. Craig.

Mrs. Caverly Nash will sing Harris' "Come Unto Me" at the morning service in Bridge Street Church on Sunday.

The steamer Nellie Cuthbert will take the members of the cricket club to Napanee tomorrow where the team will play a match with the team of that place.

FRIENDSHIP COURAGE

He never felt ashamed to say what many won't admit,
That he had been another's work and highly valued it.

He never thought it silly to speak out a word of cheer
While the one it might encourage was about where he could hear.

When we called him sentimental in reply he often said
He thought it rather futile sending roses to the dead;

And he thought it rather idle to be fond of someone near
And not say a word about it till you stood beside his bier. . .

He wondered how the notion ever struck the human mind
It was folly to be gracious and a friend to the living kind.

Why to dead men go the platitudes which the living are denied,
And why fondness for another is such a thing we ought to hide?

All I know is this about him:
Those he met along his way
Found encouragement and comfort in the things he chose to say.

For the proof they had his friendship they were never forced to seek Since he'd told them so in praises he was not afraid to speak.

MAN BITES DOG

Newspapermen are always delighted when they get a story or report that a man has bitten a dog. A dog bites a man, that is not news; but when a man bites a dog, that is news.

This epigram has become the proverbial answer to the age-old question: "What is news?"

It is generally supposed that this famous definition of news was originated about 1880 by Charles A. Dana, then editor of the New York Sun.

Some writers, however, attribute the epigram to John B. Bogart, editor of the New York Sun from 1837 to 1850.

Still others ascribe it to Amos Cummings, another of Dana's editors during the same period.

Nobody appears to know for a certainty just who was the most popular definition of news or just when it originated.

But nearly all authorities are agreed that the famous epigram originated in and emanated from the editorial offices of the New York Sun back in the eighties.

It was a favorite with Lord Northcliffe, the British journalist and publisher, and he contributed toward its wide currency by quoting it often.

The oft-quoted definition of news is merely a striking way of saying that news is a departure from the usual.

"Harmony seldom makes a headline," Bogart used to say.

The phrase "news value" is supposed to have been coined in 1899 by Julian Ralph, the American newspaperman and story-writer, in a talk at Columbia University to Prof. Brander Matthew's English class.

Kevin Wardman, who was publisher of Frank Munsey's Herald until his death in 1922, is credited with having coined the term "yellow journalism."

The term was first applied of the Yellow Kid, Buster Brown and other comic-strip cartoons drawn by Richard Fenton Outcault between 1895 and 1898.

Wardman's description, "yellow journalism," is said to have referred to the "yellow ink" with which the dress of the Yellow Kid was dyed.

But in the Century Dictionary Thomas Carlyle had used the phrase "the yellow eye of journalism."

In time "yellow jofrnalism" came to be applied to any sensational journalism primarily designed to appeal to the ignorant and unthinking.

Cheap, trashy boys' books, full of sensational horrors, used to be called "penny-dreadfuls" in England.

knowledge helped him greatly in the job he later took as Director of Military Operations and Intelligence at the War Office — a position he gave up for one exciting year in Palestine, in 1936.

General Wavell was another Dill "discovery." If such an expression can be applied without disrespect to the man who brought us speedy victory in the Middle East. His amazing war plan, which so completely baffled the Italians and ruined their empire overnight, was conceived in Dill's room in the War Office. For three days Dill and Wavell worked side by side at that great map-strewn table, planning every feature of the campaign as one man. The Navy and Air Force supported their scheme, bold and daring though it was, and the War Cabinet accepted it.

If you talk to Sir John, his brilliant eyes range over you gently, and you get the impression that the dynamic man is not missing a detail. His brain seems to have the faculty of making a rapid digest of everything he hears, and he writes an equally graphic, sloping hand. In short, factual sentences he detests War Office brass-hats who use involved, showy expressions to conceal ideas. I saw a letter he had written to officers at training depot. It was sympathetic understanding, and fatherly, without being patronizing. It used phrases like: "Are your cooks good . . . and you get good results from poorly-fed men who know that they are being robbed . . . You can see each man so that you will know his personal history and attainments . . . This job calls for sympathetic understanding . . ."

A sympathetic understanding for new soldiers! You don't expect that sort of human understanding from a man in the position of Britain's chief soldier, but it is a vital facet of the character of the man leading up to victory. Can you imagine Goering or Von Keitel writing an inter-staff memo about "sympathetic understanding" for their Nazi soldiers?

—Hamilton Spectator.

The Stars Say

For Friday, June 20

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

A RATHER pleasant and progressive day is presaged by the interesting but not powerful chain of planetary aspects. There may be much stirring about in promoting activities of a social sort as in connection with social, domestic, artistic and emotional aspirations. There may be some change as well as a voluminous correspondence in such pursuits, as writings of a finer order are under excellent stimuli for expression. This should prove lucrative one way or another. Friendship figures happily.

Those whose birthdays it is may anticipate a year of much happiness and as well a certain modicum of progress and profit. Business as well as personal ambitions are fairly stimulated and friendly, with the social, emotional and higher aspects of living under happy auspices. There may be travel, change and much in the line of correspondence. Writings of a higher nature, concerning art, drama, romance, mystery fiction and kindred effort should be fortunate.

A child born on this day should be versatile, artistic, with outstanding literary or musical talent. It will be socially inclined, popular and friendly.

Mount Pleasant, Rawdon, W.M.S. Marks Fortieth Anniversary

Rawdon—On Wednesday afternoon, June 11th over eighty ladies gathered at Mount Pleasant United Church to commemorate the fortieth anniversary of Mount Pleasant-Rawdon Women's Missionary Society. The church was resplendent with baskets of peonies and vases of cut flowers which made a pretty setting for this happy occasion. Posters, press scrap books and W.M.S. periodicals and books were prominently displayed. On either side of the altar was a table covered with a cut work luncheon cloth. The birthday cake with forty pink candles adorned the one while a silver basket of pink and white peonies graced the other and this table was used as a memorial to the departed members. Every woman on Rawdon circuit was specially invited to attend and several accepted the invitation there being eleven from Wellmans and four from Bethel.

Several ladies in the nearby communities who had been members at Mount Pleasant also accepted an invitation to attend, among these being a former president, Mrs. Thomas McKeown and daughter, Margaret, Springbrook, Mrs. Herb David, Stirling, Mrs. Frank Sellen, Carmel, Mrs. Milton Shaw and Wayne, Ivanhoe, Mrs. Ray Williams, Hoards, Mrs. Gilbert Smith who is spending a few weeks at Mount Pleasant, Mrs. Baldwin Reid, Ivanhoe and a few men also attended this function. The service opened with quiet music played by Mrs. John Holmes. The president, Mrs. Percy MacMullen presided and gave the call to worship and hymns followed with a prayer from the May monthly. The guests were graciously welcomed and the roll call of 1940 paid members was answered with the keyword "A favorite Bible verse."

The afternoon devotional took the form of an "In Memoriam service" for twenty two departed members who have passed into higher service. Mrs. Percy Hubble placed a cross on the Memorial Table with the words "Pray, Study, Give—The motto of those who had gone on." She then read the list of deceased members and placed a spray of yellow roses and fern at the foot of the cross and then read a poem by James Whitcomb Riley. They are not dead, they are just away." Mrs. John Holmes read several Bible passages and gave a splendid talk in memory of these faithful members followed by prayer.

The file was read as follows: Mrs. James Williams, first president from 1901-1911; Mrs. Frank Potts, first secretary; five charter members, Mrs. Daniel Johnson, Mrs. Stanley McConnell, Mrs. Reuben Hoard, Miss Lottie Johnson and her mother, Mrs. Will Johnson; Mrs. Robert Pounder, leader of Mission Circle 1912-1917; Mrs. A. W. Garrison, life member and Mrs. Nettie Maines; Mrs. Alex McMullen; Mrs. Wm. Emmons Sr.; Mrs. David McAdam; Mrs. Kenneth Valleau; Mrs. James Hubble; Mrs. Manson McConnell; Mrs. Claude Sharp; Mrs. Cooper McDonnell; Mrs. George Wright; Mrs. Lewis Locke; Mrs. Orval Jackson; Mrs. Wm. H. Scott. Mrs. Kenneth Wright reported over seventy-two dollars to date.

Membership

Forty years ago in June Mrs. Lew Massey organized a W.M.S. at Mount Pleasant and the names of the ten presidents was read by the secretary: Mrs. Williams (10 yrs.) 1901-1911; Mrs. Allan Bailey (5 yrs.) 1911-1916; Mrs. John Reid (5 yrs.) 1916-1921; Mrs. Thomas McKeown (2 yrs.) 1922-1923; Mrs. Jennie Hoard (1 yr.) 1924; 1925; Mrs. George Weaver (3 yrs.) 1926-1928; Mrs. Rose Hoard (1 yr.) 1928; Mrs. Thomas McKeown (1 yr.) 1930; Mrs. F. G. Jones (2 yrs.) 1931-1932; Mrs. Ross Hoard (2 yrs.) 1933-1934; Mrs. Arthur Phillips (1 yr.) 1935; Mrs. Percy MacMullen (6 yrs.) 1936-1941. Mrs. Will Heath a former member represented Bethel community and sang a vocal solo "There is always a blessing for me."

When the auxiliary was organized there were ten members and seven of them have passed on to their reward. The three who are living were all in attendance and gave brief addresses telling how the work was begun and their reminiscences of the days gone by was very interesting.

Mrs. Allan Bailey, honorary president of Mount Pleasant - W.M.S. and the second president of the organization has been a continuous member and worker and she gave a portion of her address which she gave at Wellmans when they celebrated their 40th in 1938. For the first few years the ladies of the circuit all attended a Wellmans for their meeting and then 1901 the Mount Pleasant ladies decided to have a society of their own. Mrs. Frank Williams, the first treasurer, and who had the honor of choosing the hymns used at the service brought a cheery word of greeting and spoke of pioneer days. Mrs. James Rosebrugh and Mrs. Middleton, a former member of Cobourg Presbyterial and who is well known here as formerly Miss Phrpuis McDonald was the third charter member and she came specially for this service. She gave an interesting message and said Spotts Pleasant is always home to her. She brought greetings from Gladstone W.M.S. and these were reciprocated.

Those in attendance were particularly delighted to hear from three three charter members.

Five Life Members

Mrs. George Weaver who has held some office continuously for thirty five years; Mrs. Allan Bailey, Honorary President; Mrs. John Holmes; Mrs. Frank Jeffs and Mrs. J. E. Reckel are charter members and there are sixteen annual members and three associate helpers.

Last year the Auxiliary and Mission Band remitted over two hundred dollars to the presbyterial treasurer. It was regretted that Mrs. George Weaver, Mrs. J. E. Reckel, Mrs. Morris Rose and Mrs. Don Campbell were absent on this festive occasion.

Mission Band History

Mrs. Cyrus Summers who has given splendid leadership to the Mission Band since 1928 gave a brief resume of that organization. In June 1924 a Mission Band was organized by Mrs. John Holmes with the pastor's wife, Mrs. F. G. Jones as first president. Later in 1925 it was divided into two bands and the meetings held at the Allan and Wellmans schools. In 1929 the bands again combined with Mrs. Frank Hutchison as leader. In 1930 and 1931 Miss Helen Smith guided the children and then Miss Edna Thrasher carried out the during of leader for six years, at present the band is studying Trinidad and they had a membership in 1940 of 19 annual members and they remitted $25.50 to presbyterial treasurer. All were delighted to have Mrs. Milton Shaw, formerly Miss Edna Thrasher in attendance.

The ladies of Wellmans were disappointed in their number so at this juncture Mrs. Edgar McKeown and Mrs. Carleton Potts contributed a duet. Mrs. Percy MacMullen, former pres. secretary of the Bay of Quinte Conference Branch, gave a brief resume of the highlights of the recent branch meeting held at Brockville.

She also gave brief glimpses of the workings of this large organization which comprises seven presbyterials.

The offering was gathered by Mrs. Arthur Phillips, Stewardship Secretary and Mrs. Kenneth Weaver, Treasurer. The members put their monthly envelopes and the guests gave silver collection and the total realized was over fourteen dollars and all goes direct to missions, as the president and two other ladies assumed all the expenses of this event. Mrs. Roy Pounder dedicated the offering and took our three misslonaries, Miss Wilma Pollock, Miss Elsie Hunt and Miss Mabel Claxle to the throne of Grace.

Birthday Cake Ceremony

Mrs. Allan Bailey provided the lovely birthday cake and Mrs. George Weaver was responsible for the decorating of it and these two ladies had the honor of planning the cake and also shouldering the expense of it, the cake was prettily iced in white with 40 pink candles in holders. In the absence of Mrs. Weaver, she requested that Mrs. Holmes take her place at the table and assist Mrs. Bailey light the lighting honors. While the candles were burning Misses Lois Weaver and Ruth Rose, two Mission Band members sang "Jesus wants me for a Sunbeam" after the candles were blown out Mrs. Thrasher carried the cake back to the church and cut a serving for each guest. Brief remarks were given by Rev. J. E. Beckel, pastor, Miss Emma Rainie, president of Wellmans W.M.S. and Mrs. Harold Elliott, president of Bethel Ladies' Aid.

The president thanked all who had assisted in any way to make the afternoon a success and she was especially grateful for the lovely flowers.

The service closed with "A better day is coming." The pastor announced the benediction followed by the National Anthem. A little later Grace was sung.

A large table was placed at the rear of the church and the tasty lunch was nicely arranged by Mrs. Ross Hoard and Mrs. Frank Smith. Mrs. Arthur Phillips brewed the tea at the hall.

The lunch consisting of sandwiches, cookies, pickles, tarts, tea and birthday cake was served by Mrs. Edgar McKeown, Mrs. Cyrus Summers, Mrs. Kenneth Weaver, Miss Eileen MacMullen, Mrs. Percy Hubble, Mrs. Lindsay McKeown, Mrs. Gordon Linn, Mrs. Frank Jeffs, Miss Muriel Hunt, Mrs. M. Wrighiman, Mrs. Carleton Potts and Miss Doris Rine.

A vote of thanks for hospitality was voted by Mesdames Elliott and Rainie.

Young British Tars Found U.S. Girls A Little Different But Lease-Lend Gadgets Fine

This is the last of a series on the entry into the Battle of the Atlantic of an American vessel transferred to Britain under the Lend-Lease Bill.

By MORGAN M. BEATTY
Associated Press Staff Writer

ABOARD H. M. S. ——, AT SEA —(AP)—"Release depth charges!" The order came down from the bridge of our lend-lease ship. The British tar at the racks on the stern pulled a plug, and the ash can of death to submarines splashed into the ocean.

We put on a burst of speed while the bomb was finding its deep level where it would burst automatically from pressure. I braced myself for an explosion.

I got the surprise of my life. I heard a noise like a distant shotgun firing in a foggy November field. A sort of a "boom". In a minute or two I saw a white area on the ocean behind us suddenly bubble and glisten in the sun. There was a shimmery, rapid vibration on the surface, like heat waves only faster and muskier. That was all.

"What?" I asked. "No explosion?"

"No," explained the officer at my side. "Not at that depth. Nor fish, either." He was looking over the side, obviously disappointed at bringing up no fresh fish for supper.

Nor was there any submarine, for we were just practising with American depth charges. Our senior officer was putting our squadron through the paces of submarine attack, our last drill before I was to leave the ship at an Eastern Canadian port.

I was glad of that for the crew's sake, I thought they needed a respite, even though they never seemed to mind the pace. We had zigzagged ourselves seasick. We had signalled ourselves blue in the face. We fired practice ammunition frequently, did 45-degree starboard turns.

Embarrassing Indeed

Now we were about to get rest. I went below, asked my cabin boy to pack me up when he had a free moment.

"Davey," I asked, "what did you like most about America on your brief stay with us?" "The big cities. They were fine. Life seems to begin at midnight."

"And what about our girls, Davey?" "They're a bit fresh, don't you think, sir?"

"Fresh?" "I've seen them roll their stockings in the street, sir." Davey was embarrassed.

He and the older lads who kept the wardroom shipshape and fed the crew obviously were tickled pink with their American ship. What impressed them most was the gadgets.

"There seems to be a gadget for everything except your fingernails," he said, "and you're likely to get them clipped too if you don't mind out."

Our food was well prepared, except for coffee and less greasy than the fare on most American warships. Outstanding was their standard curried rice with chutney, though it's hot enough to scalp a fellow.

Coffee and Grog

"The coffee? Let's skip it. They tried very hard, but they just don't know what to do with coffee. The big coffee percolator — a standard fixture in the crew's quarters of every American warship — was soon being used to distil cocoa.

British officers liked American cigarettes better than their own, wished they could get coffee the American way. But they didn't like U. S. cigarets very much, thought they were a bit too mild. They thought the same thing about theirs.

The ship lost its prohibition regulations when the British took over. With them came barrels of rum. Every man over 21 years old got his three fingers of grog every night—or the equivalent in pay, about $1.50 a month. Nearly half the crew passed up pay to the rum. When I tasted the stuff, I agreed with the men who took the pay.

I couldn't find a soul with a complaint against the Lend-lease vessel I was leaving. That is, I could dig out only one grumble.

"Pen up," I said to one of the officers. "Isn't there one single thing you don't like about this ship?"

"Well, if you put it that way," he said. "It's the bunks. Its ice cubes are a bit too comfortable."

"Too bad," I sympathized. "Oh," he replied, "I remedied that well enough. I stuck a board under the mattress. Now I sleep like a babe."

AUNT NET (By Robert Quillen)

Ma and Pa will put every spare dollar we've got into this new Victory Loan, if I don't get a stitch to wear this year.

Patriotism is like religion. You can talk about it and sound mighty convincin', but it ain't in your heart till it gets into your pocketbook.

Ma and Pa never have had more than a livin', but we've always felt respectable because we're freeborn and independent and nobody could boss us around. I wouldn't give two cents to live in any other way, but I'll give all we've got to stay free.

I've been plumb frantic because I couldn't do anything to help out, but this Victory loan gives me a chance to be useful. And nothin' else a dollar will buy could give me as much pleasure as a dollar's worth of trouble to Jiller.

(A Robert Quillen cartoon contributed to the 1941 Victory Loan campaign by Publishers' Syndicate).

Murder Charge Laid Against Grandmother Of Slain Infant

Blackville, N.B., June 19.—(CP)—Mrs. Hazel Bamford was arrested last night in her home at McCarthy Pit after information charging her with the murder of her infant grandson had been laid before Magistrate George M. Barry of Blackville.

A warrant for her arrest was served by Detective Sergeant J. J. Oakes of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police at her home, where she is under doctor's care.

The murder charge followed a verdict of a coroner's jury that the death of Laddie Bamford, seven-day-old son of Mrs. Bamford's daughter, Anna Bamford, 21, resulted from head injuries caused when the grandmother "deliberately" struck the child against a door knob and end of a bed late in April.

The verdict added that this occurred while the grandmother was "in a state of hysteria from exhaustion".

Two Fredericton women, sworn in as special constables, will stay at the Bamford house pending Mrs. Bamford's removal to jail and an R. C. M. P. constable will visit the residence daily.

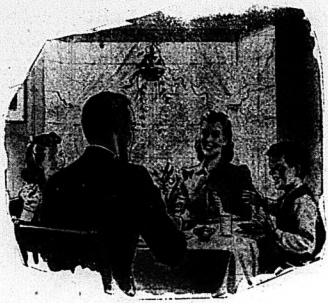
Democracy—



Is a Family Product

Most drug stores sell toothbrush holders with places for four toothbrushes. Many stores sell soap and other goods in "family" size. "Clothes for the entire family" is a frequent heading in newspaper advertisement. Many young married people look forward to the day when they will become parents. For the family is the backbone of the Empire.

Presses may rumble, trains may shuttle back and forth across the country, steel mills may glow red day and night; coal may be dug from the earth as fast as men and machines can move—all of this activity would be utterly useless, wasted, were it not for families.

On Sundays and holidays our Canadian roads are crowded with families on weekend outings. We are a country of people who celebrate Mother's Day and Father's Day. Wedding anniversaries are a cause with us for celebration and people travel hundreds of miles to attend family reunions and proud is the patriarch whose descendants are with him on his last birthdays. The spirit of the family lives strongly throughout OUR Empire.

Let us be proud of the fact that Democracy is a family product with us . . . . and preserve it.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, June 19.—(CP)—Moderate weakness was registered by the mining issues in the early hours of stock trading and the industrials and Western Oils were slightly higher. Volume was small at 41,000 shares up to noon.

Morris-Kirkland Gold Mines, limited was delisted today following the tying of a bankruptcy order against the company.

Wright-Hargreaves and Hallnor reacted to new lows for the year and Kerr-Addison. Malartic Gold Selds eased and Sherritt Gordon narrowly. In the base metal group Noranda, Hudson Bay, Sleep Rock and Pend Oreille declined.

Better prices ruled in the Industrials. International Petroleum, Consoleum, building products, Ford A and Dominion Bridge. A few scattered spots involved Penny Farmer, Bell Telephone, Crowned Paper and Imperial Oil.

Foothills firmed 5 cents to 45c.

WALL STREET

New York, June 19 (AP)—While there were few really weak spots, and scattered favorites managed to chalk up modest advances, fractional recessions were well in the majority at the fourth hour of today's market trading today.

Stocks inclined to falter were U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, American Telephone, Sears Roebuck, Westinghouse, Curtiss-Wright, Standard Oil (N.J.), American Can and Anaconda.

Up occasionally were Standard Oil of Calif., Du Pont, Kobey, Tennecott and Consolidated Edison. Canadian stocks were unchanged.

In the Unlisted Market Canada Dry were unquoted.

The matter of automotive production and prices was the subject of considerable discussion. Authorities feeled the war department had requested a 50 per cent cut in 1942 model output. That there probably would be a substantial curtailment in the turnout of new cars, however, was the belief of observers who thought shortage of materials would be the main deterrent.

Dollar-a-Year Men To Work for General Chiang Kai-Shek

San Francisco, June 19.—(AP)—Three United States truck line operators will leave soon for the Orient on one of the most unique transportation jobs—transformation of the Burma Road into a smooth, efficient line of war supplies to China.

The three—all men who could not be fired for thousands—will get a dollar a year.

They are Marco Hellman, San Francisco banker and transportation expert, who organized the Pacific International truck line merger involving $,500 vehicles; Daniel D. Arnstein who owns New York City's big terminal cab concern and operates a fleet of 2,000 trucks in New York and Boston, and Edward C. Dana, West Hartford, Conn., who owns Consolidated motor trucks, key unit in the new merger Hellman completed.

Board members here were J. P. Singleton, associate director of marketing in the dairy products division of the Federal Agricultural Department; J. P. Demarais and John Freeman, Montreal. Directors of the producers' association included the president, George R. Gardiner of Seeley's Bay.

Fresh Egg Prices Continue Upward

Toronto,—The trend in fresh egg prices to higher levels was reported in the market yesterday continued upward as receipts were still light. Butter held unchanged in quiet trading.

Good demand and light receipts that have characterized the egg market for the last two weeks yesterday gave further strength to top-grade egg prices. Orders A large and A medium in the graded section added 1-3 cent a dozen to previous advances, and these two grades in the retail division firmed 1 cent a dozen. Other grades kept former levels.

Buyers on the butter market subsided and available supplies proved adequate to meet the spirit and not spotty demand. Because there was no selling pressure, No. 1 grade Ontario creamery solids remained at 31 1-4 cents a pound.

War Emergency Trainees Quickly Placed in Jobs

A splendid opportunity for War Emergency trainees in the Belleville area to enter the employment of a well - established manufacturing concern was extended to graduates of the machine classes in the Belleville Collegiate and Vocational School this morning when it was announced by Mr. George A. Ferguson, chief instructor of the local classes, that the Canadian General Electric Company of Peterborough, were anxious to sponsor 25 graduates of the Belleville school, then men to go to work in September.

Applications for entry into the sponsored class are all to be taken from the Belleville area, it was pointed out by Mr. Ferguson, he stating that while the men would go into temporary war work with the Peterborough company, if they delivered the goods the job would be permanent, and not dependent upon wartime production.

Placements of graduates from the Belleville War Emergency Classes into industry are fast being made, according to Mr. Ferguson, the demand for skilled and semi-skilled machinists increasing with the rising tempo of war production effort. Graduates from the local school find no difficulty in securing positions, most men having had a few days elapsing from the time of their graduation to that of securing work.

The latest placements made from the Belleville classes are the result of a call for four mechanics to the Canadian Explosives Ltd., Port Hope, the required number of men being left for their positions this morning. Indicative of the satisfaction which graduates turned out by the local school are given by the fact that one of last summer's class, after working for a few days, night foreman at the Port Hope factory, was offered by a senior foreman in the same plant for day work.

Four classes of trainees are now taking instruction in machine work at the Belleville school, the classes running the entire twenty-four hours. Sixteen of the present classes are taking a greater interest in their work, according to instructors, Students are serious in their desire to get ahead with their studies and get out into industry.

Commotion Wins "The Oaks" in Driving Finish

Newmarket, England, June 19—(CP Cable)—With a brilliant driving finish, Sir Eric Ollivier's filly Commotion today won the Oaks by two lengths over Lt.-Col. F. O. Robinson's Turkana.

Lord Glanely's Dancing Time, the odds on favorite, was third in the classic for three-year-old fillies, in which 10 started. The same day Derby, was held at Newmarket this year instead of Epsom because of war conditions.

Commotion, ridden by Harry Wragg and trained by Fred Darling, who saddled yesterday's Derby winner Owen Tudor, trailed the field until the final two furlongs. Wragg then threaded through the field, took the rail, and passed the leaders, Dancing Time and Turkana. The filly covered the 1 1-2 mile course in 2:37, five seconds slower than Owen Tudor's Derby time over the same course.

After the three leaders, the order of finish was Beautiful, Precocity, Roman Empress, Pale, Mercy, Sunny Dear, and Palence.

Test Blackouts In Two Cities Is Satisfactory

Toronto, June 19 —(CP)— If enemy aircraft ever appear in the night skies of Ontario for raids on the industrial centres of Toronto and Hamilton they will fly over areas as dark and apparently deserted as the loneliest of backwoods districts.

That was shown last night when for 15 minutes Ontario's two largest cities were darkened in test blackouts to demonstrate civilian defence preparations and to awaken citizens to the grim realities of night warfare in connection with the Victory Loan campaign.

Officials in both cities expressed satisfaction with the blackouts, and gave as reasons the almost complete failure of the blackouts, the cooperation of citizens both in extinguishing lights and remaining relatively stationary, the ease with which air raids precautions plans were carried out and the lack of serious accidents, and disorders.

Munition Plants Exempt

The 14 municipalities comprising Toronto and Hamilton's district completely blackout with the only notable exception certain munitions plants which were exempt from the blackout regulations.

In both Toronto and Hamilton rast crowds of people congregated in downtown areas to watch the lights planes of the Royal Norwegian Air Force, one of the first cavalry sirks, to add to the sense of reality.

In both cities also there were large numbers of air raid wardens and helpers gaining experience under actual blackout conditions—12,000 in Toronto and 2,400 in municipalities and 2,400 in Hamilton.

Only One Casualty

The only casualty reported in Toronto was a woman who fell in her home and broke her leg.

In the two cities police were assisted by special shop floats where proprietors had gone home forgetting to extinguish their lights, and by motor cyclists, ambulance drivers, the regulations seriously, threatened to take things into their hands. One Toronto store window was shattered by a thrown brick.

Attorney-General Gordon Conant, in view of the Toronto blackout from the roof of the 23-storey Canadian Bank of Commerce building said after the demonstration that "We are prepared for any emergency."

The proceeds of the street carnival will be turned over in part to the Kinsmen war effort.

DEMANDS ON U. S. INVITED

World Make Rough Going

Diplomatic circles in Ankara said they had received knowledge of any German-Russian negotiations, but it was common belief there here Germany had demanded the entire exportable surplus of the Ukraine grain crop and direction of the Soviet railway and industry and vital mining enterprises.

Such demands, if granted, would make Russia virtually a economic vassal of Germany, these sources said. They expressed belief that Soviet Premier Stalin was playing desperately for time while massing his Red army to meet the threat of Nazi troop concentration along his frontier.

Jugoslav military and diplomatic attaches who left Moscow recently when Russia withdrew recognition of their government were quoted as saying that Stalin had admitted to them that a Nazi invasion might come during the summer.

Stalin was quoted as saying that his army would be ready by August and that the enemy might get hit in the face.

Jugoslav correspondents of the Independent French Agency gave a like version of reported German demands upon Russia, according to Reuters News Agency.

Reported Demands

1.—That Besarabia and Northern Bucovina, the provinces which Russia occupied from Rumania a year ago by ultimatum, be returned to Rumania.

2.—That Germany be permitted to occupy the Ukraine "for the time being."

3.—That Russia "liberate" Estonia and Lithuania, members of the Baltic countries which she has annexed, and that she withdraw her troops beyond a line of demarcation to be fixed by Germany.

4.—Reduction of the strength of the Soviet army.

The same source said that four or five Nazi divisions, supported by a large contingent of Rumanian troops, were massed in the Rumanian province of Bessarabia fronting opposite Russia's Bessarabian frontier.

The reports that an ultimatum had been sent to Russia and that Nazi troops had attacked the Soviet frontier were denied by Reuters, which quoted correspondents in Moscow and Bucharest as reporting that in Turkey as its sources of information,

Russian Troops Leave Finnish Base

Adding to the general picture of German diplomatic tension was that by all these reports were dispatches from the Finnish capital of Helsinki telling of an apparent Soviet troop exodus from the military base in Hanko, which Russia obtained from Finland on a long-term lease.

The supposition was that the troops were being withdrawn to reinforce Russian armies elsewhere.

Finnish reserves also were said to have been called to the colors on the theory that Finland inevitably would be embroiled should Russia and Germany come to blows.

Commenting on these reports the New York Herald Tribune said editorially:

"The Nazis are up to something. Before long they are going to launch another of their nightly blitzes—and time probably the mightiest of all. The question is where and against whom? The outward signs point to Russia as the next objective.

The general reaction to the German-Turkish friendship pact was that while it strengthened Hitler's hand in dealing with Russia, he had not gained from Turkey as much as he had hoped for.

Canada is training hundreds of men to man the munitions and already has sent 1,000 radio technicians to Britain to work on the radiolocator and other detection devices.

Congress included $6,920,000 in defence funds for equipment to be installed in warning stations on the Atlantic, Gulf of Mexico and coasts in Hawaii, Alaska, Puerto Rico and the Canal Zone. Plans also provided for the mobile Signal Corps companies in addition. The detection cost $4,700 each.

The first of the mobile stations already is in operation, and received an initial service test will January in anti-aircraft war games in the New York area.

In announcing the drive to recruit American volunteers to make and man the British devices, Commodore Pirie said the personnel must include "men in the electrical radio mechanics, skilled engine fitters and metal workers, electrical technicians, instrument makers and repairers, switch and tool setters and operators, motor mechanics and engine room repair men.

Not Subject to Combatant Duty

"Each volunteer will be paid," he said, "in addition to free board and lodging, at the rate of 500 pounds a year (£36.6.8. in sterling) chief foremen and at the rate of 400 pounds a year (£29.6.8. sterling) for basic workers. The men will be housed and fed with British technical workers, he continued, and will be provided with a distinctive blue uniform without insignia indicating the corps. They will not be subject to combatant duty.

Rhodes Scholarships To be Suspended For Duration of War

Toronto, June 19 (CP)—In announcing the complete list of nine Canadian Rhodes Scholarship awards for 1941, D. R. McCannell, Canadian representative of the Rhodes Scholarship Trust, said today no competitions for the scholarships for 1942 would be held and possibly none would be held until after the war.

Although the scholarships for 1941 have been awarded, Mr. McNeill said, they will be suspended for the duration of the, war as were the 1939 and 1940 scholarships, with special exceptions. Provision was made for winners wishing to do such work as medical or scientific research to take up the scholarships, tenable at Oxford University.

The suspended scholarships may be resumed after the war, Mr. Michener said.

The awards are valued at approximately $2,000 annually for two or three years and are tenable at any standard six-conditioned Continental Limited.

"CEMENTMEN" IN SECOND PLACE BY WIN OVER SACOS

Luffman Hurls First Full Game of the Season for Point Anne

SCORE IS 16 to 4

With Stan Luffman going the route for the first time this year on the Point Anne mound, the Cementmen breezed through to a 16 to 4 win over Stanley Mikkelsen's SACOS in a City football League fixture at Coleman Flats last night. Bubby Gaulin's OC Point gang moved into sole possession of second place with 4th win.

Luffman was afforded sterling support by his teammates as he whiffed ten and allowed eight hits. Blanking the SACOS for six innings, Luffman eased off with the score standing at 12 to 0, when with two aboard Jim Follwell of Toronto Argonaut football fame, connected for a circuit blow with two aboard to give the loser their first three runs. The other counter came as an unearned run in the ninth.

The Cementmen opened strongly with a five-run splurge in the second and added four more in the fourth to coast in with ease, as they collected a total of 10 hits from the offerings of elongated Jim Hunter, whose support was ragged, especially in the SACOS' three errors. Centreaux with five safeties and Whalen with four paced the Cementmen on the attack, as Doug Bennett hit the ball for the largest number of Skipper Gaulin's nine counted at least one safe blow. Follwell with a home run and Hunter with two timely hits and Hunter with a brace of singles carried the SACOS attack.

The outfielders of both squads provided the feature plays of the game, with Art Genereux's sparkling catch of Urch's fly to double Holmes at the plate in the eighth stood out as Whitehead and Hayden made thrilling catches for the winners while Day and O'Neil made fine defensive plays for the losers. Day's running catch of Bennett's second inning drive being sensational, a one-handed stab while running with his back to the ball.

The line-ups:

SACO—Emery, 3b; Holmes, c; Hunter, p; O'Neil, cf; Urch, lf; Peoples, Robertson and Thompson, 2b; Follwell 1b; Prout and Kerr, ss, and Day, rf.

Point Anne—Genereaux, cf; Lott, 3b; Whitehead, rf; Sero, ss; Green, c; Hutchings, 1f; Hillier, 2b; Bennett, 1b, and Luffman, p.

THE CHAMPION

The Brown Bomber who weather'ed several strong flurries of the challenger and finally dished out enough punishment to wear Conn down, the end coming dramatically in the 13th round.

Billy Conn Can Choose to Gamble With Dynamite and Knocked Kicking in 13th by Joe Louis

Up Until Time of K.O. Pittsburg Boxer More Than Held His Own

54,487 ATTEND

(By Elmer Dulmage)

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, June 19.—(CP)—Billy Conn danced a dozen rounds last night in the shadow of the dark destroyer, cutting down the heavyweight champion as he went along. The title was within his grasp. Then in the 13th round, Joe Louis knocked him out.

A crowd of 54,487 paid $450,000 to see this spectacle in the Polo grounds. Thousands of the cheering mob were from Pittsburg where Conn was born and raised on the south side of the tracks—a tough Irishman.

Most of the 12 rounds Louis, making his 18th defence of the heavyweight title was outfought. The lashing gloves of a light heavyweight were blinding him, stabbing his pleading features, taking away from Joe the greatest prize in fistdom.

Even in the considerably brighting that went on—and here the Brown bomber is supposed to be invincible—Conn's hands were boxier. He must have been hurt by the champion's body blows but, in division, James J. Corbett and Bob Fitzsimmons. Conn weighed 25 1-2 pounds less than Louis.

It occurred to everybody in the Polo Grounds at about the same moment that Conn was beating the champ. Through the 11th and 12th rounds, Billy had pasted the Bomber with right-hand punches. They were blows that befuddled Joe, hurt him and slowed him down.

The crowd was up roaring wildly in acclaim of the little man. Then the fatal 13th...

The 13th started slowly as Conn danced away from before confidently seeking his right to the head. So far behind on points that only a knockout could save him, Conn stalked Conn with his right cocked. But he'd done that before.

Smashed Home Right

Now he hooked his left, straightening the challenger, and smashed home the right. That was the payoff punch. Billy made an effort to rise before the full count without quite making it. Referee Eddie Josephs counted him out.

Maybe's sufficient that Louis was slowed down gradually, that he isn't the best fighter in the world, that Jim Braddock four years ago and knocked out Max Schmeling in one round a year later.

Joe is 27 and certainly less hungry than any things he used to be. Too, he was probably trained fine, but not such a good fighter as Conn Since the first of the year he had knocked out Red Burman, Gus Dorzin, Abe Simon and Tony Musto, and won over Buddy Baer on a disqualification.

Louis Punches Hard

But when the champ's punchship was slipping away last night Louis was as deadly as ever, punching as hard if not as often as in the days, when victory might have meant more to him than it does now.

Billy might have stayed away from Joe for three more rounds and taken the decision but he isn't that kind of fighting Irishman steeped in and caught Joe's Sunday punch.

It was the first time in his career as middleweight, light heavyweight and finally heavyweight that Conn had been counted out. The tough Irishman is super-confident that Louis can't do it again.

Losing Temper Cost Conn Fight Says Joe Louis

New York, June 19—(CP)—From no less an authority than heavyweight champion Joe Louis came the statement after his knockout of Billy Conn last night that if Conn "only had kept his temper the fight have been the champion."

"I'd like to fight him again," the Brown Bomber added in his dressing room after his 18th title defence.

"I knew I was losing the fight when the 12th round started," Joe told newsmen. "I just couldn't get started against the fast boy. He hurt me pretty much in the 12th and I was hoping he'd lose his head pretty quick because I knew I was losing the fight.

"It was studying Conn all through Detroit's fights and finally figured his nail him when he started to throw those right hooks. The chance came in the 13th and I put all I had on the knockout punches. They were there. I could feel one I hit him, but I knew I had him then."

Louis's chief concern as he entered his dressing room was whether it had been a good fight. After he had taken a shower, the little gamecock loosed his head and cried softly for a few minutes.

"Louis didn't hurt me," Conn told reporters. "But he sure threw a hard punch. I tried awfully hard but thought sure I had the title. I just couldn't stay away from him. I had to go in and fight."

Cleveland Indians Increase Lead Over Field in American By Walloping Athletics 14-2

N.Y. Yankees Fall Before White Sox for Second Straight Time

CARDS LENGTHEN LEAD

By JUDSON BAILEY

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Cleveland Indians apparently have become ferocious at the plate and took capable of gobbling up the lesser lights of the American Baseball League in big gulps.

All that has kept the tribe from making a runaway of the pennant race before now has been weak hitting and, everything considered, they have been doing well with their tap and touch system.

Yesterday, however, they really opened up—getting 17 hits including seven home runs and four doubles ing five home runs and four doubles to overwhelm Philadelphia Athletics 14-2. They scored seven runs in a thirteen inning fracas, Hal Trosky hit two home runs and Lou Boudreau, Ray May and Ben Kelmer one apiece.

This display of fireworks was accompanied by a four-hit pitching performance by Bob Feller, who coasted to his 11th victory of the campaign against three losses.

The Indians' first-place margin was increased to three full games as Chicago White Sox stunned New York Yankees for the second day in succession 3-2.

Detroit Tigers tore into Boston Red Sox for a 5-2 victory behind the six-hit pitching of Archie Schoolboy Rowe, who gave up only one extra-base blow, a homer by Jimmie Foxx.

Squeezed Out Verdict

St. Louis Browns squeezed a 3-2 verdict from Washington Senators in a night game at the nation's capital. Harlond Clift drove in two of the Brownies runs with a single and a triple while a home run by Cecil Travis accounted for the Senators' only tallies.

St. Louis Cardinals continued their climb in the National League with a 7-3 triumph over the Phillies, while the second-place Brooklyn Dodgers were dropping a 5-1 nod to Chicago Cubs.

Boston Braves beat Cincinnati Reds 4-3 with Al Javery besting Johnny Vander Meer in a pitching duel. Javery pitched only two-hit Ward's seven, but was more effective.

Curfew Rule Causes Tie

Baseball's curfew rule caused its first major league tie in a struggle between New York Giants and Pittsburgh Pirates which was interrupted for an hour in order that the fans in the latter city could get to a broadcast of the heavyweight championship bout of Joe Louis and their hometown hero, Billy Conn.

The game was interrupted in the 9th of the score tied 1-1 and in the middle of the fourth inning and although the game was resumed at 11 o'clock there never was any more scoring.

IDLE SUN EASY VICTOR

Chicago, June 19.—(AP)—Mrs. Emil Sandstrom's idle Sun wore down William Palmer in the stretch and then drew out for a five lengths triumph in the Beverly Hills purse at Lincoln Fields today before a crowd of 7,000.

William Palmer took on for second and Dog House slipped Gourmet for third. Idle Sun, with the veteran Willie Garner up, returned $7.30. Time for the mile and a sixteenth over the dull track was 1:48 1-5.

EXCITEMENT KILLED THREE

Philadelphia, June 19 (AP)—Three elderly Pennsylvanians killed themselves with so much excitement to a broadcast of the Billy Conn-Joe Louis fight that it cost them their lives.

Heart attacks killed T. Frank Lynn, 56, Allentown tax collector, and Andrew Burke, 68, Philadelphia. Elmer B. Erdsman, Lancaster, died of a cerebral hemorrhage on the eve of his 76th birthday.

Before Burke died at a hospital he declared: "It was a great fight."

FRED HUTCHINSON 10-GAME WINNER FOR THE BISONS

$75,000 "Wonder Boy"—Has to Go Eleven Innings to Defeat Orioles

LEAFS DEFEATED

Freddy Hutchinson, a 10-game winner today for Buffalo Bisons, really has to work for his victories now, in contrast to the "shoo-ins" he had earlier in the International League baseball season.

The $75,000 "wonder boy" of Detroit Tigers started the campaign with four straight wins in which his mates backed him up with an average of 16 hits a game. The herd collected only three hits for their ace in two straight games.

Last night Hutchinson was extended to 11 innings before the Bisons pushed across the winning run to defeat Baltimore Orioles, 5-4.

Third baseman Bob Boken saved the day for Buffalo with some fancy aid. He hit a two-run homer in the eighth to tie the score at 4-4 and then scored the winning tally after opening the 11th-inning with a single.

Newark Bears increased their league lead to 4 1-2 games over the second-place Rochester Red Wings, defeating Toronto 3-1 while the Wings were losing their third straight game to Jersey City 5-2. Blank pitching turned in a fourhit pitching job for the Bears te Bill Beckmann while the evening in one run and scoring another on a single and a double. Beckmann's lone run was a homer by Al Rubeling in the seventh.

A late assault on Clem Dreisewerd who blanked them with two hits until the sixth, gave Jersey City Giants a clean sweep of the series with Rochester.

Rain washed out the Montreal-Syracuse game.

GOSSIP AND COMMENT

Maybe a little hockey chatter at this time might tend to cool us off, with so much torrid weather resulting in the general populace swelteringly along the main stem.

Earlier in the week W. G. O'Connor, former Baltimore, Ont., manager dropped into the sports department to enquire the possibilities of hockey in Belleville. Mr. O'Connor was recently moved to Belleville by the Canadian National Railways and has taken up residence in this city. He has an 18-year-old son, Clifford O'Connor, who played hockey with the Saskatoon Quakers, Mr. O'Connor informed us. "Cliff is employed as lineman on the telephone system and has been with them nearly two years. He'd like to get back into hockey," explained Mr. O'Connor, who added his son would be 19, stands six, feet tall and weighs 174 pounds. He plays on the defence.

Bobby Ray Smith, who was with the champion Kingston "Combines" last winter, and Gene La Bonne, former Cornwall Flyer left-winger, have taken up residence in Belleville and are employed at the Reliance Aircraft Company, Secretary Bill Ray recently informed us that tentative plans are under way to form a tennis and hockey player dekove, between B. Bate and Tubby Gore were already being considered, these gentlemen the three are sewers of last season's Reliance sextette on one line, "Smith is a right-winger and La Bonne from centre from the opposite boards, which should mean a formidable attack play-making centreman to place markers behind the opposition's suggested Secretary Sedon, as he was formerly called Reno Secretary was also in town. However, some defence strength is needed to supplement Jack Smith or Johnnie Hamilton and Harry McCreary, as "Twela" Halbay may be on the disc" for future hockey pick-chasing duties. Then there is remote chance Johnnie Hamilton may migrate to Belleville, however the chance we hope is very remote.

The occasion was an opening-day luncheon in honor of the Belleville Maroons. C. H. McFayden club president, was introduced to the players and asking them to treat the home towns. On discovering President Jackman, of Peterborough, from Chicago, McFayden become curious as to the possibilities of a major league team.

Are you with the Cubs or the White Sox?" smiled McFayden.

"I'm with the Cubs but I like the White Sox, I wouldn't be here," said Fred gruly.

Wednesday has become of all the rookies that bloomed in the spring! With the major league schedule at the one-third mark there are only eleven left as regulars with the major league clubs, which doesn't speak any too well for the optimistic standards of 1940. For instance in the National League only two rookies stay in on a daily basis against all kinds of pitching are: Clyde McCullough, late Bridgeport and Bob Sturgeon of the Cubs; Nick Etten, who is with the Phillies; Frank Crespi of the Cardinals and Peter Reiser of the Dodgers, if you want to call Pete a rookie. Reiser got 52 hits in 146 league games in 1940, more than one-third of an average year's output to establish himself. In the American League the list is even shorter. Only Jim Pruett of the Johnny Sturm at first base; the Athletics have Pete Suder at the hot corner; the Browns are going along with Johnny Lucadello at second and the Tigers have the talented Pat Mullin patrolling the centre-field' territory for them. There may be others but these are the best of the lot and the lineup too often to earn a rating as regulars.

It's really too bad there aren't more softball teams the calibre of the Stephens-Adamson squad in the City League. Trailing badly in the cellar slot and having won but one game in seven, the SACO team has more reserves sitting on the bench than any other squad in the loop. The boys are playing the game purely for the fun and recreation they derive out of the contest, we say—"hats off to Eddie Ehlzer's SACO nine."

Last night they absorbed a really bad 16 to 4 shellacking at the hands of the Cementmen and really came up smiling, which is the true essence of sport. Bubby Gaulin's OC Point gang were hot with the hickory last night while Stan "Ding" Luffman pitched his first full game of the year, despite the fact he developed a charlie-horse in his left leg. The win elevated the Cementmen into second place, their rightful position.

Irish Billy Conn, Pittsburgh's favourite son, was just coolly seven minutes away from the world's heavyweight crown last night at the Polo Grounds. For as even dozen rounds the youthful and game lighter Conn gave Louis his toughest fight since he has been champ. The crafty rapier-like flats were consistently in Louis' face or playing a tattoo on his body but he never in once too often and the awful tell was heard in the 13th. Only a few scant moments before a crowd of 45,000 fans wild as they saw Louis on the apparent verge of defeat as Conn carried the 11th and 12th rounds by large margins, Louis' cries that "Black Devastator" moved in, the hill and dale boys from the depths of the boxing world but some of the experts recently said he was through.
